Poetry.

My Husband and Tobacco.

He sits in his chair from morning till night
'Tis smoke, chew, smoke,
He chews as chews his pipe to light,
Goes puffing and chewing with all his might,
Till the hour of sleep. 'Tis his delight
To smoke, chew, smoke.

The quid goes in when the pipe goes out,
'Tis chew, chew, chew,
Now, a cloud of smoke pours from his throat.
Then his mouth sends a constant stream afloat,
Sufficient to carry a mill or boat,
'Tis chew, chew, chew,

He sits all day in a smoke or fog,
'Tis puff, puff, puff,
He growls at his wife, the cat and the dog,
He frowns with filth the carpet and rug,
And his only answer when I give him a jog,
Is puff, puff, puff.

The house all over from end to end,
Is smoke, smoke, smoke;
In whatever room my way I wend,
I'll take his old clothes to patch or mend,
Ungrateful perfumes will ever ascend,
Of smoke, smoke, smoke.

At home or abroad, afar or near,
'Tis smoke, chew, smoke,
His mouth is stuffed from ear to ear,
Or puffing the stump of a pipe so dear,
And his days will end, I verily fear,
In smoke, smoke, smoke.

Young ladies, beware! live single indeed,
Ere you marry a man who uses "the weed!"
Better that husbands you ever should lack, O.
Than marry a "husband that uses tobacco."

QUEBEC, April 11.

It is pretty well known here that John A. has made certain overtures to Mr. Brown with a view to defeat the present Government, and has even agreed to concede Representation by Population, it is said, if the member for South Oxford will lend his influence to break up the Government. Mr. Brown has indignantly rejected all terms with the old coalitions, and is disposed to give the present ministry a general support. He will certainly endorse their policy in everything but representation and the school bill. If the Tories imagine they can fool Mr. Brown into a false position, they will soon find out their mistake. He can have no common sympathy with them; he has been at enmity with them ever since he entered public life. They have abused him, traduced his character, and tried to crush him as a politician. That they did not succeed is not due to any want of effort, but to want of ability. He has withstood their machinations and defined their malice. Yet the leader of the Tory party, despairing in being able to turn out the Administration themselves and by lawful means, is endeavouring to procure the powerful co-operation of the Globe and Mr. Brown. The member for Kingston has placed himself in a humiliating position by his overtures, which are not very likely, to be entertained. When Mr. Brown forms a coalition with John A. and the Tories, the sun may be expected to stand still in the heavens and the St. Lawrence flow over the Rocky Mountains.

John A.'s dinner was a failure. The only members of Parliament who accepted invitations were Carling, Benjamin, Anderson, and Morton. There is something really funny in making a big gun out of Anderson, who never made a speech in his life, and, judging by appearances, will be innocent of anything of the kind till the end of his days. One statement made by John A. was an extraordinary one. He is reported to have said that the militia bill introduced by himself and colleagues was not more expensive than the present system. A man who is capable of uttering such a falsehood would not stop at anything. What are the facts? The bill of last year would have cost the country eight or nine hundred thousand dollars a-year; while the present system cost only $85,000, according to the Public Accounts. So much for John A.'s veracity; and yet he is the leader of the Tories, and has the effrontery to ask Mr. Brown to join to turn out the Government!—Times.

Gunnery Experiments at Shoeburyness.

A series of very interesting experiments with Withworth, Armstrong and Lynall Thomas guns, against various thicknesses of armour plates, were tried on Tuesday at Shoeburyness. The target was altogether stronger and made of finer iron than any yet experimented upon. The plates were of three different thicknesses upon the target, the upper plate being 5½ in. thick, the middle one 7½, and the lowest 6½ in. The target was about 12 ft. square, and for about half of its breadth the plates were backed with teak planking, varying in thickness slightly from 9 to 6½ ins. behind the thickest plate, so as to allow the face of the target to be plain. The other half of the target was left entirely without backing, in order to test the value of this timber support, which, it will be remembered, is in the Warrior and Achilles 18 inches thick, and in Minotaur only nine. The plates were bolted on to the skin by 2-inch bolts, fastened with screw nuts, the large heads of which were in this instance, protected from the great concussion by three washers of gutta percha and one of lead. The skin was of the usual thickness, 1-inch, behind the thinner plates, but it was made two inches thick to support the heavy 7½ inch armour plate. The range at which all guns were fired was 200 yards. The practice commenced with shots fired to try the plates, and ascertain the comparative effect of 68-pound shot and the same weight of shot sent from the gun. In this way three shots from the 68-pounder service gun, with 16lb of powder, were fired producing the usual dents in the plates. The three shots which followed, and produced precisely the same effect, were fired from Sir W. Armstrong's 110-pounder service gun, using steel shot, as prepared by the Ordnance select committee, the charge being 16lb of gunpowder. The projectiles from the Armstrong 300-pounder muzzle-loader rifle gun, weighing twelve tons, with a steel shot of 300lbs and a charge of 40lb of powder. This struck the saddle and thickest plate right in the centre, and almost in the bolt's eye, producing a large dent of three inches in depth, and slightly cracking the rib behind. The velocity, as given by Mayer's ballistic apparatus, was 1,200 feet per second. The same gun was sent first with a 300lb steel shell, containing a bursting charge of 11lb. It struck the 5½-inch plate at the left corner, pierced it, and burst in the wooden backing, cracking the skin, and blasting three or four strong ribs; besides knocking the heads off some rivets and breaking off one bolt. The wood was set on fire also. No part of the shell, however, had come through into the ship, so to speak, neither was there many pieces of the skin scattered about the general shaking of the whole mass, however, was evidently considerable, and quite enough to settle the fate of the Minotaur in the face of such a weapon. The velocity of this shot was given as 1,210 feet per second. The Wetherwith gun was now tried with a 140lb shell of the description used in former experiments in Norway near last, with a charge of 25lb; it penetrated the 5½-inch plate about four inches to the right of the hole made by the Armstrong shell and burst in the wood, but without getting through the skin. The noticeable point in this experiment was that the smaller and lighter gun, with half the weight of shot and powder, did almost an equal amount of mischief. The bursting charge of this shell was 5½lb. It was this gun which sent its shot through the 5-inch plate and timber backing at 600 yards range. Mr. Lynall Thomas' monster gun was now to be tried. The gun was loaded with a solid projectile, eighteen inches long having three spiral grooves on it to fit corresponding rifles in the bore, and weighing 370lb, with a charge of 50lb of powder. This time the target was bit at the junction of the 7½ and 6½ inch plates, a large dent of 3½ inches deep was made, and the plates were considerably cracked, but nothing went through. The shot rebounded about 25 yards, and when fished out of the ditch was found to be "set up" several inches, so that it looked like a huge cauliflower, the stalk being the end which did not strike the target. The velocity of this shot was given as 1,300 feet per second. A solid tempered steel shot of 328 lb was then fired from this gun with a 50lb charge; it penetrated the 7½ inch plate to the wood, just at its lower border, and grazed the 6½ inch plate; the plate was cracked, as well as the skin, bolt was broken, and the ranger was knocked completely off, as to the ground. The velocity of this shot was given as 1,250 feet per second. The last shot was fired from Sir William Armstrong's rifled shot gun, with a 550lb spherical smooth shot, with a 65lb charge. This struck the 7½ inch plate where there was no backing, cracking it widely, starting the bolts, and penetrating to 3½ inches. It shook the whole structure, and bulged the plate extensively, but did not get through the plate. The general opinion seemed to be that the target had been subjected to so much pounding, that the late experiments were not worth much, and that it would have been much more satisfactory if Sir William Armstrong's heavy shell had been fired at the thickest, instead of the thinnest plate. Another point appeared to be that no thickness of armour a ship could carry would be proof against these heavy steel shot.

MEETING OF A LADIES COMMITTEE.—At a leading seaport town very recently, a committee of ladies met to decide upon the disposal of certain funds raised with the object of presenting a bridal gift to the Princess Alexandra. Nearly forty ladies attended the first meeting, at which it was resolved, after no little debate and much opposition, to have a casket decorated with local views, made out of some old local relics. At the next meeting the lady who had presided at the first, and who had a right to preside on every occasion, was passed over, and another lady moved into the chair. It is only justice to say that, unlike others, she behaved with dignity. The first resolution adopted, after much wrangling, was to rescind the one previously passed in favor of the casket. The debate then ran high, most of the ladies having different opinions as to the suitable article for a present. Amidst the confusion that prevailed, the words 'bracelet,' 'cross,' 'diadem,' 'cradle,' 'stomacher,' could be heard rising above the din. The strife at length subsides into single combats, and the exclamations, 'stop, you fool,' and 'you're another,' 'what do you know of diamonds—except Irish ones?' 'of course, your taste is better than any one else's!' were freely bandied about, till, at length a lady, after weeping bitterly, was carried fainting out of the room. But the fracas did not end here. An orphan M. P. who had taken an active part in the affair, and who advocated the selection of a diamond cross, which was then in the possession of a local jeweller, was attacked fiercely and accused of having an interest in the sale of the article, in fact that he wanted to make a profit out of the transaction. But the cross party, some of whom had strengthened their clique by bringing their daughters to vote, carried the day, and the resolution was adopted. We believe the jewel is very similar to that presented to the Princess by the ladies of Liverpool.—Liverpool Albion.

FATAL ACCIDENT AT SEA.—When the barque Abbey Craig, of Ayr, which sailed from Troon for Matanzie, Cuba, on the 21st October last, had been a fortnight out an accident occurred to one of her apprentices, which unhappily ended fatally. It appears that a lad named Thomas Shaw, about 17 years of age, son of Mr. Hugh Shaw, joiner, Ayr, had been ordered aloft. When on the yards of the fore-mast, he missed his footing and fell on deck. When taken up, the poor fellow was dreadfully hurt, and died in four hours after the accident to great pain. Deceased was of a most obliging disposition, and was much respected on board ship.

The Separate School Bill.

The Rev. Dr. Ryerson, the Superintendent of Common Schools for Upper Canada, has issued a pamphlet containing the provisions of Scott's bill with the old law, and recommending the former to the country. The Dr. is an artful old Dodger. Though the founder of the Common School System, we believe he would willingly destroy it, if by doing so he might secure personally some "casual advantages" under cover of a "ministerial smile." In Quebec he urged the opponents of Scott's School Bill to vote for it, as the ground that the objectionable provisions would prove impracticable, and that the bill itself contained the elements of its own destruction. To those who desired the bill he promised his support, on the understanding that the would assist him in turn to destroy the National University and erect on its ruins sectarian institutions. Separate Schools have never been granted as a right, and are undeniably distasteful to the majority of Upper Canadians. The principle has been granted with such restrictions as will, while affording relief, in cases of hardship, protect the Common School System from serious danger. Such a quid not be the case with reference to the National University and college if Dr. Ryerson's insidious attempts are triumphant. The sectarian element will become predominant, and the evils which result from a connection between Church and State be inevitably realized.

War and Human Life.

It is a noteworthy fact, and one fully borne out in statistics, that great wars may be continued long and prove very destructive of human life, and yet produce hardly a perceptible effect in checking the increase of population. Take the average of life of soldiers in the field, and it will come up pretty nearly to the average of life of a like number of men in peace. Death by battle only takes the place of death in some other form—and the soldier has lived to do his part in carrying on the great law of natural increase. But this is the case only when mixed men are put into service. By the southern system the candle of life is lighted at both ends, and the people that are then exhausted will have to dwindle if not extinct.—N. Y. Times.

Oil.—The Free Press is informed that the Oil Spring's wells are commenced to yield as generously as ever. On Wednesday last, Mr. Monaghan pumped nearly forty barrels of oil out of a well which was lately abandoned as "dry," unprofitable. Bradley's well is now yielding about fifteen barrels of oil each day and great improvement.

Both, by a little reason.—Apropos of the young English lady married to Marshal Canrobert recently married to the Flora Macdonald, of N. Lecompte in the Monde Illustre, relates the following anecdote:—At the close of the Crimean war a ball was given at the residence of M. Magne then Minister of Finance. The marshal, on entering one of the rooms, saw a young and charming person, dressed in pink and crowned with flowers, who came up to him and invited him for the next dance. "Monsieur le Marechal," she said, "I have a design to regard me as a Russian, and make me—dance!" "Impossible, Mademoiselle," replied the marshal, "there is an armistice." "And a armour for my boldness, I hope." The warrior offered his arm and led her to her place, but on the way he met a young officer. "Here, mon ami," said the marshal, "take your place in the quadrille with this lady, and remember that this night a marshal of France has condescended to—lieutenant."

Extent of Port Hudson.—Port Hudson is itself of considerable importance, but strategetically is of considerable value to both the union and rebel causes. It is a post village of East Feliciana parish, Louisiana, and is situated on the left bank of the Mississippi river, at the terminus of the Clinton and Port Hudson Railroad. It is situated about twenty-five miles north of Baton Rouge, and previous to the rebellion was a place of very active business by way of the Mississippi river. The annual shipments of cotton were estimated at 80,000 bales, in addition to about 2,000 hogsheads of sugar. The population in 1860 was but three hundred; but doubtless is now much less if we exclude the surround camp-followers.

The wife of Mr. John McCormack, 3rd concession of Beach, hung herself in her husband's barn, on Monday last. No reason for the suicide is given.

An infant son of Mr. George Scott, of the village of Haldimand, was scalded to death on Tuesday last by the accidental upsetting of a kettle of boiling water.

The Hon. Rollin Smith, an elected member of the Upper House, died of apoplexy at his residence, in Sherbrooke, a few days ago. He was an American by birth.

The Hessian fly is in large numbers in some places. Some cases in Niles, Cayuga.—Silk is supposed to have struck the rock bottom and undoubtedly sunk.

HOUSE OF LORDS'S DEBATE AND THE "ALABAMA" AFFAIR.

Tuesday, March 24th, 1863.

Lord Palmerston, [illegible] preliminary remarks about Poland, alluded [illegible] to the much more important and practical question raised by the honorable friend the member for Bradford. I cannot but express my regret at the fate of the American [illegible] Government. [Hear, hear.] There is no concealing the fact, and there is no use in disguising it, that whatever may be the opinion [illegible] in or out of office in the United States, their hostility is directed [illegible] against England.—[Hear, hear.]—and instead of speaking what is American [illegible] political capital." That is [illegible], of course, which we must deplore. [Hear, hear.] As long as it is confined to their internal affairs, we can only [illegible], being rather a dangerous game, will also be carried further than is intended. When a government or large party excite the passions of one nation against another, especially if there is no just cause it is [illegible] that such a course will [illegible] to engender friendly feelings between the two countries. We understand, however, the object of those proceedings in the present instance, and therefore for the first time the intention which might otherwise be entertained. But if this my [illegible] for the purpose of pressing on Her Majesty's Government to do something which may be necessary in the [illegible] dignity of the country, in the way of offering [illegible] here for the purpose of pressing another Government, then all I can say is that such a course is not like to accomplish its purpose. [Hear, hear.] I may touch [illegible] that the [illegible] more particularly that of the hon. member for Birmingham, are calculated to encourage those expectations which I think are totally unfounded on the part of the American Government. [Hear, hear.] I should have hoped that gentlemen bringing this question before the House would rather have tried to allay the irritation instead of making out, as they endeavour to do, that the Americans have reason to blame England and the English Government. [Hear, hear.] My hon. and learned friend the Solicitor General, in the admirable speech which we all listened to with the greatest delight—[Hear, hear.]—[illegible] contrasted independship that the Americans have no cause of complaint against us. He has shown that the British Government have done, on the report of two successive ministers here, everything which the laws of the country enabled them to do. I can easily understand that as the United States, where the civil war has produced so much agitation, and where the course of practice has been to set aside the law, more have been led to forget, in a great degree, the obligations of the law, and are not disposed to give that weight which is due to our argument—that we cannot go beyond what the law prescribes and authorizes. Yet I think that the House at least will see that the statement of my hon. and learned friend proves that we have, in enforcing the Foreign Enlistment Act, done all that the law enabled or permitted us to do. (Hear, hear.) Hon. members have argued as if the seizure of a vessel were equivalent to its condemnation. They ask, "Why did you not seize the Alabama when you were told that it was known and believed that it was intended for warlike purposes on the part of the Confederates?" Now, in the first place, you cannot seize a vessel under the Foreign Enlistment Act unless you have evidence on oath confirming your suspicion. That evidence was wanting in this case. The American minister came to my noble friend, the Foreign Secretary and said, "I tell you this and I tell you that, I'm sure of this and I'm sure of that!" but when he was asked for positive evidence on oath, which was the only oath on which we could ground my proceedings, he said that the information was furnished to him confidentially, that he could not give testimony on oath, but that he ought nevertheless to act on his suspicions. What would happen if we were to act in that way? When a vessel is seized unjustly and without good grounds, there is a process of law to come afterwards (hear, hear,) and the Government may be condemned in heavy costs, and damages. Why are we to undertake an illegal measure which may lead to these consequences, simply to please the agent of a foreign Government? (Hear, hear.) I say if there was any fault, it was on the part of those who called on us to do a certain act, and yet withheld the groundwork on which that act could alone be based, (Hear, hear.) I have myself great doubts whether, if we had seized the Alabama," we should not have been liable to considerable damages. It is generally known that she sailed from this country unarmed and not properly fitted out for war, and that she received her armament, equipment, and crew in a foreign port. Therefore, whatever suspicions we may have had —and they were well founded, as it afterwards turned out—as to the intended destination of the vessel, her condition at that time would not have justified a seizure. (Hear, hear.) I am aware the House that Her Majesty's Government have no disposition to enforce the provisions of the Foreign Enlistment Act. The hon. member for Birmingham represents us as [illegible] Lighting a cold and unfriendly neutrality. I do not know what the meaning of those terms may be; but they appear to me to be a contradiction in themselves. (Hear, hear.) If neutrality is more than friendly towards one party, it is something very different to [illegible] the other (hear, hear, and cheers) and amounts to hostility to one of the parties, is meant by neutrality as between contending parties. [illegible] neutrality is more or cold, [illegible] friendly. It is always and honest. (Hear, hear.) I can assure my hon. and learned friend the House that whenever it is necessary to enforce the enlistment Act [illegible] and vessels, we shall not be found wanting in the performance of our duty. [illegible] the [illegible] press which we have seen [illegible] the [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

...ng of publicity than does the press, whether the opposition of the press has been based on the principle of doubt or of fear. Publicity, that of itself will always go far to correct abuses, and private interests will always suffer when the greater majority go wrong within a month after being let loose in society and meeting the other sex. The [illegible] intended to keep them strictly [illegible] commercial enclosure scrupulously observes the very principle designed to be avoided. We may repeat that it is impossible [illegible] and girls [illegible] and the same [illegible] and girls. But the [illegible] girls Companies are [illegible] by the presence of boys. In the Normal Seminary at Glasgow the [illegible] have resulted from the most marked nature. Boys and girls—from the age of two or three years to that of fourteen or fifteen—have been caused to be taught about rooms, galleries and play grounds without impropriety, and they never appeared except at meals [illegible]

[illegible] system in the great metropolis, [illegible] established in New York. It is a question that demands serious consideration on the part of those who superintend the educational interests of old cities. Bright children, color, are all those pre-disqualifying that do not affect the mind's vision, its physical, intellectual and moral culture, and can not, with justice to scholars, be considered in their classification. We ask your thoughtful attention to the proposition that mental equality only should be made the basis of gradation in our public schools.—New York State Teacher.

Long Leases to Teachers.

To Daniel Thurston:

Gentleman,—Give your Teachers a longer lease of their Schools. What is the chief privilege of the Canada of yours? Is it not that it is a good country for the working man? that the farmer is the sole owner of the land he tills, that the tenant is the sole proprietor of the house he occupies, that the thrifty labourer can acquire real estate which shall belong to him and his heirs after him? Is not this the distinguishing privilege of Canada? In the old country the churches are better, the schools are better, the roads are better and the climate is better. But in the old country the farmers used to be tenants at will, and their rents were raised on them whenever they began to improve the land; and tenants were turned out of their houses whenever they could not pay the highest rent that was offered for them, and consequently the land was miserably cultivated, and the houses ruined, as you may see still in poor Ireland and the Highlands of Scotland.—The farmers at last extorted leases of nineteen years from the landlords, and how rapidly the country immediately improved, catching at once the farmer and the owner, and if you wish to see the full benefit of this go to the island of Jersey, where all the land is held in perpetual lease at an average of about twenty-five dollars ($25) an acre currently; people take pleasure in improving and adorning what they can call their own, and enjoy as long as they please.

Gentlemen, if you wish to see your Schools improved give your Teachers a longer lease. A Teacher has no heart to do any thing for a School from which he may be ousted for the very reason that he ought to be retained. Remember the beautiful words, "To others do, the land is not severe, what to thyself thou wishest to be done." Are you afraid of bad Teachers? Are the farmers less industrious now because they have longer leases? And why not? Because they have an interest in their labours. Give the Teachers the same interest in improving your Schools, and they will do so. Let enough for the present.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—I have heard a great deal said about this new Flouring Mill of Mr. Martyn's, and on Friday last I thought I would step in and see for myself. When I entered it I stood for a few minutes and took a general survey of all on the first floor, which appeared to me, more than any thing else, as the finest clock-work—every thing went so smooth and without that rumbling noise which generally is heard in all Mills of similar character. I then stepped down stairs to see the Machinery below, which was equal, if not superior, to what I first saw when I entered the Mill. I then went up to the third story, and on reaching there I was much delighted to see every thing in that department in such fine style and good order; I mused it seemed to me that every thing that could be done was done to make the establishment one of the very best Flouring Mills in the Province. I then examined the bolting department, and I must say they are constructed in a manner much superior to any I have ever saw before, and all for the real benefit of the farmer or merchant who may favor the enterprising owner with their custom. I then examined the flour, and found it to be of the very best quality. I next purchased a barrel, and we have tried it and proved it to be a much superior article to anything we have ever used before. I shall close these few remarks, and at the same time recommend the merchants and farmers to give Mr. Martyn's New Flouring Mill a trial.

CONSULT

THE OLD ENGLISH PHYSICIANS

FOR

ASTHMA, INCIPIENT CONSUMPTION, Infirmities of Youth and Old Age, &c., &c.

NO MERCURY USED.

Dr. Amos & Son,

48 EAST GENESSEE STREET,
BUFFALO, N. Y.

ARE the only Physicians in the State who are members of the Royal College of Surgeons, London.

May be consulted from 8 o'clock in the morning, until 9 at night, in every stage and symptom of Disease.

The treatment they adopt is the result of upwards of thirty years' extensive and successful practice in London.

A Most Scientific Invention

An instrument for the cure of general Debility, or Nocturnal Emissions, more properly known as Seminal Weakness, &c. These complaints can be permanently cured in from 60 can days to two months by the use of this instrument, unless used conjointly with medicines.

Dr. AMOS & SON, in order to satisfy the most skeptical as to the merits of this instrument, pledge themselves that in any instances where it may prove unsatisfactory after a fair trial, the money will be refunded by returning the instrument in good order. Price Ten Dollars, by mail or express.

YOUNG MEN TAKE PARTICULAR NOTICE

Those who have injured themselves by a certain practice indulged in when alone—a habit frequently learned from evil companions, or at school, the effects of which are nightly felt even when asleep, and if not cured, renders marriage impossible and destroys both mind and body, should apply immediately. Self abuse is one of the most formidable enemies to health, for nothing else in the dire catalogue of human diseases causes so destructive a drain upon the human system, drawing its thousands of victims through a few years of suffering down to an untimely grave. It destroys the nervous system rapidly, wastes away the energies of life, causes mental derangement, prevents the proper development of the system, disqualifies for marriage, society, business, and all earthly happiness, and leaves the sufferer wrecked in body and mind, predisposed to consumption and a train of evils more to be dreaded than death itself.

PERSONS IN ANY PART OF THE WORLD may be successfully treated by forwarding a correct detail of their cases.

$10,000 WORTH OF GROCERIES,

FOR SALE.

THE subscriber has opened a new store in the dwelling lately occupied by Mr. McDougall, where he intends for sale a large and well selected assortment of GROCERIES, consisting in part of

SUGARS OF ALL KINDS,

Tea, Coffee, Spice, Rice, Tobacco,

COAL OIL LAMPS,

OF THE MOST IMPROVED KINDS,

COAL OIL, AMERICAN STONE WARE,

OF EVERY VARIETY,

And other articles too numerous to mention.

Well knowing [after an experience of twenty years in the trade] that the "nimble pence is better than the slow shilling," he will sell for small profits, having bought his stock with CASH in his confidence that he can sell goods for ready pay cheaper than any other merchant in Peterboro'. As the goods offered for sale by the undersigned are all paid for, he does not confine himself to selling them "cheap for cash only," he will cheerfully exchange them for all kinds of country produce, at cash prices. The subscriber does not attempt to enumerate all the articles which he offers for sale.

☞ Call and examine the goods and see how cheap the "yankee" can sell them.

THE MAGIC TIME OBSERVER!

The Perfection of Mechanism.

BEING A HUNTING AND OPEN FACE, or Lady or Gentleman's Watch combined. One of the prettiest, most convenient, and decidedly the most cheapest timepieces for general and reliable use, ever offered. It has within it and connected with its machinery, its own winding attachment, rendering a key entirely unnecessary. The cases of this Watch are composed of two metals, the outer one being fine 16 carrot gold. It has the improved ruby action lever movement, and is warranted as accurate timepiece. Price, superbly engraved, per case of a half dozen, $204.00. Sample Watches, in neat morocco boxes, for those proposing to buy for sale or family, $35, sent by express with bill payable on delivery. Soldiers must remit payment in advance, as we cannot collect from those in the army. Address

ILLUSTRATED SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN!

The Best Mechanical Paper in the World.

EIGHTEENTH YEAR.

VOLUME VIII—NEW SERIES.

A NEW VOLUME of this popular Journal commences on the first of January. It is published weekly, each number containing sixteen pages of useful information, and from five to ten original engravings of new inventions and discoveries, all of which are prepared already for its columns.

TO THE MECHANIC & MANUFACTURER.

No person engaged in any of the manufacturing pursuits should think of "doing without" the Scientific American. It costs but six cents per week; every number contains from six to ten engravings of new machines and inventions which cannot be found in any other publication.

TO THE INVENTOR.

The Scientific American is indispensable to every inventor, as it not only contains illustrated descriptions of nearly all the best inventions as they come out, but each number contains an Official List of the Claims of all the Patents issued from the United States Patent Office during the week previous; thus giving a correct history of the progress of inventions in this country. We are also receiving, every week, the best scientific journals of Great Britain, France and Germany: thus placing in our possession all that is transpiring in mechanical science and art in these old countries. We continue to transfer to our columns copious extracts from these journals whatever we may deem of interest to our readers.

A pamphlet of instruction as to the best mode of obtaining Letters Patent on new inventions is furnished gratis on application.

Messrs. Munn & Co. have acted as Patent Solicitors for more than seventeen years, in connection with the publication of the Scientific American, and they refer to 10,000 patentees for whom they have done business.

No charge is made for examining sketches and models of new inventions or for advising inventors as to their patentability.

CHEMISTS, ARCHITECTS, MILLWRIGHTS & FARMERS.

The Scientific American will be found a most useful journal to them. All the new discoveries in the science of chemistry are given in its columns, and the interest of the architect and carpenter are not overlooked; all the new inventions and discoveries appertaining to them pursuits being published from week to week. Useful and practical information pertaining to the interests of millwrights and mill-owners will be found in the Scientific American, which information they can not possibly obtain from any other source. Subjects in which farmers are interested will be found discussed in the Scientific American; most of the improvements in agricultural implements being illustrated in its columns.

TERMS.—To mail subscribers: Three Dollars a year, or One Dollar for four months.—The volumes commence on the first of January and July. Specimen copies will be sent gratis to any part of the country.

Postage stamps and Canadian money or Post-office stamps taken at par for subscriptions. Canadian subscribers will please to remit twenty-five cents extra on each year's subscription to prepay postage.

THE WORLD.

IN ITS TWENTY-FIRST YEAR.

Daily, Tri-Weekly and Semi-Weekly NEWSPAPER.

IN soliciting for another year a continuance of the favors which in so short a period has given to the World its present vast circulation, it is unnecessary to promise, because impossible, any increase of energy, devotion, honest patronage and influence equalled by other journals only after the effort of many years—we resolve to one and each new subscriber the publisher shall on labor any exertions will be spared to make the World what it aims to be,

The Best Newspaper in America.

In politics, now as ever, the World is independent but never neutral. Its only creed is a political one—of right.

The Union, the Constitution, and the Laws and Freedom of the Press, of Political Discussion and Action are the corner stones.

The political events of the past year have notably demonstrated the need of an able, fearless outspoken, first-class

Conservative Journal,

in the commercial metropolis of the country, which shall give constant, bold and vigorous utterance to the conservative sentiment of the best men and the honest masses of the nation.

Opposing every enemy to

The Union,

whether armed in rebellion at the South, or insidiously planting the seeds of disunion at the North.

Opposing every violation of the Constitution,

the only bond and hope of union, the only ground upon which we can exhort and compel the allegiance of the South:

Opposing every infraction of

The Laws,

in high places or low, and upholding that obedience to Law in service to God:

Opposing every violation of the

Freedom of Speech, of the Press, of Political Discussion and Action, by whomsoever those violations are committed, whether by the executive in its

Arbitrary, Illegal, and Unjust Arrests,

its refusal of the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus, its denial of the rights and liberties of citizens, its arrest without warrant, its imprisonments without trial, its abrogation of state and federal laws, its illegal proclamation of an empty emancipation, or whether those violations are committed by the party in power, its orators and its presses advocating measures which must sunder the Union for the sake of destroying slavery, and denouncing treason against all their political opponents.

Loyal to the government always, it will give to the administration a hearty and vigorous support whenever and wherever the administration itself is loyal to the bond, the principles, and the purity of the government.

The World will oppose all compromises which would barter away or divide the Union, for which alone the North is waging war; it will oppose peace itself, till the success of the war sees the permanence of peace, and will urge the prosecution of the war with an economy which has not hitherto governed its expenditures, and a vigor which the nation during a year has prayed for in vain.

The same care will be exercised over the columns of the World to exclude everything which could offend a pure, Christian morality, and recourse will always be had to the same high principles as will be found to guard its columns as to guide its judgment of men and events.

All the News

will be found in the columns of the World from the various departments of human activity,

Political, Agricultural, and Commercial, as well as in Literature, Science and Art.

New Publications, Inventions, Discoveries, and Works of Art will receive the same careful and thorough attention.

The latest and most important news from Europe, Asia, Africa, South America, and the United States will be found in the columns of the World, from day to day, and from month to month.

In the Weekly and Semi-Weekly editions of the World special large space will be given to

Agriculture,

and to all departments of

Manufacturing and Mechanical Industry.

The Weekly World will contain an admirable serial story during the current year

THE DAILY WORLD.

The Daily World is the most complete Commercial and News Paper published in America. Besides as full telegraph news, war correspondence, foreign correspondence, &c., as any two cent daily, it contains also much fuller commercial news. Its Ship News, Produce, and Cattle Market reports, Foreign and Domestic Importation, Stock Lists, and Commercial news, no business man can do without.

TERMS (INVARIABLE IN ADVANCE):

One copy for one year, $8.
Four copies for one year, $30.
Any club of ten copies an extra copy will be sent for one year.

THE SEMI-WEEKLY WORLD.

The Semi-Weekly World is a large quarto sheet, same size as the daily, containing all its news, correspondence, miscellany and editorials, its commercial and market news, and entertaining selections and miscellaneous reading. Its full market and provision reports make it highly valuable to every farmer.

EMPLOYMENT.

THE Undersigned has, for several years past, A been engaged in a business, which has yielded him at the rate of three thousand dollars per annum, and is now willing to teach it to others. The business is of a highly useful and general character, adapted both to cities and villages, and one that any person of ordinary capacity, young or old, male or female, can acquire with a few hours' practice, and by which they can secure a very handsome income. Several young ladies who have received instructions from me, have in New York State and Pennsylvania, are earning upwards of $15 per week by it, and there is no reason why any one else should not do the same. I will, even, (in order to prove the business to be a profitable one,) teach it to a highly useful and general character, adapted both to cities and villages, and one that any person of ordinary capacity, young or old, male or female, can acquire with a few hours' practice, and by which they can secure a very handsome income. Several young ladies who have received instructions from me, have in New York State and Pennsylvania, are earning upwards of $15 per week by it, and there is no reason why any one else should not do the same. I will, even, (in order to prove the business to be a profitable one,) teach it to a highly useful business, and guarantee that it is perfectly respectable. Gentlemen and ladies of leisure who would like to learn the business for their own amusement or pleasure, will find the practice of it a pleasant pastime, and one that they will take great interest in. On receipt of $1, I will forward printed instructions by which any person can readily acquire the art, and these instructions will, and contain every particular relative to the carrying it on so that it will be highly profitable. The purchaser of the "printed instructions" will also be authorized to teach it to others: and I have sometimes received as high as $200, for teaching it personally to a single individual. I would state further that $3.50 or $3 will buy everything that is necessary to commence the business with, and the articles can be got almost anywhere, in city or country, or if preferred, I can furnish them. Address ALFRED T. PARSONS, No. 58 Lumbert Str., New York.

THE ORIGINAL HOWE SEWING MACHINES.

ESTABLISHED 1845—PERFECTED '62.

RECENT and important improvements have been made in the Howe Machine, rendering it now the most perfect before the public, and persons at a distance can order a Machine with the confidence of its prompt and safe delivery, and that they will be found adapted in every respect to their entire satisfaction. No more breaking needles. No more skipping stitches! No trouble in managing any person can learn to use them in a few minutes. The Howe Machine will hem, fell, tuck, quilt, cord, bind, braid, gather and sew a seam, all at the same time, in the most beautiful manner, and will do the work of ten seamstresses. The Howe Machine will stitch anything, from the finest cambric to the heaviest cloth, and even sew the eyelet holes in kid gloves. The Howe Machine will sew more and better work, with less thread, than any other machine in the world. The Howe Machine will run by hand or foot power, as may be desired. The Howe Machine will run either backward or forward, and will make a stitch alike on both sides. The Howe Machine is the only one-thread machine that makes a stitch which cannot be ripped without cutting the thread

GARIBALDI.

Confined in imprisoned! And yet the King
Are as free as they were at noon,
And a thousand dare to battle for right
The ships guess pale with terror!

Then think of the pieces of the first emperors,
From the wakening world—may come,
And a thousand [illegible] by dawn to fight,
And a thousand [illegible]

And now, at the sunset of the Freedom-seeking
They rose up into space
And stood by the side of the starry throng,
And looked God in the face.

They listened, with their regal forms
Upheld in royal might—
And heard above the chaos storms,
His sweet "Let there be light!"

The mountains crimsoned with delight,
And shook in thunder thrills;
They looked across the jeweled night,
And whispered to the hills.

And the lit'le hills, springing'ng,
Gave back an answering nod,
Then burst out into singing
Of Freedom and of God!

And Freedom took her dwelling-place
Upon the mountain fair,
And proudly, with a goddess' grace,
She rocks her eagles there.

The mountains shivered with marvel,
The pitying goddess smiled;
She saw upon their snowy breast
The picture of her child.

THY PICTURE, GARIBALDI!
Upon the hills of God!
Where tyrant monarch never reigned,
And despot never trod!

She saw its towering forehead rise,
An Alp with soulit snows;
Beneath its rainbow-arched eyes
She heard the storms repose—

The storm-winds, breathing low and deep
And whispering in their dreams,
As when a giant speaks in sleep
On most melodious themes.

Around its bearded granite mouth
She saw the fringe of pines—
The sighing pine-trees, leaning south,
And swaying toward the vines.

She saw its glorious features turned
To the sweet land of song;—
And her majestic spirit spurned
The world that wrought him wrong.

At Garibaldi's prison-bars
The wounded goddess stood—
She lifts the blood-stained "Stripes and Stars"
OVER THE THRONES OF KINGS!

She sees her glorious flag unfurled
To every Nation's breath!—
Her clarion war-cry for the World
Is "Liberty, or Death!"

Pontresina, Switzerland.

Miscellaneous.

Presence of Mind.

This extract, from a reminiscence concerning a series of murders committed some years since in France, developes a rare instance of presence of mind in woman. We will premise that the murderer was known by the fact, that, in some serious brawl or scene of murder, he had lost three fingers from one of his hands.

There lived on the outskirts of Dieppe, a widow lady by the name of Beaumaurice. She had no family, but, with one servant girl, lived in a very retired manner. The cottage in which she resided was situated about half a mile from the city—a little off from the public road.

Madame Beaumaurice had been the wife of an officer of the Guards. She was an extraordinary woman in every particular; but especially so in respect to a certain coolness of character she possessed, in the midst of danger, which, together with a large amount of moral courage, made her a very notable person. The recent murders made, perhaps, less impression on her mind than any one else in Dieppe; although it was naturally supposed the retired situation in which she lived would have caused her to be more fearful.

About 10 o'clock on the night of the 30th of April, just ten days after the murders in the Rue Grenard, Madame Beaumaurice went up into her bed-room. She was suffering from a nervous headache. She felt very sleepy and seated herself. The lamp was placed on a chest of drawers behind her. Opposite to her was a toilet table, with a cloth on it reaching to the floor. She had already commenced taking off her clothes, when, happening to look around her, she saw something that for a moment chilled her blood. It was the shadow of a man's hand on the floor. The hand had only three fingers!

She divined the truth in a moment—the assassin was there—in her house—under the toilet table. She made not the least motion or sign, but reflected two or three minutes as to the best course to be pursued.

She divined what to do, and advancing to the door, called the servant maid.

"Oh, Mary!" exclaimed she, when the girl entered the room, "do you know where Monsieur Bertard lives?"

"Yes, Madame,"

"I have to pay 5,000 francs away very early in the morning. The fact slipped my memory till just now. You will run to his house and get the money for me."

"Very well, Madame."

"I will write you a note which you will deliver to him, and he will give you back bills to the amount."

She wrote as follows:

"Mr. Bank Assignee Bertard.

"The bearer of this note, Mary Ann Lefond, the Rue Grenard No 7, is my maid. Please hand me directly with money counted out, and take this letter to be certain.

"MELINE BEAUMAURICE."

And without casting her eye otherwise upon her servant, she dismissed her on her errand. She then quickly reloaded her self and waited.

Yet she sat in the room with that dismembered villain for a whole hour. Cool and collected. She was the shadow of the hand left several times, but the murderer did not make any attempt to double from the place of concealment.

In due time the groom returned, and deceive Bertrandy was summoned, however, without a violent struggle.

I need scarcely add, that the good opinion which people of his guild was found, and to due time he was guillotined.

Ten Rules to be Observed in Making Butter.

[illegible] which requires an eye to observation, forethought and some little experience.

1. On milking clean, fast, yet gently, regularly (once a day, depends the success of the dairyman. Hot milkers should not be tolerated in a herd; better pay double the price for good ones.

2. Straining is but simple, but it should be borne in mind that two pans about half full each will produce a greater amount of cream than the same milk in but one pan; the reason of this is the greater surface.

3. Straining is quite an important feature in the way of making butter in cool weather; the cream rises much quicker, milk keeps sweet much longer, the butter is of a better color, and churns in one-half the time.

4. Skimming should always be done before the milk becomes tappered; otherwise much of the cream turns into whey and is lost.

5. Churning, whether by hand or otherwise, should occupy forty or fifty minutes.

6. Washing in cold soft water is one of its preserving qualities, and should be continued until it shows no color of the milk by the use of the ladle; very hard water is highly charged with lime, and must in a measure impart to it alkaline properties.

7. Salting is necessarily done with the best kind of ground salt; the quantity varies according to the state it is taken from the churn; if soft, more; if hard, less; always taking the taste for the surest guide.

8. First working after about twenty-four hours, is for the purpose of giving it greater compactness.

9. Second working takes place at the time of packing, and when the butter has dissolved the salt, that the brine may be worked out.

10. Packing is done with the hands or with a butter mall; and when butter is put into wooden vessels they should be soaked two or three days in strong brine before using. After each packing cover the butter with a wet cloth and put a layer of salt upon it; in this way the salt can easily be removed at any time, by simply taking hold of the edges of the cloth.

Butter made in this way will keep any length of time required.—Genesee Farmer.

Miscellaneous.

Presence of Mind.

This extract, from a reminiscence concerning a series of murders committed some years since in France, developes a rare instance of presence of mind in woman. We will premise that the murderer was known by the fact, that, in some serious brawl or scene of murder, he had lost three fingers from one of his hands.

There lived on the outskirts of Dieppe, a widow lady by the name of Beaumaurice. She had no family, but, with one servant girl, lived in a very retired manner. The cottage in which she resided was situated about half a mile from the city—a little off from the public road.

Madame Beaumaurice had been the wife of an officer of the Guards. She was an extraordinary woman in every particular; but especially so in respect to a certain coolness of character she possessed, in the midst of danger, which, together with a large amount of moral courage, made her a very notable person. The recent murders made, perhaps, less impression on her mind than any one else in Dieppe; although it was naturally supposed the retired situation in which she lived would have caused her to be more fearful.

About 10 o'clock on the night of the 30th of April, just ten days after the murders in the Rue Grenard, Madame Beaumaurice went up into her bed-room. She was suffering from a nervous headache. She felt very sleepy and seated herself. The lamp was placed on a chest of drawers behind her. Opposite to her was a toilet table, with a cloth on it reaching to the floor. She had already commenced taking off her clothes, when, happening to look around her, she saw something that for a moment chilled her blood. It was the shadow of a man's hand on the floor. The hand had only three fingers!

She divined the truth in a moment—the assassin was there—in her house—under the toilet table. She made not the least motion or sign, but reflected two or three minutes as to the best course to be pursued.

Black vs White—a Rich Scene.

At the Kent Assizes, held at Chatham, on Tuesday last, an amusing scene transpired. We quote from the Planet:

Upon the case being called Mr. Thomas Russell rose in the jury box and said that one of the jurors chosen was a colored man, and the eleven white men had agreed that they would not sit with him. He said this in behalf of the Jury, but out of no contempt for the Court, but simply stated the fact, and begged to be relieved.

Judge Richards—I know no reason why you should not in the eyes of the law act as jurymen as you have been chosen.

Mr. Russell—We do not think he is intelligent enough to act.

Judge Richards—But the law says he is, and that is sufficient.

Mr. Russell—Well then, sir, I must respectfully decline to sit as a juryman with this coloured man.

Justice Richards—Well then I shall fine you.

Mr. Russell—and if I do not pay the fine.

Justice Richards—I shall send you down below, (to Jail.)

Mr. Russell—Well. [Here Mr. Russell left the Jury Box.]

Justice Richards—Mr. Clerk what is that man's name leaving the jury box?

Mr. Clerk (feels it)—Mr. Thomas Russell, my lord.

Justice Richards—Well, then, record a fine of five pounds against Mr. Thomas Russell.

Mr. Sargeson Vernall—standing in his place in the Jury Box; my lord I am ill able to pay a fine of five pounds, but really I cannot sit here, but go to the cells. I must leave. (Here Mr. Vernall left the Jury Box.)

Justice Richards—Mr. Clerk, what is the name of that man who is now leaving the Jury Box?

Mr. Clerk—Mr. Sargeson Vernall, my lord.

Justice Richards—Record a fine of five pounds against him, too. (A pause.) Call some more Jurors to fill up the places of those who have left the box.

The Clerk then proceeded to call the names of Mr. Hugh Palmer, of Oxford, and Mr. William MacPherson, of Bothwell, who took the vacated seats and were sworn in as jurymen in the room of Mr. Russell, and Mr. Vernall, who refused to sit.

MILITARY MOVEMENTS.—We (Montreal Gazette) understand that the 45th regiment will leave Montreal about the 10th May next, for Kingston, where it will relieve the 62nd regiment which is under orders for Quebec. The 60th Rifles, now in the latter garrison, are to take the place of the 47th regiment in the city. It is stated in the London News that "the 63rd regiment is under orders to be in readiness to leave London for Kingston early in May." This, if true, would give two regiments to that garrison. On the opening of navigation the different regiments from their various depots in Great Britain will no doubt be crowded by drafts, discharges, and so forth, so that the proper strength of the several companies may not be diminished. General Lindsay is shortly expected to arrive from England to take command of the Brigades of Canada, Vice Lieut. Foster, who is about to return home to assume the command of the division of troops in London.

Putting the General through the Drill.

A few nights since the boys thought they must have some sport with Long John, who had been drinking rather too freely when the exercises of the battle. They wrote an order, and sent it to him. It was done in due form, as follows:—

Private John——is ordered to report at these headquarters for the purpose of putting the general through the drill.

Just previous to the [illegible] proceeding when the following dialogue occurred:—

John.—Good arter, gen'l, come corden' to (his) orders to put you (his) through the drill.

Gen.—(In surprise.) To put me through the drill.

John.—Yes, sir. Dat not name.

Gen.—Out of this, you rascal. What do you mean by such insolence?

John.—Shoulder (his) arms.

Gen.—Guard, this way.

John.—Right shoulder. Shift (his) arms.

Gen.—(To guard.) Arrest this man.

John.—(Producing order.) Now look here, (his) gen., what yer (his) going to fret and for? (His.)

Gen.—(Examining the order and laughing.) Go to your quarters.

John.—Wal. general, when you (his) want me to drill you again, just let me know.

Dream of a Quaker Lady.—There is a beautiful story told of a pious old Quaker lady who was addicted to smoking tobacco. She indulged in the habit until it increased so much upon her, that she not only smoked her pipe a large portion of the day, but frequently sat up in her bed for this purpose in the night. After one of these nocturnal entertainments she fell asleep, and dreamed that she died, and approached heaven. Meeting an angel, she asked him if her name was written in the book of life. He disappeared, but replied upon returning, that he could not find it. "Oh," she said, "do look again, it must be there." He examined again, but returned with a sorrowful face, "It is not there!"—"Oh," said she, in agony, "it must be there, I have the assurance that it is there! Do look again." The angel was moved to tears by her entreaties, and again left her to renew his search. After a long absence he came back, with his face radiant with joy, and exclaimed, "We have found it, but it was so clouded with tobacco smoke that we could hardly see it!" The woman upon waking immediately threw her pipe away, and never indulged in smoking again.

A CALIFORNIA EPITAPH.—The following inscription is said to have been found on a head-board at a grave, in the Sparta Diggings, California:

"In memory of John Smith, who met with an untimely death, near this spot 18 hundred and 40 too—he was shot by his own pistill,
It was not one of the new kind but a old fashioned brass barrel and of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."

A VARIETY OF COMFORTS.—Cold Comfort—Ice in August.

Double Comfort—To pay a note with borrowed money.

Editorial Comfort—Pay in advance.

Domestic Comfort—A pleasant wife, good-natured children, and warm puddings.

Sunday Comfort—To listen to a long sermon upon man's iniquities, without hearing a vice of which you are guilty.

The Hon. John A. Macdonald.

John A. Macdonald, the late Attorney General, has visited Europe, and his journey having given him an appetite, his supporters have felt themselves bound to supply him with food. The dinner came off at Kingston last Tuesday evening, and Mr. Macdonald said—

The State's loud thunders bore to wield
And shake alike the Senate and the field.

After having delivered himself of this, Mr. Macdonald added—

"The bridegroom may forget the bride
Was made his wedded wife yestreen;
The monarch may forget the crown
That on his head an hour has been;
The mother may forget the child
That smiles sae sweetly on her knee;
But I'll remember thee, Glengarry,
And a' that thou hast done for me."

He then sat, as the Kingston News says, sat down amidst hearty cheering.—Hamilton Evening Times.

WHO IS OLD?—A man may never get old. As long as he can move and breathe, he will do something for himself, his neighbor, or posterity. Almost to the last hour of his life, Wolcomes was at work. So were Franklin, and Young, and Howard and Newton. The vigor of their lives never decayed. No rust marred their spirits. It is a foolish idea that we must lie down and die because we are old. Who is old? Not the man of energy; not the day labourer in science, art or benevolence; but he only who allows his energy to waste away, till the spring of life become motionless; on whose hands the hours drag heavily, to whom all things wear the garb of gloom.

An eccentric old man has just died at Paris. His hands had been turned by receiving an unexpected legacy; and his folly consisted in a passion for riding about in omnibuses. He knew which line of these vehicles began to rise the earliest in the morning, and excepting the short intervals occupied in taking his meals, his whole time, until the return of the last omnibus to the yard at night, was spent in riding about.—Galignani.

It is a bad sign to see a man with his hat off at midnight, explaining the theory and principles of true democracy, to a lamp-post.

Patting the Baby.—Patting the baby is a very pleasant amusement, but it is not always safe. Many a baby has been spoiled by patting. Many a baby has had its head flattened by patting. Many a baby has had its temper ruined by patting. Many a baby has had its nose pushed out of shape by patting. Many a baby has had its mouth pulled out of shape by patting. Peterborough Examiner.

THURSDAY, APRIL 30th, 1863.

RETROSPECTION.

Twelve months ago this present proprietor of the Examiner commenced the difficult and critical task of undertaking the publishing of a newspaper. He was fully aware that in a pecuniary point of view the undertaking was one not without hazard, and that in order to ensure success the patronage and good will of the public was indispensible. It was, he is free to confess, with alternate fear and hope that he assumed his labours, at the same time with a fixed determination to try and make the Examiner at once profitable to himself, and acceptable to the great Reform body of this our good County.

He has been enabled to weather the first year very satisfactorily. Since the first of May last his subscription list has increased fully 25 per cent. The advertising patronage has been very liberal indeed, and he is pleased to find that the paper finds favour in the eyes of the people. Indeed the success of the undertaking has exceeded his most sanguine expectations, and has falsified the prediction of our town contemporary about a year ago, that the "concern" would not pay. The proprietor has every reason to be pleased with his success hitherto, as well as grateful to his friends, patrons and the public for their kind support. His determination for the future is the same as it was at the beginning to endeavor to make the paper the organ of the body it professes to represent, and a medium of communication between the various classes of the community. He embraces the present opportunity to return to all his sincere thanks for the generous support accorded him, and for the prompt manner his demands upon them have been met.

We have received a document from Quebec showing in parallel columns the Separate School Law of 1855, and Mr. Scott's Bill as it finally passed the House. It is prepared by the Chief Superintendent of Education, and exhibits in one view the difference between the two Bills. Every unprejudiced individual, we think, will admit that of the two the last one is the best, although it would admit of amendment.

Dr. Ryerson at the end gives his views of the new measure—which we published last week—and one cannot read his remarks without admiring the cleverness of the Dr. in making out a case he it never so bad. He is the prince of dodgers, a chameleon, a sophist, a time server, a thorough trimmer, but woe to the unlucky wight who comes across his pen; he is sure to be written down, denounced, and held up to ridicule. There is a power in his tongue and pen that has often been used for anything but the benefit of the public. We really cannot understand the energy with which he has advocated Separate Schools for the last two or three years, unless it is a part of the great plan he has in view of reducing our National University and substituting therefor a number of inferior sectarian ones in its stead. In urging the adoption of Mr. Scott's Bill he thus refers to the western malcontents: "Protestants in Upper Canada can surely afford to be as liberal as are the Roman Catholics in Lower Canada. . . . . I believe the spirit of intolerance is confined to a comparatively small portion of the Protestants of Upper Canada." Now no one knows better than Dr. Ryerson that the Lower Canada Schools are Sectarian, and Protestants there only seek relief from the Sectarian element; that the Schools in Upper Canada are not Sectarian, but the Catholics will have the Sectarian element in their Schools, hence their determination to separate. There is no real analogy, and it shows the ease with which the Dr. will use his sophisms to gull the public. Place no dependence upon the opinions of the Superintendent of Upper Canada on School matters or any thing else.

Lord Palmerston on Sectional.

Many of our readers have probably learned that the Premier has been elected Rector of the Glasgow University. It appears he received a very large vote to this exalted position. On the occasion of his installation a banquet was given him at the City Hall, at which 800 persons were present, including a number of the nobility and gentry of both town and country.

His lordship's speech on the installation is said to have been neither erudite nor logical, but withal abounding with good common sense on the subjects treated of. At the banquet he is said to have spoken with his usual brilliancy and tact," and elicited enthusiastic plaudits with the toasts proposed. Each toast by the bailie proceeded in a manner to afterwards where he was enthusiastically received, and a splendid dejeuner prepared for him by the corporation.

On the same evening, the 21st March, the greatest demonstration of all took place. It was the gathering of the working men of Glasgow to congratulate Mr. Locke[illegible] the occasion of his election. [illegible] chair of the meeting another process was formed by the bailies and councillors in their robes of office. Addresses were presented to the Lord-high the friend of the working classes, by Mr. Cullen, a working man, who supplemented the address by an excellent speech. Lord Palmerston's reply was marked by more than usual tact in his public speeches, "universalized," it is said by the hearty and cordial welcome of the working classes."

He next proceeded to Edinburgh where he was met with enthusiasm by the inhabitants of the "Modern Athens." He received here the freedom of the "City," and at the University he was invested with the Degree of L. L. D.—rather unusual accompaniment of a politician.

A public Dinner was then given him, at which 784 noblemen and gentlemen were present, as well as some 600 ladies, in the galleries in the Music Hall. The Press is thoroughly delighted with the cordial reception he received every where in Scotland, and it must have been gratifying for him to know that the course he pursued in the onerous and responsible position which he occupies at the helm of public affairs is so satisfactory to so large and important a portion of the empire.

Our prayer is that his Lordship may be long spared to pilot along the ship of state safely—especially at the present critical period.

ST. GEORGE'S DAY.

Thursday last being the anniversary of England's patron Saint—a day Englishmen in all quarters of the globe desire to honor,—was celebrated by the newly organized St. George's Society of Peterborough, by a Dinner at the Stewart House.

About sixty gentlemen assembled at the festive board to discuss the good things provided by "mine host" Hastings, whose catering, by the way, on this occasion was fully equal to his reputation and former efforts. The chair was occupied by the President of the Society, R. G. N. Conway, Esq. On his right were seated Rev. V. Clementi, and R. Dennistoun Esq.; on the left A. Smith, Esq., Vice President of St. Andrew's Society, and Edward Lawder, Esq., President of St. Patrick's Society. The Vice Chairs were filled by Lieut-Col. Strickland and Mr. Burns, first and second Vice Presidents of St. George's Society.

Ample justice having been done to the "spread" the cloth was removed, when the Chairman gave orders to fill a bumper for the first toast, which was "The Queen." It was received with that enthusiasm always manifested by free and loyal Britons.—Song, "God save the Queen," by Mr. T. Brown. The next toast was "The Prince and Princess of Wales, and all the Royal Family." "The Governor General" was next. Song, "For he's a jolly good fellow." The next toast given was "The Clergy of all Denominations;" responded to by Rev. V. Clementi, who concluded a good speech by giving historical facts relative to the nationality of the different "Titular" Saints. The next was "The Army and Navy;" Lieut-Colonel Strickland replied for the Army, and Capt. Sutherland for the Navy. Then followed "The Day, and all who honor it." Song, by Mr. Drennan, "Our Sister Societies;" A. Smith, Esq., Vice President, responded for the St. Andrew's Society, and Edward Lawder, Esq., for the St. Patrick's Society. The first Vice Chair then gave "Our Guests;" replied to by J. T. Henthorn, Esq. "The Mayor and Corporation of Peterboro;" W. Clurton, Esq., replied. "The President of the first St. George's Society in Peterborough, Capt. Rubidge;" responded to by Rev. Mr. Clementi.—"The Press;" Mr. Rogers, of Millbrook, and Mr. R. White replied. "The Agricultural interests of Canada;" replied to by Messrs. Stevenson, Garbutt, Stockdale and Walton. The next was a volunteer toast by Rev. Mr. Clementi, "The Bar of Canada;" R. Dennistoun, Esq., responded. The second Vice Chair then gave "The Militia of Canada, active and sedentary;" replied to by Capt's Poole, Kennedy and Smith for the active, and Lieut-Colonel Dennistoun for the Sedentary. The next toast was "Old England, the land we love." Song, by Mr. Hudson, "Here's a health to the Queen." "Canada, the land of our adoption;" W. S. Conger, Esq., replied. "The Ladies," Mr. Gilbert done the amiable. The next was a volunteer toast by Mr. Dennistoun, "The Merchants and Mechanics of Peterboro;" Messrs. Clinton and Poole replied. Song, "Sing us a good old English Song," by Mr. Drennan. After sundry other toasts and songs the company departed somewhere among the we sma' hours of the morning, not before doing justice to "Auld Lang Syne" and the "National Anthem."

RACE LAKES.—The ice in some more broken up on the Rice Lakes. Two steamers have already been at Bridgenorth from the Upper Lakes. The Steamer Woodman came down on Saturday last, and the Ogemah on Monday—neither of them will run regular yet for some time on account of towing.

THE body of Mr. George Hughes, who was drowned in Rice Lake last October was found on Saturday morning last, floating [illegible] by the shore of Harwood, by a man the name of Mr. Gale; the body was easily identified by his watch and clothing. It was brought to Peterboro on Saturday night, and buried in the Little Lake Cemetery on Sunday afternoon. The funeral, which [illegible] was numerous of J. J. Hall, Esq., was [illegible] and [illegible] fully.

TOWN COUNCIL.

The Town Council met on Monday night the 27th inst.

[illegible]

The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

Communications from Colonel Hamilton, offering to send Parliamentary papers for the use of the Council, informing the Council that the Government assisted proposed to assist in making the Road from Peterboro to Galway, and requesting the Mayor and Council that there is a large emigration expected the present autumn and requesting an estimate from [illegible] from [illegible] Barberie, how to England, stating that large numbers had left Liverpool for New York, many of them destined for Canada West.

Several accounts were handed to the Finance Committee.

Several petitions, asking the Council to make improvements in the streets and sidewalks in different localities, were read and referred to the Committee on Streets and Bridges.

A communication from P. Coughlin, offering his services as night watch, was read and received.

The Finance Committe reported on several accounts which they recommended to be paid.

On motion of Mr. Ryan, Patrick Coughlin was appointed night watch.

On motion of Mr. Toole, Mr. Ostrum was appointed Pound-keeper.

Moved by Mr. Toole, seconded by Mr. Carlile,—That the following, viz.: Messrs. Lawson, Ryan and the mover, be a special Committee to confer with the Fire Brigade and to procure dresses suitable for their situation, the amount not to exceed $180, and to be obtained at as much less cost as possible.—Carried.

The Council adjourned till next Monday night at 7½ p. m.

POLICE COURT.

Before His Worship the Mayor and Jas. Edwards, Esq., Justice of the Peace.

Edward Phelan, for assaulting Michael Shanahan, was fined $1 and costs.

James Leonard and James H. Toole, for obstructing the side walk; both were discharged as it was their first offence.

D. Cadotta, for forestalling in the public market, by buying a load of potatoes before 11 o'clock, was fined 50 cents and costs.

James Carney appeared charged by Constable McDonald, with being drunk, disorderly, swearing and throwing stones in the public streets. Constable McD. deposed that a woman told him there was a man throwing stones; he went to the place and found defendant without hat or coat, having a stone in each hand; he went to him and arrested him; defendant seized hold of him and struck him, they wrestled together and fell; defendant tore his coat and witness struck him on the head and brought him to to the Lock-up. The defendant in reply, admitted that he was drunk, but some boys had annoyed him; he took up some stones and threatened to throw them at the boys. Henry Billington deposed, that in coming down George Street, he saw defendant with a lot of boys throwing stones; defendant had a stone which he threatened to strike witness with, he cautioned him not to do so; he then took his coat off and began cursing and swearing; witness advised him to put on his coat and go away or he would be put in the lock-up; McD. then came up and arrested him by putting his hands on his shoulder; he then fell down, defendant kicked McD., saw McD. strike him, but not till he was kicked; defendant behaved very contrary. Fined $2 and costs.

Edward Welsh, for kicking Jas. Welsh, was fined $5 and costs.

CORONER'S INQUEST.

The verdict returned at the Coroner's Inquest regarding the death of Edmund Uglow, was that he "Died from Apoplectic fits, hastened by a fall he had got into William McBurney's open cellar."

The following is the evidence of Dr. McKeown, given at the above inquest, which we publish to substantiate what we said last week in reference to him. We now leave the matter in the hands of the public to judge for themselves:—

JOHN MCKEOWN, of the Town of Peterboro, who calls himself a Physician and Surgeon, being sworn, saith: That on the morning of Tuesday last I was called out of the bed by Mrs. Hodson's little boy about 4 or 5 o'clock, who stated that Edmund was sleeping and snoring very loud and that his Ma could not wake him, and that she wanted me over. I told the boy that I would be over in a little while, but did not go. In less than half an hour he returned, when I said I would not doctor the old brute, but told him to tell his mother to get some other doctor. I saw him afterwards, about 10 o'clock in the forenoon and found him in a comatose state, with stertorous breathing. I decline to say whether I have Licence or not to practice Medicine and Surgery.

The Weather.

For the past two weeks we have had warm, dry weather. The grass is showing itself, and the shrubs and trees give promise that in a few days more, with such fine warm weather, we shall have leaves and blossoms. Our transition from cold to heat this year has been so sudden that we seem to have slipped from winter into summer.

The farmers are busy sowing spring grain. The ground is in fine condition for the operation; indeed never have we seen it better so early. The fall wheat, we are happy to hear, looks remarkably well. Not a single complaint have we heard yet, but a unanimous report by every one of "never saw it look better."

The lumbermen are busy, and the streams are running. We regret to learn that owing to the sudden melting of the snow and the change of wind, the [illegible] is considerably [illegible] the [illegible] on the dam, and that the [illegible] will go down this year. The river is very [illegible] and unless rain sets in for the next few days will be low. The prediction will be realized.

THE INFLAMMATORY PLACARDS IN CORK.—The author of the inflammatory placards posted so extensively about the city on the Sunday and Monday previous to the marriage of the Prince of Wales has been discovered. He is Mr. Edward O'Sullivan of the Butter Exchange, who has become notorious for the bitterness of his harangues against the Crown and his devotedness to the 'National' cause. From the appearance of the placards, suspicion as to their authorship rested strongly on him; but so well and so secretly was the affair managed that up to within a couple of days ago no clue could be obtained as to who printed the productions. Ultimately it was found out that one of them was from the office of Mr. Boylan, printer, Henrietta-place, and was composed from manuscript supplied by Mr. O'Sullivan in his own handwriting. It is stated that Mr. Boylan has sworn information as to how it came into his possession. This placard was the largest of the three posted, and commenced with the words:—

"The Saxon and the Dane
Our immortal hills profane."

The second of the placards that has been traced was printed at the office of Mr. Charles George's wife. It was the one commencing 'Proclamation to Ireland.' The manuscript of both documents has been forwarded to the authorities in Dublin. Mr. O'Sullivan, it is understood, has absconded. According to some reports he is now on his way to France, but it is believed in well informed circles that he is not far distant from the city. He was last seen in Cork on Tuesday, when he was engaged in the Butter Exchange. The other individual referred to is a publican of the city that he was the author of the placards, and pulling down a handful out of his pocket, said:—'There are all the materials for the printing, and here are those for the posting; go and tell that to John Franklin Maguire.' Information is in contemplation, it has been sworn against him, and a warrant issued for his apprehension. The person who posted the placards from around Maguire's shop keeper. He has since stated that it was Mr. O'Sullivan employed him to post them and had paid him for doing so.—Cork Examiner.

As the Queen's Birth-day is on Sunday, and we cannot have any Volunteer display, why not the whole Volunteer Force of Peterboro turn out and meet on the Market Square, at say given hour on Sunday morning, and after being inspected by their several Captain's, march off to their respective places of Worship; at the close of the service, to march back and be dismissed from the place they first paraded.

A SERJEANT.

TELEGRAPH TO QUEBEC, Quebec, April 25.—The country between Bout de Lisle and Three Rivers is inundated. The ice is still shoving and has cut the telegraph poles through in a dozen places. Gangs of men are out in all directions, but there are no signs of the line getting right yet. The cattle between Quebec and Point Levi, connecting with the south shore line, is also broken and no possibility of repairing it till the ice is out of the river.—Crossing to the south shore on the river is becoming dangerous.

Several returned Union prisoners discredit the reported bread riot in Richmond, and say that the story was gotten up on April fool-day.

Sectarian Education.

In Canada the battle of sectarian education is being fought anew with considerable energy. The contest is an old one. For many years, the Roman Catholics of Upper Canada have enjoyed under certain restrictions the right of securing a small share of the public grant for common school education, in behalf of schools established on the separate, or denominational principle. They have always held, however, that the conditions imposed upon them in the matter of attendance, qualifications of teachers, and the powers vested in their trustees, were too rigid to make the separate system of any practical benefit to them. It is, therefore, to extend the principle conferred by the Separate School Act and modify the conditions complained of, that the question has been re-opened. The advocates of an amendment to the existing law contend—and it is the strongest point in their favor—that the Catholics of the West, who are in a sectional minority, ask no more in the matter of separate privileges, than is conceded to the Protestants of the East, who, of course, are in a minority in Lower Canada. On the other hand, the anti-sectarian party in Upper Canada, including a very respectable body of the population, hold the practical doctrine, that the extension of the separatist system strikes, if not at the very foundation, at least at the efficiency of the common schools. The population of the rural districts, it is held, is too sparse to admit of common and separate schools being maintained in the same sections, in anything like an efficient condition; and that as no teaching is permitted in the public schools, which can possibly be offensive to Catholic parents or injurious to Catholic children, the assault on the common school system is merely a priestly device, to cover their secret dread and dislike of population.

The question is in a state of suspended animation for some time. Before the Easter recess, the House of Assembly had passed the bill in the precise form asked for by the Catholics, by a large majority. It had, however, still to pass the ordeal of the Legislative Council before becoming law. Now, however, Parliament has re-assembled and the probability, from all we see, is that a large majority will be found in its favor. While we see all the practical disadvantages which must attend the attempt to extend separate schools all over the rural districts, we can hardly combat the abstract justice of the claim which the dissentients put forward. It is undoubtedly true that the Protestant minority are allowed all the privileges which this bill accords to the Catholics of Upper Canada. But then, again the great danger presents itself, of other religious bodies—say for instance, the High Church Episcopalians, who thoroughly dislike the common school system of New England, from which that of Canada is borrowed—seeking the same privileges as the Catholics. If they should gain the same privileges, the whole law destroyed, will the whole fabric of the public school system is not in pieces—a consummation which, surely, every well-wisher of the country would deplore.—British American.

Wreck of the Anglo-Saxon

CAPE RACE THE SCENE OF THE ACCIDENT.

Nearly 200 Lives Supposed to be Lost!

ONE HUNDRED AND EIGHTY-THREE PERSONS SAVED.

HON. JOHN YOUNG AND FAMILY AMONG THE SAVED.

(From the Daily Globe, April 23.)

With the deepest regret we announce the total loss of the Canadian Steamer "Anglo-Saxon," on the coast of Newfoundland, near Cape Race. On Monday, at noon, in a dense fog, she struck the shore, and was under water in an hour afterwards. During the time this took effect, the packet says, in his telegraphic despatch, that seventy people were landed, and that afterwards boat No. 2 came ashore with 23 on board. The later despatch says that on Tuesday, at 9 p. m., nearly twenty-four hours afterwards, the steamer "Dauntless" picked up two boats with ninety persons on board, including, we are happy to say, the Hon. John Young, of Montreal, and his family. This gives a total of one hundred and eighty-three persons saved. The purser speaks of three boats having been cut away on the port side, and we presume that all these are now accounted for, and that the rest of the passengers and crew went down in the ill-fated ship. The captain, Mr. Burgess who has a brother and cousin residing in this city was drowned. He was an able, experienced seaman, and had been long employed on the line.

The "Anglo-Saxon" was one of the first built of the Canadian steamships, and was a very fast vessel. She sailed from Liverpool, bound for Quebec, on Thursday, April 16th, and was approaching the Gulf on the 11th day of her voyage, when she struck on Cape Race. It is supposed that she had a very large number of passengers. There were probably nearly four hundred souls on board, passengers and crew. The escape of one hundred and eighty-three leaves, it is but too likely, nearly two hundred unaccounted for; but we may indulge a hope that the terrible list will not be so long.

The loss of the vessel and of so many lives is not merely a calamity to individuals it is an injury to the Province, and will be mourned everywhere. All had begun to hope that the Canadian steamship line had passed through its baptism of disaster, and that henceforth there would be nothing but prosperity and progress. But we must await the receipt of further intelligence before saying more.

CAPE RACE, April 27.

To Messrs. Edmonstone, Allan & Co., Montreal:

The "Anglo-Saxon" during a dense fog at noon to-day, struck four miles east of Cape Race and got broadside to the rocks. During the time she was afloat seventy people were landed. She keeled to port and in an hour sank below the rails. Three boats on the port side got away. Captain Crawford, with No. 2 boat and twenty-three people, has arrived here. Hon. John Young and family are supposed to be in the missing boats. Capt. Burgess was drowned. Officers all missing and the decks broken up. At four o'clock we left the wreck, when all had disappeared. The people are all here.

TOO MUCH READING.—In an amusing article upon the "Physicians and Surgeons of a By-gone Generation," a journal describes Abernethy conversing thus with a certain patient: "'I opine,' said he 'that more than half your illness arises from too much reading. On my answering that my reading was chiefly history which amused while it instructed, he replied: 'That is no answer to my objection. At your time of life a young fellow should endeavour to strengthen his constitution and lay in a store of health. Besides too much reading never yet made an able man. It is not so much the extent and amount of what we read that serves us, as what we assimilate and make our own. It is that to use the illustration borrowed from my profession, that constitutes the chyle of the mind. I have always found that really indolent men, men of what I would call flabby intellects are great readers. It is far easier to read than to think, to reflect or to observe; and there fellows, not having learned to think, cram themselves with the ideas or the words of others. This they call study, but it is not so. In my own profession I have observed that the greatest men were not the mere readers, but the men who observed. To learn to reflect and observe is a grand desideratum for a young man. John Hunter owes to his power of observation that fine discrimination, that keen judgment, that intuitiveness which he possessed in a greater degree than any of the surgeons of his time.'"

Shooting Tragedy in Ottawa.

A WOMAN CUTS THE THROATS OF TWO OF HER CHILDREN.

(From the Ottawa Citizen, April 21)

Yesterday morning considerable excitement occasioned in this city by a very unfortunate occurrence. The [illegible] woman resides a carpenter of the name of Jonathan Beardwood, who has a wife and four children. Both the man and his wife are natives of England, and came to this country three years ago. They have [illegible] together, but unfortunately [illegible] subject to temporary fits of insanity. Once in England [illegible] Thursday it had been found necessary to place her under restraint. The last time she was done was about two years ago, when she was sent under the authority of a medical board, to the Lunatic Asylum at Toronto. She remained there several months, when she was discharged as cured. She returned to Ottawa to live with her husband. From that time, until a few days ago, she continued in the enjoyment of good health, no symptoms of the old complaint again presented themselves. They did not, however, appear at all in a violent form, and no suspicion was entertained that she would do any harm to either herself or those around her. On Sunday night she retired to bed about her usual hour, two of her children sleeping with her in the same room. The two which slept with her was an infant [illegible] of seven months old and a little girl of [illegible] nine years of age, named Sarah. The one which occupied the lounge was a girl named Mary, now in her fifteenth year. Beardwood himself, with a man of the name of Joseph Roome and another of the children, slept in an adjoining room. Beardwood and his wife about an hour after she had retired, at the time he himself was on his way to his room and to all appearance she was then quite composed and well. Between two and three o'clock in the morning Beardwood and Roome were aroused by terrible cries from the girl Sarah, and, on their hastening to see what was the matter, to their horror, they found the mother with a razor in her hand, and both the children, who had slept by her side, with their throats cut. The father seized hold of the children and held them until the arrival of Dr. Grant; while the eldest daughter grasped the razor, just in time to prevent the same terrible woman from cutting her own throat. The infant died almost immediately, but the other girl, although having a deep gash in her throat and in a very exhausted state, happily survived. This must, no doubt, be attributed in a great measure, to the presence of mind of Roome, who immediately applied a cloth to the wound, and there kept it until the arrival of the physician, who took the necessary steps for the saving of the child's life and we are happy to say there is every prospect of her recovery. Generally speaking, when the throat is cut, either by the suicide or the murderer, the wound is in front, but this unhappy woman would almost seem to have been aware of the fact that a cut on the lateral part of the neck is more rapidly fatal, as in that region is situated the important blood vessels of the neck—namely, the jugular vein and carotid artery. She, unfortunately, too effectually succeeded in severing these vessels in the infant. Not so, however, with the other child, as we learn, from a medical gentleman who saw her, that the wind-pipe alone was severed, and that only partially. The news of the horrible event soon spread over the whole city, and during the morning the locality was visited by many scores of people, curious to satisfy themselves of the truth of the sad reports which were abroad, and also to see the scene of so terrible an event. The unfortunate woman manifested no concern at the dreadful deed she had committed; but, on the contrary, during the whole morning, while the inquest was being held and before she was removed to jail, she repeatedly asked for the razor that she might destroy the other children and likewise herself; and ever and anon, by her lightness of manner and words, betrayed the utmost satisfaction at what she had accomplished, and her regret that she had not effected all she intended, which was clearly the destruction of all her children and herself. The idea which seemed to possess her was that the family was too poor to live any longer without a resort to begging—an idea which, from all we have learned, had no foundation in fact, and was only the emanation of her disordered imagination.

Moffats Pills and Bitters in Court.

Few of our readers but are familiar with these medicines. If they have not themselves used them, they have at least heard of them as we have ever since our boyhood. It may not, however, be so generally known that they gave rise, in our courts, to one of the most singular and unnatural litigation. The parties to the suit were John Moffat and Dr. William B. Moffat, who died in April, 1862. As we learn from the evidence in the case, William B. Moffat was the plaintiffs only son. In 1837 the father sold out to him all his right, title, and interest in the business of manufacturing and selling the "Life Pills and Phœnix Bitters;" and from that time until 1854 all went on smoothly. The son by his energy and application to business, amassed a princely fortune, built a splendid residence in the upper part of the city and lived there with his father and family supporting them in affluence. In the summer of 1854 he decided to get married—first, however, having provided for his family in the most liberal manner, and as appears by the evidence, entirely to his own satisfaction. Immediately afterwards, however, this suit was brought in which John Moffat claimed to have an interest in the same business, which claim, if sustained, would entitle him to some half a million of Dollars, (this gives us an idea of the same business. The case was not tried until 1859. It then came up at the Special Term of the Superior Court before his Hon. Chief Justice Haworth, Charles O'Connor, Esq., appearing for the father, and James T. Brady, Esq., for the son. It was ably argued on both sides, and decided in favor of the son upon every issue in the case. From these it was appealed to the full Bench, but whether the parties got enough of the law or whether they concluded to let it drop—certainly nothing further was done until the case came before a year ago. His executors in settling up his estate deemed it of vital importance to have the suit finally disposed of, or they had it brought up and argued at last General Term before Justice Morsell. On Saturday last decision was rendered, affirming the judgment of the Special Term with costs. So ends a nine years litigation.—"Law is Law."

BUFFALO, N. Y.

ARE the only Physicians in the State who are members of the Royal College of Surgeons, London.

May be consulted from 8 o'clock in the morning, until 9 at night, in every stage and symptom of Disease.

The treatment they adopt is the result of upwards of thirty years' extensive and successful practice in London.

A most Scientific Invention

An instrument for the cure of general Debility, or Nocturnal Emissions, more properly known as Seminal Weakness, &c. These complaints can be permanently cured in from 48 hours to two months by the use of this instrument, when used completely with medicines.

Dr. AMOS & SON, in order to satisfy the most skeptical as to the merits of this instrument, pledge themselves that in any instance where it may prove unsatisfactory after a fair trial, the money will be refunded by returning the instrument in good order. Price Ten Dollars, by mail or express.

YOUNG MEN TAKE PARTICULAR NOTICE

Those who have injured themselves by a certain practice indulged in when alone—a habit frequently learned from evil companions, or a school, the effects of which are nightly felt even when asleep, and most surely renders marriage impossible and destroys both mind and body, should apply immediately. One of above is one of the most formidable enemies to health, for nothing else in the dire catalogue of human diseases causes so destructive a drain upon the human system, drawing its thousands of victims through a few years of suffering down to an untimely grave. It destroys the nervous system rapidly, wastes away the energies of life, causes mental derangement, prevents the proper development of the system, disqualifies for marriage, society, business, and all earthly happiness, and leaves the sufferer wrecked in body and mind, predisposed to consumption and a train of evils more to be dreaded than death itself.

PERSONS IN ANY PART OF THE WORLD may be successfully treated by forwarding a correct detail of their cases.

Address Dr. AMOS & SON, 48 East Genesee Street, three doors West of Ellicott Street, Buffalo, N.Y.

THE MAGIC TIME OBSERVER!

The Perfectio of Mechanism,

BEING A HUNTING AND OPEN FACE, Gent's or Lady or Gentleman's Watch combined. One of the prettiest, most convenient, and decidedly the best and cheapest time-keepers for general and reliable use, ever offered. It has within it and connected with its machinery, its own winding attachment, rendering a key entirely unnecessary. The cases of this Watch are composed of two metals, the outer one being fine to carrot gold. It has the improved ruby action lever movement, and is warranted an accurate timekeeper. Price, superbly engraved, per case of a half dozen, $204.00 Sample Watches, in neat morocco boxes, for those proposing to buy at wholesale, $35, sent by express with bill payable on delivery. Soldiers must remit payment in advance, as we cannot collect from those in the army. Address

ILLUSTRATED

SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN!

The Best Mechanical Paper in the World.

EIGHTEENTH YEAR.

VOLUME VIII—NEW SERIES.

A NEW VOLUME of this popular Journal commences on the first of January. It is published weekly, and every number contains sixteen pages of useful information, and from five to ten original engravings of new inventions and discoveries, all of which are prepared expressly for its columns.

TO THE MECHANIC & MANUFACTURER

No person engaged in any of the manufacturing pursuits should think of "doing without" the Scientific American. It costs but six cents per week; every number contains from six to ten engravings of new machines and inventions, which cannot be found in any other publication

TO THE INVENTOR.

The Scientific American is indispensable to every inventor, as it not only contains illustrated descriptions of nearly all the best inventions as they come out, but each number contains an official List of the Claims of all the Patents issued from the United States Patent Office during the week previous; thus giving a correct history of the progress of invention in this country. We are also receiving, every week the best scientific journals of Great Britain, France and Germany: thus placing in our possession all that is transpiring in mechanical science and art in these old countries. We continue to transfer to our columns copious extracts from these journals whatever we may deem of interest to our readers.

A pamphlet of instruction as to the best mode of obtaining Letters Patent on new inventions is furnished free on application.

Messrs. Munn & Co. have acted as Patent Solicitors for more than seventeen years, in connection with the publication of the Scientific American, and they refer to 20,000 patentees for whom they have done business.

No charge is made for examining sketches or models of new inventions and for advising inventors as to their patentability.

CHEMISTS, ARCHITECTS, MILLWRIGHTS & FARMERS

The Scientific American will be found a most useful Journal to them. All the new discoveries in the science of chemistry are given in its columns, and the interest of the architect and carpenter are not overlooked; all the new inventions and discoveries appertaining to these pursuits being published from week to week. Useful and practical information pertaining to the interests of millwrights and millowners will be found in the Scientific American, which information they can not possibly obtain from any other source. Subjects in which farmers are interested will be found discussed in the Scientific American; most of the improvements in agricultural implements being illustrated in its columns.

TERMS.—To mail subscribers: Three Dollars a year, or One Dollar for four months.—The volumes commence on the first of January and July. Specimen copies will be sent gratis to any part of the country.

Western and Canadian money or Post-office stamps taken at par for subscriptions. Canadian subscribers will please to remit twenty-five cents extra on each year's subscription to prepay postage.

ADVERTISE IN

THE EXAMINER.

THE WORLD.

AN INDEPENDENT

Daily, Weekly and Semi-Weekly

NEWSPAPER.

THE publishing for another year a paper which, in the progress of the events which is to adorn a period unparalleled in the World's history, shall reach the people with the earliest and most reliable information, and which, while fearlessly upholding the principles of truth, liberty and justice, shall only utter the effect of many years of reserve in our old and new subscribers, on the occasion that no labor nor expense will be spared to render the World what it aims to be, The Best Newspaper in America.

In politics, now as ever, the World is independent of party interests, but firmly rooted in a love of country, and a devotion to the principles of

Freedom of Speech, of the Press, of Political Discussion, and Action, as the Corner Stones.

The political events of the past year have rapidly developed the need of an able, fearless outspoken, first-class

Conservative Journal,

in the commercial metropolis of the country, which shall give constant, bold and vigorous utterance to the conservative sentiments of the loyal men and the honest masses of the nation. Opposing every enemy to whether armed in rebellion at the South, or insidiously planting the seeds of dissolution at the North.

The Union,

Opposing every violation of the Constitution,

the only bond and hope of union, the only ground upon which we can exhort and compel the allegiance of the South:

Opposing every infraction of

The Laws,

in high places or in low, believing that obedience to Law is service to God:

Opposing every violation of the

Freedom of Speech, of the Press, of Political Discussion and Action,

by whomsoever those violations are committed, whether by the executive in its

Arbitrary, Illegal, and Unjust Arrests,

its refusal of the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus, its denial of the rights and liberties of citizens, its arrest without warrant, its imprisonments without trial, its abrogation of state and federal laws, its illegal proclamation of an empty emancipation, or whether those violations are committed by the party in power, its orators and its presses, advocating measures which must sunder the Union for the sake of destroying slavery, and denouncing treason against all their political opponents.

Loyal to the government always, it will give to the administration a hearty and vigorous support whenever and wherever the administration itself is loyal to the bond, the principles, and the purity of the government.

The World will oppose all compromises which would barter away or divide the Union, for which alone the North is waging war; it will oppose peace itself, till the success of the war assures the permanence of peace, and will urge the prosecution of the war with an economy which has not hitherto governed its expenditures, and a vigor which the nation during a year has prayed for, in vain.

The same care will be exercised over the columns of the World to exclude everything which could offend a pure, Christian morality, and recourse will always be had to the same high principles as well to guard its columns as to guide its judgment of men and events.

All the News

will be found in the columns of the World from the various departments of human activity,

Political, Agricultural, and Commercial, as well as in Literature, Science and Art.

New Publications, Inventions, Discoveries, and Works of Art will receive the same careful and thorough attention.

The latest and most important news from London, Paris, Turin, Rome, Syria, China, California, Japan, Egypt, and South America, our correspondents will send to us.

Our correspondents are attached to the various divisions of the army; will accompany them wherever they go, and by the free use of the telegraph and the mails, present in the columns of the World

A Complete History of the War,

from day to day, and from month to month.

In the Weekly and Semi-Weekly editions of the World a specially large space will be given to

Agriculture,

and to all departments of

Manufacturing and Mechanical Industry.

The Weekly World will contain an admirable serial story during the current year

THE DAILY WORLD.

The Daily World is the most complete Commercial and News Paper published in America. Besides as full telegraph news, war correspondence, and foreign news, &c., as any two cent daily, it contains also much fuller commercial news, the Stock News, Produce, and Cattle Market reports, Foreign and Domestic Importations, Stock Lists, and Commercial news, no business man can do without.

TERMS (INVARIABLE IN ADVANCE):

One copy for one year, $8.
Four copies for one year, $30.
For a club of ten copies an extra copy will be sent for one year.

THE SEMI-WEEKLY WORLD.

The Semi-Weekly World is a large quarto sheet, same size as the daily, containing all its news, correspondence, miscellany and editorials, its commercial and market news, and entertaining selections and miscellaneous reading. Its cattle market and provision reports make it highly valuable to every farmer.

EMPLOYMENT.

THE Undersigned has, for several years past, been engaged in a business, which has yielded him at the rate of three thousand dollars per annum, and is now willing to teach it to others. The business is of a highly useful and general character, suited both to cities and villages, and one that any person of ordinary capacity, young or old, male or female, can acquire with a few hours' practice, and by which they can secure a very handsome income. Several young ladies who have received instructions from me, both in New York State and Pennsylvania, are earning upwards of $15 per week by it, and there is no reason why any one else cannot do the same. Invalids, even, can do well by it, as it is no peddling affair, but a business that is perfectly respectable. Gentlemen and ladies of leisure who would like to learn the business for their own amusement or pleasure, will find the practice of it a pleasant pastime, and one that they will take great interest in. On receipt of $1, I will send printed instructions by which any person can readily acquire the art, and these instructions will also contain every particular relative to the carrying it on so that it will be highly profitable. The purchaser of the "printed instructions" will also be authorized to teach it to others; and I have sometimes received as high as $300, for teaching it personally to a single individual. I would state further that $2.50 or $3 will buy everything that is necessary to commence the business with, and the articles can be got almost anywhere, in city or country, as if preferred, I can furnish them. Address ALVORD & PARSONS, No. 36 Liberty St., New York.

ANNUAL MEETING

INVESTIGATION REPORT - - DECLARATION OF BONUS.

THE thirty-sixth annual Meeting of this Company was held within the Royal Hotel, Aberdeen on Friday, the 10th April.

Alexander Symmers, Esq., of Dremallan, Chairman of the Ordinary Directors, in the Chair. There were submitted to the meeting—

1.—Report by the Directors, which, on the motion of the Chairman, was cordially and unanimously approved of and adopted.

2.—The Balance Sheet for the past year, with detailed states relative thereto, duly certified as correct, in terms of the Act of Incorporation, by the Chairman and Manager, and also by the Auditor.

There was also laid on the Table the various Valuations Returns in connection with the Quinquennial Investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, as at 31st January, 1863.

The following particulars derived from the Balance Sheet and Statements beforementioned, show the result of the operations of the Company for the past year:—

Amount proposed for Life Assurances during the year, contained in 1169 Proposals £454,835 0 0
Amount of Proposals accepted, and for which 661 Policies were issued..... 358,580 0 0
ANNUAL PREMIUMS on said Policies..... 11,170 1 8
CLAIMS BY DEATH including BONUSES on PARTICIPATING POLICIES, and after deducting Sums recovered from other Offices under guarantees..... 32,998 1 0
TOTAL SUM Assured under 4,750 current LIFE POLICIES..... 1,065,85 0 0
TOTAL ACCUMULATED FUNDS..... 373,563 2 1
TOTAL ANNUAL REVENUE..... 96,756 4 4

With reference to the recent investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, as at 31st January last, the Report Stated that both the principles of valuation and the details thereof, had been submitted to James John Downes, Esq., Actuary to the Economic Life Office in London, a gentleman well known as one of the highest authorities on such subjects in the kingdom, and had received his entire approval, as having been made on just and sound principles, and accurately carried out as certified in his report to the Directors, which formed part of the Appendix to their Report. This also the Directors considered could not fail to give the utmost confidence—both to the shareholders and the Policyholders—in the soundness and correctness of the valuation.

During the Quinquennial period, the claims by death, including the bonus additions which had been paid, and which had been considerably under the number that might have been expected from the Mortality Tables on which the Office rates are based, amounting to £93,075 6s 6d.

In valuing the Policies, each had been separately calculated, and data premiums had only been used, thus leaving a surplus of annual revenue of £1,627 1s 7d., to meet future expenses and to form a source of profit for next investigation. The total amount of claims by death paid since the commencement of the Company, was £317,821 4s.

The Securities held by the Company were in a satisfactory position, and had been recently carefully scrutinized in detail by the Directors.

In conclusion, the Directors congratulated both the Proprietors and the Assured on the high position which the Company now occupied in the estimation of the public, and on the encouraging prospect of its business operations for the future.

DECLARATION OF BONUS.

From the profits realised on the Life business, a retrospective Bonus of £1 7s 6d per cent per annum for the Quinquennial period was declared, on the sums originally assured under all Participating Policies, increased by the previous additions thereto; also a further prospective Bonus of £1 per cent per annum, on the amount of the Policies with said Bonuses, on all such of said Policies as may become claims by Death previously to the 31st January, 1867.

It will be observed, that this rate of Bonus is equivalent in the case of our older Policies to £1 14s per cent per annum on the original sum assured; that the total additions to the sum assured, now vested, are equal to 32 per cent on the sum assured: and that as the younger ages the additions amount to upwards of 75 per cent of the premiums paid.

Statement showing the Progress of the Company's Business during the Quinquennial Period, ending 31st January, 1862:

Year ending 31st January.	Amounts proposed for Assurance.	Amount of New Policies issued.	No. of Policies.	Increase.	New Annual Premiums.	Total Revenue in each year.	Accumulated Funds.
1858	£1,168,640	£138,180	435	256	£3,980 10 9	£60,704 11 10	£246,206 9 2
1859	206,305	169,171	540	477	5,462 5 6	64,701 6 3	267,434 3 4

1862	4,4,825	356,830	1169	981	11,170 1 1	96,756 4 4	373,563 2 2
Totals	£1,596,776	£1,219,697	3699	3209	37,360 15 10	388,431 14 6	1,537,356 16 6

Votes of thanks were passed to the Directors and Office-bearers of the Company at Head-Offices and Branches, and after a very hearty vote of thanks to the Chairman for his conduct in the Chair, the meeting was dissolved.

SEWING MACHINE COMPANY.

538 Broadway, New York.

TO parties little acquainted with the Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machines the careful perusal of the Company's Circular is specially commended. This circular can be had on application. It is very specific, and will be found highly instructive, having been prepared with much care and we will abide by all statements therein made.

The following brief quotation is characteristic of the entire Circular:

"This Machine is better adapted than any other Sewing Machine in market to the frequent changes and almost endless variety of sewing required in a family; for it will sew from one to twenty thicknesses of Marseilles without stopping, and make every stitch perfect. It will sew from the finest gauze to the heaviest cloth, and even the stoutest harness leather, without changing the feed needle or tension, or making any adjustment of machine whatever."

This have we successfully overcome the most difficult point in the Sewing Machine art. It was no ordinary triumph. Ordinarily can we now say, "No other Machine competes with it in this respect." Hence, here we uniformly—almost without exception—when the highest premium, whenever the Machine has been properly exhibited in competition with other first class Sewing Machines. Hence it is that we are able to offer the following guarantee, viz.:

"We warrant every Machine we sell to give better satisfaction than any other Sewing Machine in the market, or money refunded." We never sell a Machine on any other terms. The guarantee is as reliable as the note of any business man in the land. For more than five years have we relied upon such facts for the reputation of our Machine; and without a single travelling agent in the field, there is scarcely a neighborhood on the continent where the Machine is not favourably known. We prefer such a reputation to one based on mere "talking points," as they are technically called in the trade. Hence we make but one kind of stitch, viz., the lock-stitch, alike on both sides, requiring only one thread the thread of other kinds of stitches.

N. B.—Local Agents wanted in every county brought the West. ☞ Special inducements offered.

Poetry.

"Why are our Church Doors Shut?"

Why are our churches clos'd with jealous care
Bolted and barred against our Maidens fair
Even for the few short hours of Sunday prayer
With the bells calling sweetly returning—
Why are they shut?

If, with our daily drudgeries, o'er-wrought,
Or sick of dissipation's frail vagaries,
We wish to snatch one lovely vision for thought,
Or holy emotions our sanctuary—
Why are they shut?

Are there no sinners in the churches week,
Who seek to sanctify a bowed repentance
Are we so wearied, wherewith, which I'll select
Can be the only balm for Death's captivating sentance—
Why are they shut?

Are there no poor, no wronged, no heirs of grief,
No sick, who when their hopes and courage falter
Long for a moment's respite or relief,
By kneeling at the God of Mercy's altar?
Why are they shut?

Are there no wretched, who, if tempted, sin?
Some qualm of conscience or devout suggestion
Might suddenly redeem from future sin;
Oh, if there be, how solemn is the question—
Why are they shut?

In foreign climes mechanics leave their tasks,
To breathe a passing prayer in their Cathedrals;
There their have week-day shrines, and no one asks
When they would kneel at them and count their bead-rolls—
Why are they shut?

Seeing them enter sad and disconcerted,
To quit these cheering fanes with looks of gladness,
My yearning thoughts to our own church re verted,
And I exclaimed, in tones of soul-born sadness—
Why are they shut?

For who within a parish church can stroll,
Wrapped in his week-day stillness and vacation,
Nor feel that—in the very air—his soul
Receives a sweet and hallowing lustration,
Why are they shut?

The vacant seats, blank aisles, and empty choirs
Are in a deep, sepulchral silence shrouded,
An awe more solemn and intense inspire
Than when with Sunday congregation crowded—
Why are they shut?

The echoes of our footsteps, as we tread
On hollow graves are spiritual voices;
And, holding mental converse with the dead,
In holy reveries our soul rejoices—
Why are they shut?

If there be one, one only, who might share
The sanctifying week-day adoration,
Were but our churches open to his prayer,
Why, I demand, with earnest iteration,
Why are they shut?

Miscellaneous.

A Heroine.

An inquest was held last week on the body of Isabella Farren, aged twenty-five years, who perished at a fire at Bigrigg, near Egremont on Monday week. It appeared that Mr. Farren and his wife slept in a front room up stairs, with their child, which was two years of age Mr. Farren, on rising at half-past five on Monday, found the room was filled with smoke, and that the house was on fire. Having roused his wife he seized his child, and made his way down stairs, amidst the flames which enveloped the staircase. Meanwhile his wife had gone into the next room, and lifted in her arms the younger of her two sisters, with whom she rushed into her own apartment, which was now in flames, and tried to lift up the window. Finding the sash stiff, she broke some of the lower panes, and pushed the girl through to be received by the neighbours below. With a heroism by which her whole conduct was characterized throughout the appalling scene, the brave woman again made her way through the fire and smoke to rescue her other sister. This, with undaunted persev rance, although she must now have been much burnt, she accomplished; and then, when too late, she discovered that she was herself hemmed in by fire. The stair-case, which had tottered beneath her weight when she first passed along it, had now fallen, mingling with the stairs in the general ruin, and all retreat was cut off. The heroic woman made another attempt to raise the window, but the task was too much for her exhausted strength; and her heart-rending shrieks wa ned the spectators below of the near approach of the flames. At length they ceased round her, and in sight of the crowd she fell back a corpse. The Lancaster papers state that the brave woman was enceinte at the time of her death, that her younger sister died on Tuesday, and that no hope is entertained of the recovery of the other.—English Paper.

A Prussian Peasant Wedding.

The Weser Gazette gives some details of a wedding which recently took place at Tempelhof, a small village in the neighborhood of Berlin, inhabited by peasants of the better class. The guests numbered 120, and they consumed 60 fowls, 220 pounds of carp, 230 pounds of cake, and 12 jus ts of roast veal, with which were drunk p nely 900 bottles of wine. The bride and her young friends change their costumes five times during the two days that the festivities lasted. The custom is that the bride cannot refuse a single dance, only in waltzing her the dancer has to pay a certain sum—a single one three kreuz as much as a married one—which is for the benefit of the musicians; on this occasion the amount collected in that manner was 105 thalers, or nearly 600f. In the evening a torchlight procession in the streets of the village took place, and on the bride going to her new residence she was accompanied by a guard of honour of fourteen young peasants on horseback.

Report of Good People.

Some when down upon you, like the Alps. They impress you vividly at first, just as do the hundred faced pine next to your daily walks. They come across your horizon, like floating clouds, and you have to go round them. Some men remind you of rough lakes, such as you have often happened upon, where the green turf and the little flower hang over you and are reflected out of the water all day long. There is nothing remarkable about flowers, only that they smell so much like love and kindness, gentleness, and home and every day ordinary life about them. Perhaps you become attached to the lake because it is a quiet spot, and whether you like or hate a lake or not, it seems to remind you of home. But you never dream of its being in any way wonderful. Some day or other, you can scarcely drop a line into the clear depths, close by the side of the daisies and daffodils, and if goes down, down, down. You lean over and sound deeper, but your line doesn't bring it. What is deep about that is if you think, and you top another. The reflected flowers seem to smile at you out of the water, the turf looks as green as ever, but there is no shallow spot beneath. You never thought it, but your quiet lake is all around unfathomable. You are none the less impressed from the fact that it is a quiet lake.

Glasgow Students and Poland.

When Palmerston was installed a few weeks ago Lord Rector of the Glasgow University, several addresses were presented to him immediately before he appeared in the presence of the great audience, and among them was the following in relation to Poland; signed by one hundred and thirty six student:—

"Unto the Right Honourable Viscount Palmerston, K.G., the patrician of the undersigned Students of Glasgow University."

"Humbly sheweth.—That their sympathies are deeply wounded and their tender feelings outraged by the accounts received through the Press of the cruelties and butcheries perpetrated in the name of law by the Russian authorities in unhappy Poland. May it therefore please your Lordship to raise your voice, as first Minister of State in this land, the cradle of freedom for the protection of existing treaties for Poland, and the conferring on that country for the benefits which civilization gives to the people of the present age; and your petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray."

Mexico a Mystery.

The commander of the corvette "Berthol" from Vera Cruz on the 5th, stated on arriving in New York on Saturday, that the repo ted defeat of the French at Puebla is entirely erroneous. When he left all was quiet around the beleaguered city. About Puebla, the French and the Mexicans—what are we to believe? It's impossible to tell who is up, or who is down.—Strong lying is done by somebody, enough to disgust a telegraph reader supremely. Probably the truth is, things remain as they were, and should that turn out to be the case, there is this consolation, no blood has been spilt.

By the way we notice in the New York Times, a rumor from Paris, that the Emperor has determined to get out of the Mexican expedition at whatever cost, and that the troops are to be speedily recalled. As the operations on the wires occasionally remark in mercy—this need is confirmation—Napoleon is not ordinarily so easily balked, and stupid as the Mexican business has been from the first, we are inclined to think he will, as old Abe says, "put it through," if possible.—News.

A Carriage and Pair over Brighton Cliff.

A startling occurrence, says the Brighton Herald, occurred at Brighton on Tuesday afternoon. The carriage and horses of Mr. Rainbold, 5 Percival Terrace, were standing in front of Clarence Mews, while the coachman was preparing to mount on the box to drive the carriage round for the family to take an airing. The horses started off at a full gallop, and continued a headlong career through some streets, till they dashed madly across the wide carriage road of the Marine Parade, and bounding over the pathway, came with fearful force against the strong wooden railings which run in face of the sea wall—were at the greatest height—about seventy feet. The railings, strong as they were, gave way to the shock, and horses and carriage went headlong over the cliff, crashing with fearful violence on the hard ground at the base of the wall. The two animals, for which their owner had been recently offered £300, were killed on the spot. The carriage was broken into a hundred pieces; nothing, in fact, but the springs remained unbroken.—English paper.

A Youthful Recruit.

One of the principal recruiting officers of the North was recently the scene of quite an amusing incident. A fair daughter of Erin, with a severe flush of indignation upon her face, entered with a chubby child in her arms, and demanded to see the chief officer. A lieutenant presented himself, to whom she immediately addressed herself.

"Sir, sir, you've clapped your dirty paper in among us my husband's enrolled."

"What is your husband?" asked the officer.

"Why Mr. Hardy and I would beg he'll, so please ye, sir, to take him from his wife and children."

"Can't be helped," said the officer, "it's too late now."

"Take him for shame, you" cried she, with fire in her eye, "you're the "artful dodger" of recruiting officers. You've enrolled 'im and you know you've only got four more than you ought."

"Well, then, as a good fellow, leaving the final decision with the new regiment, I'll let him." Doubtful of its value to the service of Uncle Sam, he went to claim his brother.

Curing Bad Habits in Horses.

I have heard that there is no remedy for a runaway horse so effective as flogging the beast nearly to death. Well, my friend, then gallop. I have no great pity for drivers who, in the long run, I have a pretty hard, plaintiff, heavy whip thick. There is a nice stage load—up we go. There is a deep-ploughed field—on, you, keep up your pace, and how do you like it? I remember a horse-dealer who always cured a balky by unbridling it. He had once a brute which used to take a stand occasionally and stick still. Farmer Waistcoat had dropped him, and he would not move for any money. Well, the man took the beast, put him in his stable, and locked it, for ten minutes he came to a dead stand. Another half an hour, and not quite three o'clock particular what to reply, tried to look with both ears, waited half an hour, and then began to move on. "Now my friend," said the breaker, "you stay here all day. The farmer paused—ran round to make some accompanimentary greeting. Wind, don't you make him more? Breaker doesn't look at me though. Tell! Farmers drive on. Same three couples, dine at the ordinary, and just before a strike manœuvre, late in the afternoon. Breaker still there, master of the position. The horse never stopped again.

The King and the Robbers.

Charles V. while hunting lost his way, and entered a miserable roadside inn for rest and refreshment. He received but mean laying on a bed, whose counterpane were by no means indicative of good retentiveness. In fact they were theives. Charles asked for refreshments, but had scarcely swallowed a drop, when one of the ill-looking fellows got up and approached him with the remark—

"I dreamed you had a mantle that would suit me to a T," and thereupon appropriated the garment.

"And I," said the second fellow, following his comrade's example, "dreamt you had a goat which would fit me nicely." At the same time he seized upon the unfortunate. The third took his hat, the fourth prepared to take a mantle which the king wore suspended from his neck by a gold chain.

"Softly, my friend," said Charles, "let me first show you the use of this whistle." Accordingly he raised it to his lips, blew a shrill note, and the hall was filled with horsemen. "Here" said Charles, pointing to the ruffians, "are a set of fellows who dream whatever they want. It is my turn now. I have dreamed that these rascals were worthy of a gibbet, Let the dream be realized instantly."

The hint was taken and without further delay or formality, the rascally quartette were swung up before the inn door, a signal warning to all unprincipled psychologists.

A Model School.

First class in philosophy step out.—Close your books. John Jones, how many kingdoms in nature? asked the pedagogue.

Four.

What are they called?

The animal, vegetable, mineral and kingdom come.

Good—go up head.

Hi bb—what is meant by the animal kingdom?

Lions, tigers, elephants, rhinoceroses, hippopotamuses, alligators, monkeys, jackasses, hare-drivers and school-masters.

Very well—but you'll take a bit low for your last remark.

Giles, what is the mineral kingdom?

The hull of California.

Well straight as it went.

Johnson—what is the vegetable kingdom?

Garden-sarce, potatoes, carrots, sage tea, and all kinds of greens that's good for cooking.

And what are pines, hemlocks and elms? don't they vegetables?

No sir-ee; you can't cook 'em; there's saw-logs and farmin' timber.

Boys, give me a piece of apple, and you can have the hour's intermission—except Hibbin.

And Hibbin vociferated he got a dose of birch.

Inhumanity of a Shoemaker.

A coroner's jury have just returned a verdict of manslaughter against Sarah Lees, who was proved to have ill-treated her apprentice, William Foster, between three and four months ago. It was stated that the boy had been in a state of nudity, and that the lady employed some nursing, and had her husband's pantaloons to wear. The boy's feet were frost-bitten, and several of the front teeth were knocked out. On removing the cloth, the whole of the part of the forehead was an awful bruise, covered with a blackened crust. There were also bruises on the arms and shoulders of the body, and at the back.

Editing a Newspaper.

Newspaper literature is the strong chain of speech which proves the greatness of Britain, and every support should be given to newspapers. The editors of these papers write what is in their hearts. It is not the writing and reading of an article, but the obligation to communicate it, be it one day, whether inclined or not, in sickness or health, in affliction, distress of mind, winter and summer, year after year, and down to one's last, standing in one spot. It is something like the walking of a thousand miles in a thousand hours. There is a fellow feeling for them, for I know how a periodical will wear down one's existence, for itself it appears nothing—the labour is not mentioned; nor is it the tribute of the continual attention which it requires. Your life becomes as it were the publication.—One day is no sooner corrected and printed than on comes the other. It is the stone at Sisyphus—an endless repetition of toil, a constant weight upon the mind—a constant wearing upon the intellect and spirits, demanding all the exertions of your faculties at the same time that you are compelled to do the meanest drudgery. To write for a paper a story well, but to edit one is to condemn yourself to slavery.

English Revenue.

The returns returned for the quarter ending on March 31 are not so favourable as we expected. On the quarter ending 31st December last there was a net increase of revenue to the amount of £1,810,000 as compared with the corresponding period of the previous year—to them attempt Assessed Taxes having contributed to the improvement. In the quarter ending 31st March last there was a net decrease of £392,000. Last quarter there was an increase of £372,000 on the head of Property tax; this quarter the same tax shows a decrease of £337,000. The expenditure, instead of an increase like that of £104,000 reported last quarter, shows a decrease of £379,000. The Customs also shows a decrease. The result of that the net increase for the financial year just ended is reduced to £939,000.—Liverpool Mercury.

Strange Story.

A correspondent of the Talbotteer Pioneer relates the following strange story:—While speaking of peace, there is a legend connected with a spring near Fredericksburg, which I will relate for the benefit of the curious. According to a tradition, this spring was discovered running three months before the Revolutionary war. Three months before a treaty of peace it dried up and ceased to run. It commenced running again three months before the war of 1812, and three months before its close it dried up. In the Revolutionary war, it again dried up, and on both the Mexican wars. Three months before the fall of Fort Sumpter it again commenced running, and a short time after dried up. I give as my author for this an agent who owns the land adjoining near the spring, and who has considerable property, and offers to bet it all that we will have no rain in three months from the drying up of the spring."

Extraordinary Incident in Saving Life.

—During the royal marriage celebrations at Liverpool, last week, numerous steamers, among which was the Queen, were moored in the Mersey. One of these, under command of Captain H. J. Ward, took a party of ladies out on the river. The party having witnessed the sports, and the illuminations of the Majestic, Captain Ward steered his steamer for the Landing place at Woodside, in order to land them, and while doing so, a sergeant named Smith, belonging to the 18th Royal Irish, fell overboard. Captain Ward, who is noted for the promptness of action in a drowning, instantly gave all into the care of his first officer, and jumped overboard to the rescue of the sergeant, who was fast sinking. The Loss of the Anglo-Saxon.

Were it not for the war and the absorbing interest it excites, the loss of the Anglo-Saxon would have shocked all England and commotion throughout this country. Disasters of this kind have occurred before; but as habituated have we become to the destruction of life and property on the high seas of two hemispheres that the sinking of every vessel upon a watery grave is of every day occurrence. This fatality, however, is one of the characteristics that has accompanied since the land communication between England and North America. It is a terrible tribute to pay. The others, which will be well remembered, are the steamer Arctic, sunk by collision in 1854, with the loss of 300 lives; the Central America, sunk in 1857 by a loss of 275 lives; the Governor Knight, destroyed by fire in 1861, with 476 lives; the Hungarian, wrecked on the Newfoundland coast in 1862, with about 200 lives lost, and the Anglo-Saxon, burned on the coast of California, in deep last, with the loss of 180 lives and a consequent amount of misery. With all we can consider, therefore, the loss of the Anglo-Saxon is the most serious of all so far as the loss of life is concerned.

It is to be sincerely hoped that no one for these occurrences. It is indeed marvellous that people can absolutely put on ocean steamships, and yet, it is impossible to organize some monopolize were done by sailing vessels, the loss of life and property would have been tenfold, what it has been.—*N. CURE OF "MEN WHO HAVE RISEN."—At a social temperance gathering, George Lomas told the following story:—

"Henry Hetherington published the 'Poor Man's Guardian,' which struck the first practical blow at the obnoxious stamp duties. The readers used to fill a straw and give the paper. One day there came to their rendezvous, at New Cross-street, a youth, one of a class known in those days as a 'big piecer.' He told them that two of the news venders had just been taken to the New Bailey, and added to this effect, 'If I had something to start with, I would go sell them; for if they put me in prison they would have to keep me.' Hetherington heard his list, and half a crown was raised; the lad was furnished with a supply of papers, went out, sold them; took care of the profits, and so on from little to more, by diligent industry, steadiness and unimpeachable honesty, he achieved a position in society. The lad's name was Abel Heywood; and in all the rapturous moment the subject of Manchester [illegible]

THURSDAY, MAY 7TH 1863.

PARLIAMENTARY.

Last week, the Committee on the East Durham election decided that the sitting member John Shuter Smith was not duly elected, because the Voter's Lists for 1861 were used in some Municipalities in place of those of 1860. The Committee had previously decided that Mr. Burton's qualification was valid, but did not recommend him to the seat. A new election is to be held, and the former combatants will be at work again. The struggle will be fierce, and it is difficult to say who will win.

It might be remembered, that at the last general election in this County, for a member for the Lower House, how a party here strove to use the Voter's Lists of 1861 instead of those for 1860. How the Sheriff was blamed for seeking to prevent the former from being used, and the reiteration made that his interference cost Mr. Conger his election. It was declared upon some of the best advice in the Province that it was illegal to use the Lists of 1861 unless they had been fyled before the writ issued; and yet in the face of such advice parties insisted upon using them. Such was the anxiety manifested and the efforts used by some of our officials, who ought to have known better, that in two Municipalities they were illegally used. But for the fact that these Municipalities gave a majority for Mr. Conger, the election might have been upset, and we should have had to go through the nuisance of another election, like our neighbors of East Durham have now to do. If the Lists of 1861 had been used all over, or their use anywhere had given the sitting member a majority, so sure would the election have been declared null and void as that of East Durham.

On Friday night last, on the occasion of the discussion of the Estimates, the Opposition through their leader, Hon. J. A. McDonald, introduced the threatened vote of Want of Confidence in the Administration. The debate was adjourned to this week, and the impression was that it was to be a very bitter debate—ample materials on both sides existing to make it acrimonious and recriminative. Both the Ministerial party and the Opposition seemed sanguine as to the results—a somewhat significant hint that the vote will be a close one.

Mr. Brown has commenced talking, and he speaks to purpose. While complimenting the Finance Minister with his candour and openness, he tells him plainly that the country demands and must have more retrenchment—more economy. He has defended Mr. Howland from the attacks of his predecessor, and uses the opportunity to draw the distinction between the two men—reflecting credit upon the present incumbent of the Treasury.

THE WAR.

We have news at length that the combatants have met and commenced fighting. From the contradictory nature of the telegrams it is pretty difficult to state precisely how the skirmishes resulted. One report has it that both sides suffered severely, another that the Rebels were defeated, and then again that the Federals were routed.

Some facts, however, seem indisputable: that Hooker has crossed the Rappahannock, and attacked the Confederates; that Lee, with an unknown force, was in the rear of Fredericksburg, prepared to receive him, and that Hooker seems determined to attack the enemy.

His policy seems to be either to "make a spoon or spoil a horn,"—quite the opposite to his predecessor, McLellan. If he is defeated it will not be charged upon him that he did not try. Now that the campaign has fairly commenced we may expect, from the energy of the Federal commander-in-chief, to have lively times. Desperate fighting may be looked for shortly. There is no abatement of the determination on either side to win or die. It is as well if the quarrel is to be decided by the sword, that it be decided as speedy as possible.—Two years have not sufficed, and two more, with the same kind of tactics as those used by the North, will not suffice to "crush this rebellion." We look for speedy work, now that "fighting Joe" is in command. The first battle of the campaign opened on the first of May, and lasted three days. Hooker's attempt to outflank Lee was not successful; possibly his valour is in advance of his skill, and may cost him dearly. One thing is certain, that Lee will watch his motions closely, and be ready to improve any false move. We wait with anxiety to hear the result of this battle.

We give a summary elsewhere, from the Leader, of the last news before going to press. The only additional reliable news is, that it is acknowledged that both sides fought well. A division of German troops are said to have been seized with panic and broke, but General Hooker being at hand remedied the defect.

The Government seem careful of all—help may have dispersed from the army of [illegible]

THE NEW YORK "WORLD."

In a recent number of this able journal, we find the following announcement:—

"We publish in this morning's World more than forty-seven columns of advertisements, a greater number than there ever published in a single daily issue of any newspaper in America. We are compelled to issue a supplementary sheet, but even with this additions to our available space, can publish to-day little other reading matter than the telegraph news received last night. A number of interesting letters from our army correspondents we must defer to another day."

The World is a double sheet, and with the supplement made three sheets, of the size each of an ordinary newspaper. It is ably conducted, outspoken and independent, and must be a general favourite with the public.

In the number referred to above, we observe a list of the Navy of Great Britain, the tonnage, number of guns and horse each vessel. The following are the figures:

No. of screws and paddle steamers	357
Sailing vessels in Commission	37
Screw gunboats	169
Sailing vessels not on Commission	98
Vessels in construction	42
Total vessels	703
Total guns, above	14,050
Tonnage	725,573
Horse Power	142,031

Besides some 140 vessels in harbour, consisting chiefly of old sailing vessels, which are used as hulks, prison and store ships, watch vessels, &c., &c. A truly formidable Navy, in the event of its being required for war purposes. "It's tremendous strength is fearful" and probably it has been owing to this fact that England has for so long a period, enjoyed immunity from war.

The Board of School Trustees.

The Board held a meeting on Tuesday night, at which there was a good attendance.

A motion was passed instructing the Secretary to communicate with Col. Hautain, calling his attention that in the Grammar School Bill before the Legislature, it provides for only six Trustees being elected, which places the Grammar School Board in a minority in Joint Boards.

A Report from the Principal on the attendance at the school for March and April was submitted.

Several accounts were referred to the Committee on Finance.

A Committee was appointed to enquire into the state of the school, whether more teachers were required, and to report on the application of teachers for an increase of salary.

A motion proposed for advancing a sum equal to that raised by the scholars for purchasing a gymnasium was lost. We shall refer to the gymnasium again.

The use of the Lecture Room was granted to Mr. Love, who intends giving three lectures on Palestine.

The Board then adjourned.

A YOUNG MAN named Alexander Gunn, a native of England, who was articled to John Wilson, Esq., Barrister of London has been charged with embezzling his master's money. He appears to have appropriated to his own use, some time ago, the contents of a money letter amounting to $253; and during the investigation it came out that the Defendant had been keeping bad company, and had attended the gaming table. His master had always placed the most implicit confidence in him, and was only undeceived after he was made to suffer pecuniary by him.

Another loud call on young men to avoid bad company—to shun the gaming table as they would the road to hell! We enjure our young men, for their own sake, to be careful in the selection of their company to abstain from spirituous liquors and under all circumstances ever to do what is right.

SINCE our last issue we have had the melancholy intelligence of over 200 of our fellow creatures having gone down on the ill-fated Anglo-Saxon. News has also reached us of the death of British Secretary of War, Sir George Corawallis Lewis, an able and indefatigable public servant, and a useful and important member of the community. He was quite a literary character, has left several useful works, and had assisted in carrying on the Edinburg Review. And lastly to come nearer home, one of our newly elevated judges has paid the debt of Nature, quiet unexpectedly. We allude to Judge Connors, who was raised to the Bench in place of the late Judge Burns. Verily "in the midst of life we are in death."

The New York World says, that the most vexatious impost known to debt-ourse countries—an income tax—goes into operation to-day Hereafter all whose receipts from any source amount to more than $600 per annum must pay a tax of three or five per cent, on their incomes Those who are curious in such matters, or who are interested in spite of themselves, will find all the particulars relating to this impost elsewhere. The nation is slowly but surely learning how costly a luxury it indulged in when it elected a Republican administration. One such is enough in a generation.

FRUIT TREES.—Mr. James Gardner has brought from Dr. Beadle's Nurseries, St. Catherines, the finest lot of fruit trees ever brought to Peterboro. Among them are some beautiful dwarf apples trees. We can say from their healthy appearance that they cannot be surpassed; and one great advantage in getting them from these nurseries, instead of those imported from the United States is, that they are better adapted for our hard winters.

MR. LOVE is to deliver three Lectures,—two on Palestine, and one on Phonography,—in the Lecture Room of the Union School House, next week. We have heard the Lectures very highly spoken of, and we are sure they will be found both agreeable and instructive. The admission fee is only 12½ cents. See advertisement.

Letter from the Seat of War.

The following letter from an Officer in the 22nd N. Y. Battery to John M. Dun, Esq., was handed to us by that gentleman for publication:

Newbern, N. C., April 23, 1863

James M. Dunn, Esq.:

DEAR SIR,—Accept my warmest thanks for the kind expressions which yours of the 14th ult. contains, and also for the papers accompanying it.

Since my last writing the winter has been gliding away so rapidly that it seems hardly possible for the gay spring to be with us again. The climate here bears so little resemblance to that of Western New York that we have been lost in the realm of warm, bright days, where cast the driving snow assured us that old winter held control.—The absence of rain or snow has rendered the troops here peculiarly adaptable for military operations. Immediately subsequent to the return of the Expedition under Gen. Foster, in Dec., which captured Kinston, and whipped the enemy at Whitehall and Goldsborough, there was a large force sent here from the neighborhood of Suffolk, Va. Among others was the Brigade of Gen. Spinola, composed of undisciplined troops, two of the Regiments being Pennsylvania Militia. The combined force had to undergo a thorough re-organization, and was Brigaded with reference to the greatest efficiency. This could not be accomplished in a day, but required laborious application. Meanwhile supplies of provisions, camp equipage, &c., were accumulated at Beaufort, together with a large fleet of transports, and several iron-clads. All this preparation could not escape the notice of the enemy, therefore it was necessary to mislead them in regard to the point of attack. In the course of two or three days, about the middle of Jan., the greater part of the troops destined for the Expedition were conveyed by Railroad to Beaufort, which is 38 miles distant. All was now ready, and on the morning of the 17th of January Col. Amory's Brigade, the 3rd N. Y. Cavalry, and a section each of the 23rd and 24th N. Y. Batteries, received orders to march in direction of Trenton, the County seat of Jones Co. This lies onward Wilmington, and a demonstration in that direction would immediately point at the West as the intended place of attack. I accompanied this force. The line of march the first day led us through the yellow-pine forest—with which all this region is covered—by a narrow road, or rather winding path, likewise a type of the class.

It is only at rare intervals that the tedium of lofty pines, with their thick undergrowth of chapparal, is relieved by clearings, in which stands the home of the North Carolina farmer, with its steep roof a chimney at either end and on the outside, the width disproportionately small compared with the length. Around it is grouped the negro huts, without regard to form or symmetry. As the column halted for a time to give the pioneer corps of blacks time to repair a bridge, several of the soldiers amused themselves in setting fire to the pines that had been "boxed" for turpentine. The sight was an imposing one, as the flames rolled up the massive trunks of these forest monarchs, seething and curling like a thousand fiery serpents, while above all this tumult that raged below, towered the vast green coronal that these old centurymen know how to wear right royally.

At sundown we camped for the night at Pollokville, 15 miles from Newbern, on the Trent River. Our advance guard was fired at as we entered the place, but the Rebels beat a hasty retreat, having previously blockaded the road by falling trees for about a mile. Camping out, destitute of shelter, in Jan. with you would not be comfortable; but here, with the aid of a fire of dry pine rails, we sleep very comfortably on the bosom of mother earth, with the calm, holy moon lighting up our dreams.

Sabbath, the 18th, found the column in motion just as old Sol sent his first slanting beams over the dark, green coniferæ around us. It proved no day of rest to that band, and I assure you that I never in all my past experience had such a delicious, glorious sensation of enjoyment come over me as I did that evening when I tumbled into a feather-bed in a Hotel in Trenton, after having been in the saddle with the advance all day. Our column met with no resistance at Trenton, there being only three companies of the enemy there, which decamped hastily on our approach.

From Europe.

The steamer Europa, from Liverpool on the 18th, via Queenstown the 19th inst., touched at Halifax yesterday. Her dates are three days later than the Edinburgh's. The Paris Monitteur makes the following significant remark: "The growing hostility of the United States toward England is exciting uneasiness in London. The last dispatches from the Washington government have a character of increasing irritation." A letter from Mr. Adams, the American minister, to Admiral Dupont, exempting a certain ship bound for Mexico from England had excited a most bitter feeling. The Daily News says that "there can be no doubt that the irritation between England and the United States is gradually increasing." Notice had been given in Parliament of an intention to call attention to the seizure of the gunboat Alexandra at Liverpool. Investigation showed that large amounts of counterfeit five, ten, and twenty dollar American treasury notes had been issued at Sheffield. The English, French, and Austrian dispatches were presented to the Court of Russia on the 17th. The Polish question threatened to assume greater complication. The Courts of Italy and Poland had conveyed to St. Petersburg their adhesion to the notes of the three powers. Great excitement regarding Poland existed in Sweden and Norway.—N. Y. World.

The National Fast—War and Christianity.

The President of the United States has, by proclamation, recommended that this day be set apart as a public fast, for the expression of national humiliation and the invocation of the Divine blessing on the penitence of which such a fast is the outward and visible symbol. The governor of the state and the mayor of the city have also issued separate proclamations, counseling a reverent compliance with the recommendation of the President.

As the pulpit will to-day touch upon topics that form the staple of discussion in the daily press, it will perhaps be equally consistent with the decorum which befits a day consecrated to religious observances, if the press makes a more direct allusion than is its wont to the subtle ethical principles which it is the province of the Christian pulpit to expound, and which, on this day at least, a secular journal may formally recognise without incurring the imputation of desecrating sacred subjects by their unseemly obtrusion amid the bustle and distraction of daily business.

Clearly, it is not before the God of the Mahometans that the President calls on us to humble ourselves, but in the presence of God as revealed in the Christian Scriptures. We meddle not with particular texts (of which we fear we should be indifferent expounders) but we run no hazard of error in alluding to the historical fact that Christianity, besides the other blessings it has conferred on the world, has exerted a great and marked influence on the rules and usages of war. We repeat, we will have nothing to do with the exegesis of the particular precepts of Christ as they stand in the record of his sayings; we thereby steer clear of the inquiry whether war can under any circumstances be reconciled with the spirit of Christianity. We choose to look at the subject only in the light of history; and whatever may have been the opinion of some minor sects in various ages of the Church, it is historically true that the nations professing the Christian religion have thought it consistent with the faith to engage in what they consider justifiable wars. Contemplating Christianity not as a theory, but as a fact, the most that can be said is that while it has not prevented the existence of wars it has greatly mitigated their rigor and has established a military code which restrains the passions which war engenders within more humane limits than were ever observed among barbarous and pagan nations.

Now a National fast which is proclaimed in the midst of a great war, and is proclaimed for no other reason than because war exists, is of all occasions the most suitable for inquiring whether we are conducting the war in accordance with the principles which distinguish Christian from heathen warfare. It is our sins that we are exhorted to call to mind and deplore on a day of public humiliation, and on such a fast as this no topic of inquiry is so pertinent as whether we have thus far, conducted the war in strict accordance with the Christian principles, of which the very appointment of the day is a recognition both of the existence and the obligation.

"Thou shalt love thy neighbour and hate thine enemy"—this may be unexceptionable Judaism, but assuredly it is not Christianity. It would authorize all the barbarities of the old war code, for if you may hate your enemy it logically follows that you may inflict on him all the mischief in your power. The Christian code allows the infliction of no suffering that does not tend directly to accomplish the object of the war, which is a just and durable peace. A durable peace, we say as well as a just peace; for Christianity is, in its very essence, a religion of peace, and does not tolerate a mode of prosecuting war which would leave poisoned arrows rankling in the heart of a subdued enemy, inciting him to seize the first opportunity to wreak back long-harbored revenge, and causing other nations to count on his assistance as often as they are led to calculate whether a war with his late antagonist is safe.

War does not necessarily let loose infernal passions and fan them into fierce intensity. General Scott conducted a brilliant war in Mexico in such a spirit that when he had fought his way into the capital, at the head of a hostile army, the inhabitants pressed him to become their ruler. The Duke of Wellington—then Major-General Wellesley—carried on a successful war in India with a similar though less striking effect on the public mind of the country. It was his inflexible justice, his uniform fair-dealing. His never attempting to profit unhandsomely by his advantages, that gave him such a conciliating influence over the enemy. Sir John Malcolm, writing on this point, said:

The march of a British force through this distracted country has had the happy effect of reconciling its contending chiefs and of giving confidence to its oppressed inhabitants, and the union of all ranks in a sentiment of respect for the English name has occasioned an abundance of supplies of every description. The discipline and conduct of the English troops have no doubt contributed much to this favorable general impression. But the confidence and respect of every class in the provinces to the south of the Kistna is in a very great degree personal to the Honorable Major-General Wellesley. To the admiration which the Marhatta chiefs entertain of that officer's military character and firm reliance which the inhabitants place on his justice the extraordinary success which has hitherto attended the progress of this force must be principally attributed.

In a civil war, like that in which we are engaged, it is of the very last consequence to conduct it in such a way as to permit of the immediate resumption of amicable relations when the contest is ended. Even if those who the contest is ended. But if our government were a monarchy, like Russia or Austria, we should want no disaffected Poland or Hungary pursuing a sense of wrong and transmitting it from sire to son. But in a republic, where the object of the war is to bring back the enemy to a voluntary participation with us in self-government, devastation from the rules of Christian war is suicidal. When the South is subdued we want to throw no obstacle in the way of treating it precisely as if there had been no quarrel between us. As the Duke of Wellington wrote in one of his Indian dispatches: "When war is over, I am decidedly of opinion that all animosity should be forgotten." The Christian code does not permit war to be conducted in such a manner as to interfere with the complete extinction of animosity at its close. Whether the universal confiscation of the private property of an enemy tends to that result, is a superfluous to inquire. As the Duke of Wellington said in another of his Indian dispatches: "The war will be eternal if nobody is ever to be forgiven, and I certainly think that the British government cannot intend to make the British troops the objects of the Pashaw's revenge. . . . When the empire of the Company is so great, little dirty passions must not be suffered to guide its movements."

We trust we shall be pardoned for having [illegible] from the threadbare commonplaces which are presented into service

The War News.

The fighting on the Rappahannock has been most severe. A general engagement seems to have been going on without any very lengthed intermission from Friday till Monday; but of the result we have no definite information. The news censor at Washington still exercises his vocation with diligence, and nothing is permitted to come over the wires which has not previously passed through his hands. Under these circumstances, and considering, moreover, that the accounts at first given of previous advances of the army of the Potomac, were anything but near the truth, we are inclined to think that so far as we have an account of the present battles the Confederates have had much the best of the fighting. Indeed it is not denied that up to Monday morning General Lee's army had suffered least and accomplished most. Of Monday's fight we have nothing definite. The correspondent of the World says that on that day the Confederates made a series of superhuman attacks on all points of the Federal lines, but were repulsed with great slaughter. The Post, on the contrary, seems to indicate that no success had been gained by the Federal army, and the reticence of the Washington authorities, who must undoubtedly have been in possession of the news from the field of battle up to Monday night, at least, does not speak strongly in favor of a Federal victory. On this point, however, we must await further details. The fighting has no doubt been terrific, and the slaughter on both sides very great. Present indications lead to the belief that these battles will be the most decisive of the war, and we may well suppose that both Lee and Hooker will make desperate exertions to secure a victory on which such important consequences depend. From some reference which is made to movements in the neighborhood of Suffolk, we are inclined to think that Longstreet has left there to join his forces with Lee. His presence on the Rappahannock with his corps d'arme might prove somewhat similar to the timely appearance of Blucher and his Russian veterans on the field of Waterloo. The Federals claim to have taken three thousand prisoners and several field pieces, but say nothing of their own loss.—Leader.

Annexation to Canada.

Mr. F. O. J. Smith, recently made a great speech in the Maine Legislature, predicting that the Union would be divided in several Confederacies, and advocating that the New England states should be annexed to Canada. The following is a closing extract from this remarkable speech:—

"Let us once, as great Britain willingly would have it occur—let us once be put out of this Union, and left to shift for ourselves, and the state of Maine as a people has only to make a proposition to the British Government to receive us upon the condition that we shall retain our local sovereignty as we now have it—shall elect our own House of Representatives, our own Senators, and enact our local laws: that we will do everything which under the circumstances of the case, we have a right to do under our relations to the Federal Union as a free and independent people—make to Great Britain the proposition to accept us on these conditions, and then spread over us the ægis of the British Constitution—give us a participation in its great commercial treaties with the other nations of the world—open up to us the great markets of the world which her citizens now by her commercial treaties have a right to enter—give us the advantage of the discriminating duty which the new Confederacy of the South, West and Middle States, will assuredly place upon the staple exports of the South West and Middle States against the North and in favor of Great Britain and France, and the German States—give us these, and where are we as a people? Why, sir, there is not the humblest stream that flows from the barnyard of the farmer, that would not become available as the agent of manufactures within the territory of Maine. We would have the commerce of the world to enrich ourselves upon. We should have the protection of their manufacturing policy that would open to us the commerce of all nations. Portland would become the Liverpool of this continent within ten years from such a change. Your other deep waters upon our harbors would become the great depots of world-wide commerce. The territory of Maine would become the best and the pride of British Nations, and the great highway to her immense territories far back to the Pacific. There is no grandeur of a commercial interest which a people might hope for, which, under such relations, we could not realize. . . And while we will not crouch to the British lion, we will ride upon his defiant crest in exchange for the wings of the lamented, of the fallen, and of the discarded eagle of American liberty."

MAKE A BEGINNING.—Remember in all things that if you do not begin, you will never come to an end. The first weed pulled up in the garden, the first seed set in the ground, the first shilling put in the savings'-bank, and the first mile travelled on a journey, are all important things; they make a beginning, a hope, a promise, a pledge, an assurance, that you are in earnest with what you have undertaken. How many a poor, idle, erring, hesitating outcast is now creeping and crawling his way through the world, who might have held up his head and prospered, if instead of putting off his resolutions of amendment and industry, he had only made a beginning.

In all seasons of the year we are reliable to take cold. A cold, neglected, leads to Consumption. A single bottle of Downs' Elixir that costs only 25 cts. may save a physician's bill of fifty dollars.

Henry's Vermont Liniment is the best remedy for Bruises, Sprains, Rheumatism, Sore Throat, Diarrhœa, Cholic, and similar disorders. Only 25 cts. per bottle. See advertisement in another column.

The following elegant extract is from the Detroit Advertiser. We give it as a specimen of the racy and polished style in which the abolition papers at the West conduct their controversies:

The beastly Copperheads of the New-York World are catching it on all hands for their abuse of Miss Dickinson; but the lecherous old hacks of the Chicago Times has an article concerning this gifted young orator that is so atrocious as to make the depravity of The World seem very like virtue.

If the art of writing consists in throwing bow to one your adjectives, the amiable being who penned the above cannot have much to learn.

New Movement in Warsaw Village.

MR. EDITOR,—A new feature in the social existence of this Village has been inaugurated by the commencement of a series of Lectures on interesting and instructive subjects, in the large, new, stone School-House.

The first lecture was delivered on the evening of Thursday, 6th ult., by Rev Mr. Anderson, to whom, I understand, belongs much of the credit of the origin of this new movement.

Much doubt was felt about its success until the delivery of Mr. Anderson's lecture, when, by a happy hit, all who attended were so well pleased that their future attendance was made sure.

Dr. Bigham followed, on Thursday evening after, with a racy and humorous lecture, its only fault being, as was remarked by the Chairman, its extreme shortness.

Rev. Mr. Macdonald was the next lecturer. He seemed to be as successful as the gentlemen who had preceded him.

On each of these occasions Mr. Choate and his excellent choir earned credit for the sweet music discoursed.

All the lectures were remarkably well attended, and it is much to be hoped that after the present course is finished, another one will be commenced in the Fall.

There is nothing greater wanted to enliven the dull routine of country life than a lively course of instructive lectures, and there can always be found gentlemen of ability and public spirit to assist. In this matter Warsaw has set a good example to her sister villages.

DEFENCE, NOT DEFIANCE.

DEDICATED TO THE PETERBORO COUNTY VOLUNTEERS

March, steadily march, though no foeman's before us,
The time may soon come when to battle we'll go.
Forward! men, forward! advance line and column,
As Briton's we'll never flinch for foreign foe.
"Defence, not Defiance," our motto forever,
No other watch-word can we ever know.

Tyrants must tremble and mobs scatter widely,
When they behold our phalanx of steel;
Braggarts may boast what they can do and will do,
But brave men alone can a victory feel.
"Defence, not Defiance," the Volunteer's motto
Still be the watchword while justice we deal.

Peace in our borders, we ask not a favor,
Nor do we design other shores to invade;
But should any miscreant enemy threaten,
No slackness will hinder us till conquest is made.
"Defence, not defiance," resounds through our wild woods,
And echo comes back from each grave and each glade.

God save our Queen, may He shower blessings on her,
Make her us to bless, a sweet blessing of Thine
Cheers for our Country and our Constitution,
Cheers for the land of the Maple and Pine.
"Defence, not Defiance," to the breeze throw our banner;
Steadily forward I march column and line.

Warsaw, May, 1863.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner.

Sir—On Tuesday night the 28th ult. some light fingered gentry, paid a nocturnal visit to my premises, being attracted we presume by a large washing of clothes belonging to me, all of which they carried off with them. Now I would just say to these gentry, by way of moral, that for their own good, they should study and practice the eighth commandment more carefully in future; and if like the ancient spartans, they would wish to have their bodies hardened by stripes or other manly exercises, by applying to me personally, I will put them through free of charge.

The Stage and the Pulpit.

Fancy the thrilling effect of the Scriptures if read as Kean reads Shakespeare, or recites Macaulay! And why should we not have it so? Is it right and proper that every book for public reading should have justice done to it except the Bible? and that while every other subject is allowed the advantage of a natural and impressive delivery, religion (which is the most important subject of all) should be denied it? The monstrous fallacy with which well-meaning but obtuse people have been beguiled, or have beguiled themselves, is, that such reading and recitation would be "theatical," and that theatical exhibitions are not becoming in the house of God. To this hollow and ridiculous fallacy may be traced most of the execrable pulpit reading and delivery that rob the Scriptures of half their power, and have made the dulness of a sermon proverbial. Set Kean to read the song of Miriam, or the fight between David and Goliah, or the story of the prodigal Son, or Christ's denunciation of the Scribes and Pharisees, or to recite one of Chalmer's sermons, and you will see the people who had begun adjusting themselves in the corners of their seats for their accustomed snooze, sit up and listen to the very close with eager eye and bated breath. And this, simply because Kean would do the piece justice—this is, read it naturally, and as it claims to be read. On what possible ground, either of common sense or good taste, can objection be taken to the natural delivery of, at least, the sermon? If Garrick could set even the grim soldier who was on duty at the corner of the state blubbering like a child; and if Mrs. Siddons could so overpower the eminent tragedian Young that he could not refrain from sobbing aloud, though he was himself on the stage acting the villian of the piece at the time—and all this while merely uttering the words of a fictitious character—what overwhelming effects, in the way of awakening sinners, and pressing home the message of the Gospel, might not be produced by men who are giving utterance, in their own character, to the most sublime and soul-stirring truths.—Glasgow Herald.

Educational Column.

"Knowledge is Power."

Since, through the kindness of the managers of the educational column, Miss Agatha has been permitted to appear before the readers thereof, a like committee scribendi has seized your very humble servant, that appears to have actuated the beautiful Agatha—as I infer from her apparent modesty and liking (I imagine) manners of expression. True, my first may be a little childish, but children are always a little childish—yet this may raise me to an equality with her, if no more. Perhaps I presume too much—my presumption, I know, will be forgiven, when my readers consider that a lawful ambition prompts these aspirations.

But why should I follow the example of Miss Agatha, and take two capsules to introduce myself to the readers of the educational column? Let this suffice for the purpose. To give my age, acquirements, situations or nationality would not interest many, and would benefit few but my immediate friends. To enquire after her would (I guess) be fruitless; I shall, therefore, wait till her greater maturity as a writer forbids her any longer to conceal her real cognomen. One thing I do desire and that is, that her truly laudable zeal to improve her opportunities may urge her to continue, and thus induce others to commence—so that hereafter we may hear how she is, and witness how she gets along.

She seems to lament that these creatures (the lords of creation) have an apparent advantage over the ladies of creation. Let her not grieve immoderately; they really sympathise with her in her peculiar position. Thus they know well, that the relationship of both are so blended that if she mourns he must mourn also, if she rejoices he rejoices.

How pleasant it would have been if this boyish freak of mine had appeared side by side with Miss Agatha's. How simple I am to express it; yet it is only a simple thought; as I grow older I hope to grow wiser; grow wiser and better as life wears away. But, by the way, what has this to do with education, unless it be to educate simple feelings. In my next however, I may do better, I am hopeful anyhow. As Miss Agatha is melancholic concerning her position, I will try to enlighten her how she may make the best of what she has—that thus she may appear worthy to have more committed to her. All this may be in rather broken sentences; but if the fair sex should be benefitted only a little by it, I shall feel repaid; and I hope hereafter (for I do not intend to die an old bachelor) happier through their happiness. They say there is something in a name, and as Agatha means worthy of admiration, may I not, therefore, subscribe myself an admirer of Agatha, that is

Daily, Weekly and Semi-Weekly

NEWSPAPERS,

IN soliciting for another year a continuance of the favor bestowed on the World its utmost care and attention will be used to render it worthy of the high position it has attained as a

The First Newspaper in America.

In politics, now as ever, the World is independent, but never neutral. Its sole creed is a patriotic devotion to the Union, the Constitution, and the Laws, and Freedom of Speech, of the Press, of Political Discussion and Action are the avowed stones.

The political events of the past year have wonderfully demonstrated the need of an able, fearless cumpolit, first-class

Conservative Journal,

in the commercial metropolis of the country, which shall give constant, bold and vigorous utterance to the conservative sentiments of the best men and the honest masses of the nation. Opposing every enemy to whether armed in battalions at the South, or insidiously planting the seeds of dissension at the North.

The Union,

Opposing every violation of the Constitution,

the only bond and hope of union, the only ground upon which we can exhort and compel the allegiance of the South:

Opposing every infraction of

The Laws

in high places or in low, believing that obedience to Law is service to God:

Opposing every violation of the

Freedom of Speech, of the Press, of Political Discussion and Action, by whomsoever they are planning are committed, whether by treason or high

Arbitrary, Illegal, and Unjust Arrests.

In refusal of the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus, in denial of the rights and liberties of citizens, in arrest without warrant, its imprisonments without trial. Its abrogation of state and federal laws, its illegal proclamation of an empty manumission, or whether those violations are committed by the party in power, its measures and its manners, and opposing persons which seem unsuitable like those of the spirit of despotism, slavery, and denouncing treason against all their political supporters.

Equal to the government which will give to the administration a hearty and vigorous support whenever and wherever the administration itself adheres to the principles, and the policy, of the government.

The World will oppose all compromises which would flatter, way or divide the Union, for which alone the North is waging war; it will oppose such itself, till the success of the war assures the permanence of peace, and will urge the prosecution of the war with an economy which has not hitherto governed its expenditures, and a vigor which the nation during a year has prayed for in vain.

The same care will be exercised over the columns of the World as excludes everything which could offend a pure, Christian morality, and recourse will always be had to the same high principles as well to guard its columns as to guide its judgment of men and events.

All the News

will be found in the columns of the World from the various departments of human activity,

Political, Agricultural, and Commercial, as well as in Literature, Science and Art.

New Publications, Inventions, Discoveries, and Works of Art will receive the same careful and thorough attention.

The latest and most important news from London, Paris, Turin, Rome, Spain, China, California, Japan, Egypt, and South America, our correspondents will send to us.

Our correspondents are attached to the various divisions of the army; will accompany them wherever they go, and by the fire and of the telegraph and the mails, present in the columns of the World

A Complete History of the War,

from day to day, and from month to month.

In the Weekly and Semi-Weekly editions of the World, especially large space will be given to

Agriculture,

and to all departments of

Manufacturing and Mechanical Industry.

The Weekly World will contain an admirable serial story during the coming year

THE DAILY WORLD.

The Daily World is the most complete Commercial and News Paper published in America. Besides its full telegraph news, war correspondence, foreign news, &c., &c., as any two cent daily, it contains also much fuller commercial news in Ship News, Produce, and Cattle Market reports, Foreign and Domestic Importations, Stock Lists, and Commercial news, no business man can do without.

EMPLOYMENT.

THE Undersigned has, for several years past, been engaged in a business, which has yielded him at the rate of three thousand dollars per annum, and is now willing to teach it to others. The business is of a highly useful and general character, adapted both to cities and villages, and one that any person of ordinary ca, acity, young or old, male or female, can acquire with a few hours' practice, and by which they can secure a very handsome income. Several young ladies who have acquired independence about 6c, both in New York State and Pennsylvania, are earning upwards of $15 per week by it, and there is no reason why any one else cannot do the same. Invalids, even, can do well by it, as it is no confining employment. Any person sharing a dollar can learn it. Gentlemen and ladies of leisure who would like to learn the business for their own amusement or profit, will find it a most pleasant and agreeable employment. Full particulars sent by mailing 25 cents. Address as below. Post-office box 757.

On receipt of $1, I will send printed instructions by which any person can readily acquire the art, and these impressions will also contain every particular relative to the carrying it on so that it will be highly profitable. The purchaser of the printed instructions will also be authorized to teach it to others, and I have sometimes received as high as $200, for teaching it to persons in a single individual. I would state further that $3.50 or $3 will buy me anything that is necessary to commence the business with, and the article I can be got almost everywhere, in every village or town required. I can furnish them. Address ALVORD PARSONS, No. 36 Liberty st., New York. Box 757.

ANNUAL MEETING

INVESTIGATION REPORT - - DECLARATION OF BONUS.

THE twenty-third annual meeting of this Company was held within the Royal Hotel, Aberdeen on Friday, the 18th April.

Alexander Stronach, Esq., of Dromalian, Chairman of the Ordinar. Directors, in the Chair. There were consequently to the meeting—

1.—Report by the Directors, which, on the motion of the Chairman, was, cordially and unanimously approved of and adopted.

2.—The Balance Sheet for the past year, with detailed states relative thereto, duly certified as correct, in terms of the Act of Incorporation, by the Chairman and Manager, and also by the Auditor.

There was also laid on the Table the various Valuation States in connection with the Quinquennial investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, as at 31st January, 1862.

The following particulars derived from the Balance Sheet and States beforementioned, show the result of the operations of the Company for the past year:—

Amount proposed for Life Assurances during the year, consisted of 1339 Proposals	£1,855,535 0 0
Amount of Proposals declined, and the whole still Pending were treated	200 0 0
Amount of Proposals withdrawn	1,655 10 0
Amount of New Policies issued, 1,339	1,853,680 0 0
TOTAL SUM Assured under 4,189 current LIFE POLICIES	1,965,95 0 0
TOTAL ANNUITIES GRANTED	253,563 3 3
ANNUAL REVENUE from Premiums, Interest, &c.	76,784 4 4

With reference to the recent investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, as at 31st January last, the Directors state that both the principles of valuation and the details thereof, had been submitted to James John Downes, Esq., Actuary to the Economic Life Office in London, a gentlem an well known as one of the highest authorities in the kingdom on the said subjects in the aggregate, as having been made on just and sound principles, and a curately worked out on the data in the reports; the Directors, which forms part of the Abstract to their Report. The whole Directors considered it their duty to call the attention of the Policyholders to the circumstance, and to the fact that the Report had been submitted to an Actuary of the highest position in the profession—both to the Assurer and the Policyholders—in the consideration of the results of the valuation.

During the Quinquennial period, the claims by death, including the bonus additions which had been paid, and which had been considerably under the number that might have been expected, under the Healthy Tables on which the office rates are based, amounting to £99,376 0s 6d.

In valuing the Policies, each risk has been separately calculated, and nett premium laid only on the risk thereby assumed, after making ample provision for future expenses and for profits to be derived from the investigations. The total amount of claims by death paid under the commencement of the Company, was £217,881 4s 4d.

The Securities held by the Company were in a satisfactory position, and had been recently carefully ascertained and valued by the Directors.

In conclusion, the Directors congratulated both the Proprietors and the Assured on the high position which the Company now occupied in the estimation of the public, and on the encouraging prospect of its business operations for the future.

DECLARATION OF BONUS.

From the profits realized on the Life business, a retrospective Bonus of £1 7s 6d per cent per annum for the Quinquennial period was declared, on the sums originally assured under all Participating Policies, increased by the previous additions thereto; also a further prospective Bonus of £1 14s per cent per annum, on the amount of the Policies with said Bonuses, on all such of said Policies as may become claims by Death prematurely to the 31st January, 1867.

It will be observed, that this rate of bonus is equivalent in the case of our older Policies to £1 14s per cent per annum on the original sum assured; that the total additions to the sum assured, now vest d, are equal to 32 per cent on the sum assured: and that as the younger ages the additions amount to upwards of 75 per cent of the premiums paid.

Statement showing the Progress of the Company's Business during the Quinquennial Period ending 31st January, 1862:

Year ending 31st January.	Amounts proposed for Assurance.	Amount of Sums Assured.	No. of New Policies issued.	New Annual Premiums.	Total Revenue in each year.	Accumulated Funds.
1858	£180 840	£130 180	455	£3 980 18 0	£40 706 11 10	£249 856 9 3

FINKLE & LYON

SEWING MACHINE COMPANY.

538 Broadway, New York.

TWO parties little acquainted with the Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machines the capital annual of the Company's Circular is especially commended. This circular can be had on application. It is very specific, and will be found highly instructive, having been prepared with much care and we will abide by all states unto therein made.

The following high reputation is characteristic of the entire Circular:

"This Machine is better adapted than any other Sewing Machine in market to the frequent change and almost endless variety of sewing required in a family, for it will sew from one to twenty thicknesses of Marseilles without stopping, and make every stitch perfect. Will sew from the finest gauze to the heaviest cloth, and even the stoutest harness leather, without changing the feed pendic cessation, or making any adjustment of any kind whatever."

Thus have we successfully overcome the most difficult point in the Sewing Machine art. It was no easy triumph. Instantly can we say, "No other Machine compares with it in this respect." Hence, have we uniformly almost without exception—taken the highest premium, wherever the Machine has been put, early established in competition with other first class Sewing Machines. Hence it is that we are able to offer the following guarantee, viz.:

We warrant every Machine we sell to give entire satisfaction than any other Sewing Machine in the market, or money refunded. Or never sell a Machine on any other terms. The guarantee is as reliable as the note of any business man in the land. For more than five years have we relied upon such facts for the reputation of our Machine; and without a single travelling agent in the field, there is scarcely a neighborhood on the continent where the Machine is not favourably known. We prefer such a reputation to one based on mere talking points, as they are technically called in the trade. Hence we make but one kind of article, the lock-stitch, alike on both sides, requiring only one third the thread of other kinds of stitches.

☞ Local Agents wanted in every county throughout the West. ☞ Special inducements offered.

THE BONEFACTOR OF HIS RACE

THE GREAT HEALER OF MANKIND,

The Whole World United!

SICK PEOPLE THINK!

AFTER WHICH, ACT.

Herrick's Sugar Coated Pills,

CHILDREN CRY FOR THEM!

THIS remarkable American remedy is sweeping the world by storm. Over five millions boxes are sold annually. Composed entirely of Roots, Herbs, Balsams and Extracts, its effect on the human system is pleasant, subtle and searching. Acting directly on the blood, it wards from and flushes of the body their vile impurities, which are the fruitful cause of disease. Its operations are mild and unperceived. Its cures, in all cases of endurance, entail no debility, but are followed by renewed vigor and health. Nothing is employed in or about the Pills that is not perfectly safe. Hence, no matter what your condition may be, you cannot take them without benefit. The proper combination of the remedies for the different forms of disease, is the result of long and careful study and experiment, and any person can safely rely upon the directions.

☞ The discovery of remedies for all these diseases is the result of Herrick's Sickness and Misfortune, of which he has had his full share. Many years of suffering, and the doctor's bills spent, and he was given up by the best physicians as incurable. Then he discovered the remedies which restored him to perfect health, and he now offers them to the world for the benefit of others. Sold by all druggists and dealers in medicine. Price 25 cents per box, or five boxes for $1.

Herrick's Kid Strengthening Plaster.

THE GREAT STRUCTURAL AND PAIN DESTROYER. THE MOST AND ONLY PERFECT ROUNDED REMEDY IN THE WORLD

These renowned Plasters cure pains, weakness and distress in the back, side and breast, in five hours. Instant relief in every case by the first application. We warrant them. Spread from canvas, buckskin and chamois, on scientific leather, renders them positively adapted to the wants of females and others. Their application is so simple that a child can use them. They are the best in the world, and the only ones that will not injure the most delicate constitution. Each Plaster will

NEPTUNE'S ADDRESS ON THE HONEYMOON.

(From Punch.)

Auspicious o'er the stream
Whatever were the gales,
Which, faster than old Neptune's team,
Unto the Prince of Wales
The fair young Maid of Denmark bore
In triumph to Great Britain's shore.

The Monarch of the Sea
Soon saw his page was beat:
So thro' the round the Nore went he
After the British fleet.
To wast the happy royal pair
At Osborne, and receive them there.

Down in the deep he dived;
There heard the shouts of English joy;
Rose, when the Royal train arrived,
Emerged like an old buoy.
Above the waves his placid head
He heaved, and blandly smiling said:

"You're there! Bowse my glims!
Ahoy! Bless your sweet eyes!
Avast, I say! My eyes and limbs!
Could I command the skies,
I'd cause them to rain grog and flip
For all the tars in every ship.

However, here's your health,
Sir: Marm, the same to you!
Long life, the test of luck, and wealth,
Or else—why, foul my screw!
Shatter my plates, unbolt me, rust
My armour, and my engine bust!

Well: now you're snug in port;
From them landlubbers' noise
You comes to me to give you sport,
Below there! Girls and Boys!
Tritons and Nereids, pipe all hands, show re
There there young folks the pastimes of the sea."

Miscellaneous.

Mr. Adams and our relations with England.

(From the New York World.)

It is very much to be hoped that the angry and defiant tone adopted by certain prominent English journals in their comments upon the recent action of Mr. Adams, our minister at the Court of St. James, in granting a sort of "certificate of character" to the cargo of a British vessel proceeding to Mexico, may not tempt either our press or our public men into a hasty and intemperate assertion of the wisdom and propriety of that action. The facts involved in the case have not yet reached us in detail; but the telegraphic summary of the news by the Europa tends to warrant the impression that Mr. Adams was induced by private parties interested in the shipment of arms to Mexico to furnish the officers of the vessel conveying the said arms with a semi-official letter to Admiral Dupont, commanding the South Atlantic squadron, in which he assured the admiral of his belief that the arms were really destined for the Mexican and not at all for the Confederate service. This letter might or might not have been respected by Admiral Dupont had it ever come into his hands; but whatever consideration the admiral or his officers might in that case have paid to it, it is perfectly clear that it possessed no authoritative quality to control their actions, and could not in any just sense, be regarded as a passport. Had the steamer whose captain bore it fallen in with our squadron under suspicious circumstances, it would have been the duty of the officers of the squadron to detain her notwithstanding Mr. Adams's certificate, and this duty would no doubt have been done. Mr. Adams himself was of course perfectly aware when he granted the letter of the precise limits of its value, and no man, we imagine, in all England or America can have been more amazed than he at finding himself denounced in the English press for an arrogant assumption of a semi-papal power over British commerce with friendly states.

So far as anything is positively known of the affair, the disproportion between Mr. Adam's real deed and the thunders which that deed has provoked from the Jupiters of British journalism would be ludicrous were it not gravely alarming also as an indication of the existence in England of a temper really hostile to the United States, and ready to resent even the shadow of an affront with as much energy as could be called out to repel a positive and insulting injury. We call this indication a warning mainly because it responds so unhappily to a similar temper on this side of the Atlantic. No man in his senses can look forward to a war between the United States and Great Britain with any feelings but those of the deepest concern and anxiety. The mood of the prize fighter and the bully, odious at all times, is simply a crime against humanity when it is allowed to affect our judgment of so vast and terrible a contingency as a war between the two greatest commercial powers of the world, each of them almost incalculably capable of injuring and of being injured by the other, and both of them as incalculably interested in maintaining those lofty and advanced ideas of civilized statesmanship which it was fondly dreamed a few short years ago had forever triumphed over the ardent and passionate international relations. We waive entirely, as unworthy here to be considered, all thought of the prudential reasons which those who do not hesitate to profess themselves indifferent to the calamities of such a war as any other time, put forward in deprecation of a collision with Great Britain at the present moment. Were the Union restored in all its plenitude of greatness and of glory; nay, had its arch never been shaken, nor a single thunderbolt withdrawn from the clutch of its eagle, a war with England might be to us a dread and sad resort of uncontrollable necessity, but it could never be other than a calamity and a sorrow.

Very deeply to be deprecated, therefore, are all occasions of exciting, in the blood of either people, those feelings of national honor and that passion of national punctilio which, in nations as in individual men, enfeeble the most trivial altercations in a deadly and irrational feuds. And those leaders of public opinion in either country are wickedly recreant to their duty who, for whatever object, personal or partisan, deliberately magnify such occasions when they arise. Some English journals, as we have said appear to have done this thing in the matter of Mr. Adams and his alleged Anglo-Mexican "permission to trade." We trust their evil example will not be followed here.

Reserving our own remarks upon the merits of the case till those merits come fairly and fully before us, we may, however, observe, without injustice to Mr. Adams, that he seems to have been very unfortunate in his epithets. It can hardly be true that the American minister expected his certifying letter to be used for the purpose of effecting an insurance at Lloyds, nor can it have been his intention to advertise to all the world that he regarded the supplying of Mexican troops with arms to fight French soldiers as a "creditable object." Whatever his private opinions as to the war between France and Mexico may be, a diplomatic agent of the United States government was bound to remember that France and Mexico stand to us in the relation of equally friendly powers, between whom it becomes all official representatives of the United States to observe a strict neutrality of words as well as of works. So far, indeed, as the course of Mr. Adams in this matter may be fairly gathered from the accounts which have already reached us, it is tolerably clear that we have much more reason to call him to account ourselves for his real indiscretion than the English press for his fancied assumptions.

Suicide of a Woman in Soldier's Uniform.

From the Cairo Gazette.

In some manner which yet remains to be explained; a young woman about nineteen years of age, arrived at Cairo several days ago with the Fourteenth Illinois, dressed in soldier's uniform, and serving Captain Crane, of Company H. in the capacity of servant. She deported herself as a male, attended theatre, and answered as promptly to the sobriquet of Charley as if it were really her name. On Saturday she attended the theatre, and took her seat among her fellow soldier's, but her disguise could not conceal her sex from the searching eye of the Provost Marshal. Her feminine form and womanly ways were such, in his estimation, as the sterner sex never wore or employed, and straightway he caused her to be arrested. Captain Crane saved her from incarceration in the guard-house, by promising that she should adopt proper apparel and be herself again. The secret leaked out, and during Sunday the boys in camp became deeply interested. They gathered about the Captain's quarters to see her, and to exchange conjectures, and learn, if possible, the wherefores connected with the presence of their remarkable companion. The Colonel, receiving an intimation of the affair, at once determined to investigate it, and dispatched his adjutant to push suitable inquiries. The woman discovering that her secret was out, and that her presence in such a garb was the theme for a thousand tongues, determined to put an end to her own existence. Accordingly, she took up the Captain's revolver, stepped from his room and, placing the muzzle to her breast, fired, and fell a corpse upon the parade ground, without a groan or an exclamation. The ball entered the breast between the fourth and fifth ribs, passed through the body, and lodged under the skin, close to the right side of the spine, where it was found by the surgeon who held the post mortem examination.

Coroner Corcoran held the inquest, but could learn nothing respecting the young woman's name, family, or singular conduct. The tragedy occurred about half-past eight o'clock on Sunday evening.

If the great powers of Europe shall see fit to interpose, treat them with politeness and most distinguished consideration. We cannot be required to arrest the war until we shall have substantially agreed on the conditions of peace; we cannot be expected to consider any proposals of mediation until they shall first be accepted by the rebels. It will thus be May or thereabout before we can be fairly asked to say yes or no to any such interposition.—Tribune, Jan. 22.

As the first of May has come and gone, it is not improbable that H. G. has reopened his negotiations with the French minister to bring about a peace. It may be, indeed, that Colorado Jewett, the astute diplomatist and collaborator of the editor of the Tribune in the peace movement, who is now again across the ocean, is charged with a mission to the French government on this very subject. If not premature, will the Tribune please state the prospect for foreign intervention?

We believe that it (the rebellion) may be virtually crushed out within the next ninety days, and that it is far more likely to be within that term than ever afterward. We believe in fighting while our ranks are comparatively full, and not waiting till they are thinned, and then devoting months to recruiting them.—Tribune Jan. 22.

The ninety days are more than up, and as the rebellion is not only not crushed, but according to this admission is stronger than ever of course H. G. will favor a stoppage of the war to check a useless effusion of blood. We did not see the promised demand for peace in yesterday's Tribune but perhaps the article was crowded out.

If three months more of earnest fighting shall not serve to make a serious impression on the rebels—if the end of that term shall find us no further advanced than its beginning—if some malignant fate has decreed that the blood and treasure of the nation shall ever be squandered in fruitless efforts—let us bow to our destiny, and make the best attainable peace.—Tribune Jan. 22.

The three months was up a week since, but the Tribune still delays coming out for the "best attainable peace." Will H. G. fulfill his promise "just once?"

Letter from the Seat of War.

The evening of the 19th again found us in Pollokville; which place we quitted on the following morning and marched to White Oak River, crossing which on a bridge improvised for the occasion, the cavalry moved in direction of Jacksonville, the County seat of Onslow Co., situated on the New River.

After a headlong chase of a company of Rebel Cavalry for a distance of ten miles, during which time they captured 7 prisoners and three baggage waggons with their contents, they returned to the river, having had one man killed and one wounded. The position of the enemy and the fact that they had concentrated a large force at Wilmington, in expectation of attack, was ascertained.

Word-pictures of the manner in which Uncle Samuel's boys draw rations from the Rebels might not be inappropriate, but suffice it to say at present that poultry and swine always awaken a desire of possession in his bosom. Horses also have their taking points to the eye of a mounted man, and transferals of Secesh animals to Government forage is not unfrequent. This war is expensive, and somebody must support it, when we cannot collect the money from the originators of it to support its prosecution we do the next best thing, by using their horses, &c.

Some on whom we levied were inclined to be slightly indignant at these summary measures, and told us of the time when Southern invaders should ride rough-shod over our Northern homes. With all due deference we begged to differ in our conclusions.

On the 21st the force returned here and found that the Expedition had not yet left Beaufort in consequence of bad weather.—It was several days after before it sailed. On the arrival at Port Royal, S. C., it was found that Gen. Foster, who had accompanied the force, was not to be in command. This was not satisfactory to some, but he has finally returned here and set to work actively.

This City has been strongly fortified, and is naturally well situated for defence, being on the Peninsula at the confluence of the Trent and Neuse Rivers, the gun-boats in either River being thus enabled to command the approaches to it. The force here now is larger than is needed for the actual defence of the place against any force that the Rebels can send, but is hardly large enough for extended operations. The greater part of the forces returned last night from a five days forage in the adjoining Counties, during which time they dispersed several bands of Rebels, burning their camps, and capturing a number of prisoners and 40 stand of arms. A force is still absent in Hyde County, where a company of the 3rd N. Y. Cavalry and one of the 1st N. C. Union Volunteers had a desperate encounter with a band of guerillas last week, in which our loss was 5 killed and 13 wounded, and that of the enemy 15 killed, 12 wounded and 5 prisoners. The morale of the Army here is good, and the general desire is to meet the foe, that we may cast in our mite for the suppression of this revolt.

The execution of the Emancipation Act in its true intent, would forever crush the hopes of Rebellion, and place us on the speedy road to success. A disposition to carry it out is rapidly being developed in the army in every quarter. The Blacks who are flocking into our lines in this depot show by their presence their belief in the good intentions of the Government. Their muscular arms do good service for the Government in many ways.

From the North letters from various sources assure me that a great revulsion of feeling has taken place since the November election, following which expressions of disloyalty were so rife.

Some dogs are noble, but it is only the meanest of skulking curs that would take such blows as the "Peace" men of the North have received from Southern Journals and not resent them.

The expressions of bitter loathing and utter hostility with which the Richmond papers have met all the propositions of the N. Y. Herald, N. Y. World and their compeers has opened the eyes of many who believed that a Union with Slavery was better than an exhausting war. There are few at the North who have the courage to advocate Disunion. The Union meetings that just now are being so generally held there give evidence of the spirit which will yet meet the crisis with all that is demanded of it.

The passage of the Conscription Act places at the disposal of the President the whole available force of the Union, of which privilege he will probably avail himself as far as needful.

We feel cheerful and hopeful of final success. The weather is beautiful, and the presence of flowers in garden and woodland gives token of the Spring. Plum and Peach trees are in blossom, and on a scene decidedly Southern the silent beams of a March sun comes gently down.

With renewed expressions of regard to yourself and family,

I remain,
Yours sincerely,
THOMAS LOW,
Lieut. 23rd N. Y. Battery.

At the risk of depriving our readers of their sleep to-night we publish the following terrible warning from an anonymous correspondent:

TO THE EDITOR OF THE WORLD!

Hooker's army is doomed—the trap is set. If 60,000 men lost summer defeated "Young Napoleon," how easy for 200,000 to destroy Hooker's "eagle" army. In ninety days hence the cowardly North will on their knees beg for peace. 700,000 brave southerners are in the field, and they will make short work of it. Mark what I prophecy.

"BEAUREGARD."

We would not advise any one to buy gold or sell government securities upon the strength of "Beauregard's" dreadful prophecies. It is very clear that the southern army, more than the northern fools, are not all dead yet.

Pork and Pies.—A Brief Chapter on Diet.

Pork and pie have a great deal to answer for in this country, and we wish most heartily that the old Jewish law regarding the usage of the former could be observed by our people. Few persons have digestive organs of sufficient strength to assist in the meat, and whether we eat it boiled, roasted or fried, or more indigestible still; in the shape of sausage meat, it is almost certain to rebel against us. The editor of the Newcastle American says it is but seldom he ever sees this food in the family, but told the curiosity the other day to enumerate how much fat or grease was combined in two big dumpy-looking sausages, weighing perhaps half a pound. The result was that over two teaspoonfuls of clear lard was extracted from those two sausages alone. We have frequently seen men and women, too, eating that sort of thing and have heard them complain that "it did not eat very well;" we should think not. A tablespoonful of lard between the sensitive coats of the stomach is not apt to induce the most delightful sensations, and those persons who persist in using pork in any shape, would find themselves much better off without it. Down with the sausage let us have no more of it; it has created enough disease already, and we hope that it will soon disappear from our tables entirely.

We are borne out in our dislike of pork by medical testimony of a high character. Repeatedly have physicians declared that it was unwholesome, and accompanied with the people cannot relinquish the detestable food. We are "down" on pies no doubt, however, in so great a degree as we are down pork. Pies, made in the proper manner, are not necessarily unwholesome, but in the hands of ordinary cooks they are tremendous weapons of offence. The unwholesomeness of pies arises mainly from the quantity of butter (shortening) employed in the paste. Paste, baked between two crusts, is not unhealthy, but the crust itself is, and lies heavily on the stomach. The butter turns sour, gives flatulence, and creates distress generally in persons of ordinary digestive force. In the country, everybody eats pie; at morning, noon and night there is a deluge of pie which old and young eagerly attack. The little children cry for it; the old ones demand it; and we found with horror, on one occasion, a woman belate that she had just baked seventeen pies for the week. "How many are there in your family?" we asked. "Two," she said. Comment is superfluous. Pie is a good thing in its way, but it is not a provender food, and to live on it mainly, is to be dyspeptic and full of all manner of minor troubles. The man who introduced pie and pork, as articles of diet, has a great deal to answer for; and consumers of such edibles have usually a hearty doctor's bill to settle annually.

Fearful Scene in an Indian Court of Justice.

The Times, of India, supplies the following details of a tragedy which took place in an Indian Court of Justice:

"On the 25th ultimo, a horrible tragical occurrence took place at Raepore, the particulars of which are as follows:—At ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day, a powerfully made man, of the Brinjaree caste, presented a petition to Lieut. Faber, the Assistant Commissioner, who directed him to file his plaint in court at four p. m. At the hour named, the man returned and presented his plaint, in which he preferred a charge of assault, by which he stated he had sustained loss of character and felt himself seriously aggrieved. Lieut. Faber gave an order that the case should be investigated by the Tehseeldar of Drogg, and returned his petition to the complainant, but the latter earnestly begged that the case might be tried by Lieutenant Faber himself, who, however, refused to do so, when the man declined to receive back his petition. On this, the Mial Khwan, or vernacular reader, directed the complainant to leave the Court. Finding that entreaties were of no avail, the man left the Court, but soon afterwards returned, and, notwithstanding the presence of numerous policemen, peons, and others, he managed, without being noticed, to walk close up to the Mial Khwan, whom he deliberately stabbed twice with a dagger which he had concealed about his person. After this he made an attempt to stab Lieut. Faber, but in doing so fortunately missed his aim and fell. He, however, soon recovered himself, and, jumping up, flourished his dagger in a most frantic manner. The crowd of persons at the time assembled in the Court House cleared out as quickly as they could, but before they could get away he stabbed one of them, who like himself, came there with a petition. Lieutenant Faber and Messrs Wrottesley and De Lisle followed him, calling out to the crowd to disarm him, but all to no purpose, as everyone was panic-stricken at the furious conduct of the assassin. A Madras Sepoy charged him with his bayonet, but the Brinjaree warded off the blow with his dagger, and felled the Sepoy to the earth. One of the policemen hereupon struck him a blow on the head with a stick, when the fellow, after ripping open the side of another policeman, who happened to come in his way, stabbed himself twice in the stomach. At this juncture orders were issued to shoot him down, and a bullet was sent through his body which wounded the spine; this caused him completely hors de combat, and our Lieutenant Faber asking how what had induced him to act in the manner he had done, he replied that the Mial Khwan had received a bribe of 2,000 rupees from the opposite party to prevent justice being meted out to him. This was all that could be elicited from him, as he was then in a sinking state, and died within an hour of receiving the fatal wound. The policeman whose side was ripped open, is considered to be out of danger; but the Mial Khwan, and the other man whom he stabbed, are mortally wounded, and dying, if, indeed, they be not already dead."

Strawberries have made their appearance in New York, but they are held at prices so exhorbitant that nobody but a thief or an army contractor can look at them.

Col. Haultain's Speech.

Col. Haultain said that, in common with many others, he felt considerable difficulty in measuring the question which was now before the House. The difficulty, however, arose from the fact—and it was a melancholy fact—that he had not sufficient confidence either in the hon. gentlemen who now governed the country or in those who governed it last year. (Hear, hear.) With regard to the late Government, he had no confidence in it; and it must be known to all hon. gentlemen who occupied a seat in this House that he (Col. Haultain) was strongly opposed to the Administration in question, and did everything he could to remove them from power. He did not wish to do anything which would stultify the past; but he thought that the motion now before the House called upon him not so much to declare his opinion with regard to the past, as with regard to the present. [Hear, hear.] In voting against the motion he believed he would be expressing confidence in the present Government; but in recording a vote on the other side of the question, he did not consider that he would be declaring confidence in their predecessors. If the latter was the case, he would rather leave the House, and not vote at all. [Hear, hear.] He had come to the House prepared to support the present Government, because he believed that there had been grave mismanagement in times past, and that it was necessary there should be a change. He had been prepared to support them because their policy was, in some respects, what he approved—namely, in so far as concerned retrenchment and the propriety of investigation into past mismanagement. He had not felt called upon to abandon them, because he did not then know that they had abandoned the principles they so lee; professed. The first thing which has weakened his confidence was the speech of the hon. Commissioner of Crown Lands; and he could not conceive how, in a few short days, that hon. gentleman could declare that his long-cherished principles were useless and ineffectual. He trusted his hon. friends opposite would not think he was influenced by any private or personal feelings in making these remarks. It should be the duty of every hon. member to consider the solemn obligations which rested upon him; and in view of these obligations he (Colonel Haultain) felt himself bound to lay aside all personal feelings and predilections, and speak on behalf of the interests of the Province. He had already alluded to the abandonment of principles of the Hon. Commissioner of Crown Lands. The substance of the hon. gentleman's speech was that no matter what principles a man might have advocated while in opposition, the claims of office were stronger, and he was justified in setting these principles aside. It was far from his wish to misrepresent his hon. friend, but he did believe that was the substance of his language; that no matter what views he might have professed in opposition, he was at liberty to set them aside when in the Government. Such a principle was monstrous in the extreme. If put in practice in social life, it would produce a moral chaos. For this cause he was altogether at a loss to understand the reason why his hon. friend had so expressed himself. It would be a different thing to allow principles to remain for some time in abeyance; but he could not justify their abandonment. [Hear, hear.] The declaration to which he [Col. Haultain] had referred was the first blow to the sympathies which he entertained, in a strong degree, with hon. gentlemen on the Treasury benches. There was one point, however, which he had never entirely agreed with them; and that was on the opinion held by them in relation to the defences of the country—in relation to the extent to which we should be called upon to assist the mother-country in maintaining our independence. [Hear, hear.] It was under rather peculiar circumstances that the late Government were defeated. They had introduced a most important measure—no debate took place; no opportunity was given to hon. members to express their opinions on it—it was silently rejected.—And although he (Col. Haultain) had voted for the second reading of the measure in question, he did not conceal the fact that, in his opinion, it was unadapted to the state of the country. Considerable feeling had been expressed in England on the rejection of that bill; but it was evident there was a great deal of misapprehension on that subject. Had they known what the bill really was, they would not have been so much surprised. [Hear, hear.] After relating to the general provisions of the bill introduced last year by the hon. member for Kingston, the hon. gentleman went on to say that, as one who belonged to the military profession, he felt it his duty to state what, in his opinion, would be the result of that measure. It made no provisions for the previous instruction of the officers of the battalions which were to be called out for training. It would require very little thought to show that the result could only be a very large expenditure without any return whatever. Suppose, for instance, a battalion of 800 men, called together for fourteen days' training, from the adjacent country, and provided—as the bill directed—with an Adjutant and a Sergeant-Major, how could these two men instruct them within that limited period. [Hear, hear.] The most they could do would be to take the officers and give them fourteen days' instruction, leaving the non-commissioned officers and men with nothing to do. Under these circumstances, he did think the rejection of the bill was justified. It was the duty of the new Government to bring in another; and, as he (Col. Haultain) had introduced the bill in question, he thought it his duty to say a word upon it. They had not then a sufficiency of information on which to proceed; and it was therefore judged right to delay anything like a permanent organization in the absence of that information. Our population appeared favorable to volunteering, and this being the case, it was determined to facilitate it by the removal of obstructions, and by offering a certain amount of encouragement to the volunteers. It was also resolved, in view of the feasibility of a larger defensive force being called out, that the officers of the Sedentary Militia should be drilled. He believed the principles of the bill were essentially sound, and that it went as far as we could go, under the circumstances, and with the amount of information we had at the time. But it was certainly not the only length to which we should go. He was of opinion that a thoroughly qualified commission—a commission so constituted as to be altogether beyond any suspicion of partisanship—should have been appointed to enquire and report on the subject of our defences. The late Government was wrong in giving a political complexion to the commission on this subject which they appointed. Another objection which would be urged against the commission, named by the late Administration was the look of volunteer officers upon it; and he (Col. Haultain) had voted for the second reading of the measure in question, in order to give their views. This, as a matter of course, was not by any means satisfactory to the volunteer force. There, again, the different branches of the service which it was intended to create were not represented. There was no doubt an excellent infantry officer on the commission; but it had been proposed, in addition to infantry, to organize a considerable force of artillery, &c. The present Government, if they had objected to not building anything with the report of that commission; but he could not approve of the present Government, after having [illegible] a Commission, and [illegible] their opinion, as appeared from the remarks of a gentleman who had formerly occupied a seat in this House, Mr. Rankin. In introducing the bill of the present Government, during last session, by (Col. Haultain) had particularly mentioned that the new Government had not then all the information about the matter. The Hon. Attorney-General West could not be surprised at his opposition to his present course on this subject, inasmuch as he had never concealed from that hon. gentleman—either in public or in private—his opinion on the question of Militia policy. He (Col. Haultain) believed that the volunteer system was not sufficient for the requirements of Canada, as at present placed; and it was wrong to rely on that which, in the hour of trial must inevitably fail us. [Hear, hear.] There was one great point in the instruction of the soldier which the volunteer could not learn. He might become proficient in the use of the rifle; he might learn the evolutions of armed men; but he could not learn discipline—he could not acquire that habit of absolute obedience to his officers, without which a body of armed men became a mere armed rabble. [Hear, hear.] The habits acquired by volunteers were rather the reverse. An experienced volunteer officer had admitted to him (Col. Haultain) that, if called upon to bring a force into the field, he would rather take men from the plough than take the volunteers alone. The volunteer went to drill for an hour or two; if anything annoyed him he would go no longer; and this fact, instead of inculcating habits of obedience, it produced those of independence. It was necessary, in order to render a force effective, that the men who composed it should learn all those things which might be required of them in active service. Had we any system by which to instruct our volunteer officers on a large scale—had we any means by which to make them familiar with the internal economy of a large body of men—any practical method by which they could be made acquainted with the different responsibilities of those who were in charge of men? The volunteer could take his breakfast at home, then go to drill for a couple of hours, and return to his home to find his dinner in readiness for him. There was no responsibility of officers, no cohesion of force, no routine, nothing by which to create a strong and firmly commanded force from an armed mob. (Hear, hear.) We had ample evidence in the neighboring country of the results which followed from this state of things; and it was great blindness to go on, basing our course on such a lamentable system. The American prints were full of articles bewailing the want of experienced officers and the absence of discipline in their army.—[The hon. gentleman here read a well-known extract from the New York World, giving Gen. Halleck's opinion on the superior discipline and mobility of the Southern army in comparison with the Northern, and its causes.] This question—the organization of our defensive force—was a matter for calm and grave deliberation, and not for hasty settlement, in obedience to supposed popular will. If we regarded the question merely on the best means of sparing as far as possible the lives of our population, in case of emergency, it was important we should consider the best means of ensuring system and discipline. "If," said the New York Times, "one-half of the 600,000 men "had been well drilled and inured to camp "life, they would have been more effective "than the whole 600,000. The slaughter "of the undrilled troops was frightful." The question would doubtless be put: was there any military necessity for such precaution? Was there any fear of a collision with our neighbors? He knew that some hon. gentlemen held there was no danger. This might of course be true; but if not we should be prepared to consider the other alternative. Were we to go on looking always at the bright side of the picture, sowing our fields, reaping our corn, and carrying on our commerce? A few dou[illegible] would say that, in any case, the mother country ought to defend us; and here he (Col. Haultain) would take the occasion of remarking that he disapproved strongly of the tone used by the hon. gentlemen composing the present Administration, in their answer to the despatch of the Colonial Minister. We were doubtless jealous of our rights and privileges, and jealous of any interference with them; but he was sure that, on consideration, all must admire the careful, cautious and respectful tone of the Colonial Minister. [Cheers.] It was very unwise to resist the suggestions of the mother-country, for it should be borne in mind that it was a suggestion which had been made to us, and not a demand. [Hear, hear.] "If," says the Duke of Newcastle, "I urge upon you the importance of speedily "resuming measures for some military organ"ization of the inhabitants of Canada than "that which now exists, it must not be "supposed that Her Majesty's Government "is influenced by any particular apprehen"sion of an attack on the Colony at the "present moment, but undoubtedly the "necessity for preparation, which has from "time to time been urged by successive "Secretaries of State, is greatly increased "by the presence, for the first time on the "American Continent, of a large standing "army, and the unsettled condition of the "neighboring States." Assuredly there was nothing could be construed into an offensive demand in this. [Hear, hear.]—Either we were to give ourselves up hopelessly to the enemy, or else we should devote more attention to our defences than hon. gentlemen opposite were disposed to do. Having reached our present condition of wealth and importance, with a population of two millions, we should certainly be prepared to do something in our own behalf. There were some who appeared to think that we could not defend ourselves; but he was glad to say that they were very few in number. If it were really true that we were incapable of defending ourselves, then we were not justified in spending a single pound on defences; but if we admitted that it should be attempted, then it was certainly our duty to accept the wise suggestions of the mother-country, by whom we were told that the volunteers "constitute a force "which cannot suffice for Canada in the "event of war. They might form an "admirable small contingent, but what "would be required would be a large army. "They might form a force stronger than "is necessary in time of peace to secure in"ternal tranquility, but would be inadequate "to repel external attack in time of war." Now it was not for times of peace we wanted a defensive force—it was in case of war. The Imperial Government, who enjoyed the assistance of the first military men in the world, told us that our organization was insufficient in case of war. He (Col. Haultain) hoped his countrymen would consider and attend to this, more particularly as there was a large party in the mother-country who considered the colonies a mere cause of expense, and wanted to sever the connection. We should either sever from the mother country, or else we must be prepared to assist in the defence of the Province. We [illegible] except all the privileges of the constitution, and none of the disadvantages. Hon. gentlemen opposite urged that "should war occur, it will be "produced by the acts of the ru[illegible] and they "have inclination to do anything that may "seem to foreshadow, perhaps to provoke, "a state of things which would be disas"trous to every Interest of the Province." This was not an argument applicable to the case. If war occurred, it might not be through provocation on the part of England, but on the part of the United States. (Hear. Hear.) No act whatever of the Imperial Government might tend to bring about hostilities—indeed he believed that, under no conceivable circumstances, would England do anything to excite a collision. Why, the mother country had been accused of pusillanimity on account of her desire to remain on friendly terms with the United States! If the British Empire, of which we formed part, got driven into a war through the acts of foreign powers, could we, as an integral portion of that empire, refuse to assist in her defence. Our position among the nations was due to the fact that we constituted a part of that distinguished country. (Cheers.) What could we do if we were not connected with the British Empire? How could we maintain an independent position—how could we defray the expenses of ambassadors, consuls, or even of a small defensive force, when even in our present position it was said we could not do so. (Hear, hear.) In fact we were far more interested in keeping up the connection with the mother country, than she was in keeping it up with us. He [Col. Haultain] believed that, at the present moment, we were rather a cause of embarrassment than otherwise to the mother country, as we prevented her from taking that stand against insult and aggression which she would otherwise take. [Hear, hear.] How did our own Government try to meet the wishes of the Imperial Government? One of the first acts of the Government was to appoint to the head of the Militia a man who knew no more about military matters than he did what was going on in the moon. [Hear, hear.] He did not think that the country had, for years past, proceeded in a right direction with regard to the militia. This was evidenced by the helpless condition, as regards defence, in which the country at present was. This condition should not continue; and it should be the endeavor of the House so to develope the resources of the country that we should be prepared for any emergency in future. He considered that the Government were not particularly happy in the appointment of the Deputy-Adjutant-General. This was a position, the importance of which could not be over-rated. In order to prove this, he would again refer to the British army. In England there was a political, or executive, and military head to the army. This was necessitated by the constitution. But the command of the army or navy was not given to men totally ignorant of those branches of the service. What would the British army be without a real head? Yet this was the position of the Militia in Canada. (Hear, hear.) See the manner in which they proceeded in England. There to every political head there was given a military adviser. How was it in this country? It was quite right that there should be a Minister of Militia in accordance with the constitution. Was the country to be satisfied that this was all that should be done. He was astonished to hear the Premier state in the House that he knew nothing of military matters; and it was quite evident that the Deputy-Adjutant-General knew nothing of military matters. The crisis of the country was such that an immediate change ought to be insisted on. In his opinion the Deputy-Adjutant-General ought to be one of large experience—one who had served in the British army. He ought to be a man to whom the Militia could look for advice and counsel on every occasion advice was wanted. Unfortunately, Mr. Powell was not such a head to the Militia. [Hear, hear.] It might be said that the Governor General was the head of the Militia. So he was of the army. But no one supposed that in the sense he was speaking of that the Governor was the head of the Militia. It might also be said that the appointment of Brigade-Majors obviated the necessity of the Deputy-Adjutant-General being a practical, experienced military man; but the country has no guarantee that those Brigade Majors themselves knew their duty. [Hear, hear.] He considered that the appointment of Mr. Powell was so bad that it brought particular ridicule on the office of Deputy-Adjutant-General to have such a man filling it. [Hear, hear.] What, he would like to know, was the use in having such an office at all when men were appointed to it who had not one iota of the experience which they ought to have. He had heard that Mr. Powell was an able man, and that he had some good sense. He believed that Mr. Powell might be an able man in his own way, and that he might do the country particular good service by purchasing trousers for the militia. (Roars of laughter.) What was the Deputy-Adjutant-General engaged at the present moment? Why, in place of instructing himself in the art of war, in view of the present crisis, he was running about Europe buying trousers and tunics. (More laughter.)

Hon. J. S. Macdonald.—Mr. Powell was well received at the Colonial Office.

Col. Haultain.—That only strengthens the opinion previously formed respecting the courtesy of the colonial office to all colonists.

Hon. J. S. Macdonald.—The country did not complain of Mr. Powell.

Col. Haultain.—The country is tired complaining, and besides this, despatch after despatch had been received from the Imperial Government on the subject of the defence of the country, and the result was—Mr. Powell. (Great Laughter.) If ridicule attached to this country, the fault was owing to the Ministry who had made such an appointment. With regard to the orders issued from headquarters to the District Colonels, some time ago, on account of which Major Campbell and Sir E. P. Tache resigned their commands, he quite agreed with the stand taken on by those gentlemen. Major Campbell had stated to him that he resigned his office with regret, and had asked him (Colonel Haultain) what he would do under the circumstances? At first he was tempted to advise Major Campbell not to mind the order, on the ground that the Ministry were ignorant of all matters relating to the Militia. But on second thought he approved of the soldierly course pursued by his friend in resigning his command when he could not obey. He thought this course much better than that taken by an honorable member in another house who, under similar circumstances, had stated that if called on to report through the Brigade-Majors, he would not have resigned; but that he would have continued as hitherto to report direct to headquarters. This course was unsoldierly and ought not to be followed. He had a few remarks to make regarding the statement of the Attorney General West, that the volunteers provided for in his bill would suffice for the defence of the country. He could tell that hon. gentleman that if his bill passed into law, there would be very few volunteers in the country [illegible] of the year. (Hear, hear.) This bill would differ from volunteering in particular [illegible]istic. The volunteer, to be a volunteer, must have a certain amount of liberty. The Government proposed to destroy his liberty, and to substitute therefor an amount of compulsion and coercion that few men in the country would stand. To show the coercion to which the volunteers would be subjected under the Government bill, he would quote the 13th and 91st section, as follows: "13. The volunteers "shall be drilled and exercised in such man"ner and at such times in each year, and "for such periods and at such places, and "either encamped or otherwise, and subject "to such returns or certificates of perform"ance of drill as the Commander-in-Chief "may from time to time order; but nothing "herein contained shall be constructed to "prevent any corps from being assembled "or ordered out at any time by the officer "commanding it for parade, or drill, or ex"ercise." "91. Any officer, non-commissioned or man of the volunteers who "neglects or refuses to attend any drill "or parade at the place and hour appointed "therefor, or who refuses or neglects to "obey the lawful order at or concerning "such drill or parade, shall thereby incur a "penalty not exceeding twenty dollars for "each offence." He did not think that the men of the country would put up with such restriction. Far better leave the system as it at present was than introduce such coercion. (Hear, hear.) Far better leave the volunteers as at present to make their own arrangements, and to impose a small fine if they wished for non-attendance, than to proceed as the government wished to do. It was necessary to have disciplined officers and men to meet any emergency that might arise, in order that the country might rest secure. At present the government had no such guarantee. There was no steps taken to discipline a body of commissioned and non-commissioned officers, and without this the country could have no security. The system, then, was altogether bad. To correct this bad system he would propose a system which he thought would work well. There were at present twenty Brigade-Majors in the country—and 130 Instructors were proposed to be appointed. There were also inspectors all under pay. Now, he could not see why those Inspectors could not do the duty of the Brigade-Majors. At all events, they made up a small army that could be made useful, not only in time of war but also in time of peace. He proposed to make use of these Brigade-Majors and Inspectors. At a very small outlay he proposed to bring together the officers and non-commissioners of the county, at a certain point in the county where would be formed a camp of instruction. To this camp he would bring a certain number of men, to whom instruction would be given. The paper organization by the bill was not worth anything. (Hear, hear.) The country wanted a body of men on whom they could rely in time of trial. It was to carry out this principle that he proposed that a number of men—say from 2,000 to 5,000 men—should be called out at regular times, to receive instruction, and be disciplined. This body would be the foundation of something better than anything could be expected under the present bill. He would propose that the 2,000 or 5,000 men should be brought together and disciplined with regularity, for one month, if not for two months, every year. The honorable gentleman here read the opinion of General Hay, Superintendent of the School of Musketry Instruction at Hythe, given in 1859 before a committee of the House of Commons. It was, in effect, that steps should first be taken to form instructors, and that then those instructors should be set work to instruct the officers and men. He proposed to proceed on the same principle here. First, he would form the proper instructors, at the camp of instruction, and then he would bring together the 2,000 or 5,000 also. He admired exceedingly the Swiss Militia law. This was a country very similar to Canada, and in it from 350,000 to 400,000 trained soldiers could be called out in any emergency. Could this be done in Canada? We could not call out even a thousand trained soldiers should the necessity arise. He was ashamed of Canada in this respect. He believed the country had arrived at this period in her history when we were bound to do something for her defence more than had hitherto been done. (Hear, hear.) The great importance of the subject would account for the vote he was about to give. He could not but feel a good deal of anxiety when he reflected on the distracted state of the neighboring Republic—which it was known bore no good will to this country. (Hear, hear.) He regretted that the policy of the Government on the subject of the defence was such as to compel him to oppose the Government. The onus of the course he was compelled to pursue lay on the Government, not on himself. He wished, in reference to a misinterpretation that might exist, to state that it was his opinion that every step ought to be taken to perpetuate the union between this and the mother-country. He did not believe that there was any party in the country which desired a separation between England and this country. (Hear, hear.) But he differed from many as to the share which this country ought to bear of her defence. The policy pursued for the public defence convinced him that he could not safely leave the defence of the country in the hands of this Government. (The hon. gentleman resumed his seat amid loud cheers.)

Seizure of British Vessels.

On the 16th instant a deputation of shippers and merchants interested in the Mexican trade waited on Earl Russell. The importance of the interview was considerably enhanced by an announcement being made during its progress that while the United States government have been seizing British vessels bound to Matamoras without any contraband of war being on board of them, Mr. Adams has been giving a special license for a ship to proceed from England to Matamoras, free from any interference by American cruisers, to carry supplies, which are stated to consist of arms and ammunition for the Mexicans in their war with France. It was also shown that the interference of the federal cruisers with the Mexican trade had the effect of enabling the Americans to establish a monopoly. The immediate object of the deputation was to elicit from the government some assurance of protection for the steamer Sea Queen, which is detained at Falmouth waiting the decision of the government.

A suggestion was made for the government to send a mail agent in the ship who would represent an official guarantee that she was bound to the port for which she cleared. Earl Russell promised to consider the proposal. He expressed much surprise on hearing of the detention of officers and supercargoes on board the Peterhoff, they not being criminals nor subject to criminal laws.

A policy of insurance was attempted to be effected at Lloyds on the 16th, the vessel being furnished with certificates from Minister Adams, addressed to Admiral Dupont, dated from the United States Legation, London, and stating that Messrs. Howell and Tilman had furnished Mr. Adams with evidence that the vessel was really bound to Matamoras with a cargo for the Mexicans, and his therefore absolutely gave them certificates at their request. The Times editorially says:

Mr. Adams has transferred the policy of the Mexican land frontier to English ports of shipment by a system of passes for English goods and merchandise, without which they are not to reach the Mexican coast. The safeguard he has granted evidently has a money value, since it was produced at Lloyds in order to obtain insurance. If it was likely to reduce the premium it gave shippers an unfair advantage over all firms to which Mr. Adams, from caprice or misinformation, might refuse his pass. But the commerce of England will not accept exemptions that gives freedom of action on an American ticket of leave. All the coast of Mexico is neutral territory, and by no right can one of its ports be blockaded. In continuing our commercial intercourse with Mexico we deny even the liability to any detention or interruption. The traffic is legitimate and cannot be carried on in the letters of permits and certificates from the United States legation. English merchants cannot go as supplicants to foreign ministers for licenses to transact business. The whole proceeding is monstrous, whether as a calculation or a blunder.

The Times's city article gives further particulars of the affair. It says:

The gentlemen named in the pass by Mr. Adams are Mr. Howell, an American contractor, and General Zirman, of the Mexican army; and it was the agents of these who attempted to effect the insurance Mr. Adams in a letter said he granted the certificates on account of the creditable object in view. That object was to ship arms and ammunition for the Mexicans in the war against France. The insurance proposed was £80,000 on the arms and £30,000 on the ship's freight.

The Globe reports:

Mr. Adams felt so chagrined at the publication of his letter to the federal admiral that he visited the city to censure the indiscretion of the parties who gave it publicity.

The Daily News says:

There can be no doubt that the irritation between England and the United States is gradually increasing. There are unquestionably faults of both sides. But except in the case of the Alabama it is impossible to point to any one act which offers just ground of complaint, Russell is so doubt determined to do all he can to prevent another Alabama affair. But unless his offers are supported by public opinion they will be unavailing. And certainly unless the temper of the country alters it is difficult to see how it can be avoided.

The Ottawa Canal.

The following letter from Sheriff Treadwell, we take from the columns of the Montreal Gazette. Few men have done more to direct public attention to the importance of our North-Western communications than Sheriff Treadwell, and it now seems likely that he will see the realization of hopes and anticipations which most of his contemporaries deemed to be fantastic and visionary.

SIR,—The present period is one of intense interest in the history of our country, and the action of the Provincial Parliament during its present session is one fraught with the highest consequences to the future advancement of the Province and all British America. The development of the resources of Canada can only be effected by opening up immediately the great natural avenues that are given us to convey the produce of our mines, our forests, our fields and our fisheries to the ocean and the markets of the world.

The subject of a line of Canal from Montreal to Ottawa City, and thence to the mouth of the French River, on Lake Huron, has been before the public for thirty years. The subject has been fully discussed, the surveys have been made by two eminent Engineers, Messrs Shanly and Clarke, with an able staff of Engineers, and found perfectly practicable and easy of accomplishment, and now it only remains to form a company with a capital of some ten or twelve millions of dollars, obtain a charter, with a grant of two millions of acres of land from the Government as its contribution, and go on with the work immediately, it being a favorable time to obtain labor, as the poor now suffer from the almost entire failure of the crops in some sections last year. The small locks of the Grenville Canal should be instantly enlarged, and the locks on the new Canal should be the size of that at St. Ann's, with two feet more water on the mitre sill to admit of the largest size barges between Montreal and the mouth of French River, where will grow up in half a century a city next to Montreal in point of importance.

In the autumn of 1853, in company with Mr. John McNaughton, Provincial Land Surveyor, I visited Lake Nippissing, and ran levels across most of the portages, where falls caused the obstruction in the navigation of the Ottawa and Matawan Rivers, and we were astonished to find that the height of land between the two rivers was less than two miles in width, and the elevation less than fifteen feet, with small, deep lakes sufficient for a summit pond. I feel confident that when this subject is fully discussed, as it must be on the arrival at Quebec of the deputation from Chicago and the Western States, and if a favorable charter is granted by the Government, that the work will be immediately taken up and the work completed, and prove the best investment of any public work on this continent, as no doubt the stock will be taken in Canada, in the Western States and in Britain, and it would not surprise me if in twenty years more a canal of the dimensions I have indicated would be enlarged from the profits of the trade passing through it. Should there be any difficulty in getting the stock taken, the Imperial Government should contribute to it, as it would be opening up a safe internal line of communication to the great Lakes and to the interior of British America through the Valley of the Saskatchewan.

This canal would afford an outlet to the surplus produce of the great West of the United States, which they, at this moment, do not possess, as the Mississippi is closed against it, and the Erie Canal is unable to float off their productions, and which if it increase at the same ratio that it has during the last twenty years all the channels will require to be enlarged. This route also is five hundred miles shorter than from Chicago to Montreal, Quebec and Liverpool than any route that can be opened. It will open up the interior of Canada to immediate settlement, and be a home for millions of the surplus population of Britain and other nations of Europe, and will do much to cement good feeling between Canada and the Western States. While on the subject of canals you will pardon me for adverting to another canal which in my opinion would so much to increase the business of the great Ottawa Canal. It is the opening up the Canal from the St. Lawrence to Lake Champlain, on the scale of the St. Lawrence Canals. If a charter were granted to a Company to do the work, I think that the capital would be immediately subscribed in New York and Boston, as the route has been surveyed by an eminent Engineer, Mr. Sarrie, of New York. This would give to New York and Boston a water-line carried entirely through British territory, across the Province, increase immensely our trade, and might do much to soften down the hostile feeling that exists between the two countries—and increase the shipping interest of the St. Lawrence to an enormous extent.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

On the night of the 7th, or rather the morning of the 8th inst., the Want of Confidence motion of Mr. J. A. Macdonald was pressed to a vote, when there appeared a majority of five against the Ministry. The vote stood, 64 yeas, 59 nays—an unprecedented large vote, and strange as it may appear from the noise made about the Representation and School questions, Ministers had a majority from Upper Canada. Notwithstanding that Lower Canada had its own way on these questions, it yet gave a majority against the Government. The men who, a year ago, refused to tolerate the former Administration keeping the reins of Government any longer, and who gave their assent to the present men having them, have, by their recent act tabooed them. So fickle and uncertain is the tenure by which public men hold office in Canada, that good men will scarcely submit to be placed in a situation where such probabilities overtake them. On the announcement of the vote being made, the Premier moved that when the House did adjourn it should stand adjourned to Monday, in order, no doubt, to consult what to do under the circumstances. A very general impression is, that the Ministry will appeal to the country, in which case there is a good reason to believe that it will be sustained.

Whatever may be the issue, we sincerely hope that the former reckless, unscrupulous men may not be allowed to renew their ruinous course in driving the country to bankruptcy. The present state of the country calls loudly for its friends to be careful how they act. An almost insatiable lust for power and place in our public men, leads them to promise, coax, flatter and threaten to attain their ends. The people, aware of this, are not slack in exacting severe terms for their support. And so between the recipients and the bestowers of power, the permanent interests of the country suffer—corruption stalks forth unabashed, and boasts of its advocates and apologists all over the land and among every class of the population. One of the most insidious and dangerous modes of corruption before the Legislature just now is that of the Sectarian Colleges, seeking permanent support from the National University Fund. It is well known that the late Coalition Ministry was in favour of the Division Scheme, recommended by the Methodist Conference. It is also well known that John A. Macdonald advocated this scheme some 16 years ago. The Old Kirk folks, as well as the Methodists, have become strong advocates of the Division Scheme; so we may look for this measure forming a test at the Polls. A great fuss all over the Province has been made of Scott's Separate School Bill—but scarce a syllable uttered against the Colleges seeking Government support. If it be an evil to support by public funds Sectarian Common Schools, is it not also an evil to support Sectarian Colleges? Now, it may be found, when too late, that in this affair the people have been straining at a gnat, and swallowing a camel. Has any one heard of a Methodist body passing resolutions against Separate Schools? No, they are too much interested in the matter of Sectarian Education to moot such a question. A desperate effort will be made to elect men favourable to the division of the University Endowment. This measure, if carried, will open the door for all the evils of Church and State connexion. We may expect to see Separate School rise up like mushrooms everywhere. Our boasted S. System will go by the Board, and we shall have all the blessings of a system to catch and grab. Having escaped from a tremendous effort to fasten Church and State upon us, can it be possible that we shall recede from the high ground we stand upon, and tamely put our necks under a yoke which neither we nor our fathers were able to bear? We feel keenly in this matter as it is likely to come up in the election contest about to take place, and as the inauguration of a system as that proposed by the so-called advocates of University Reform will be fraught with the most serious injury in a ruling country like Canada. Here, happily, we now enjoy freedom in a great measure from the strife often consequent upon a multitude of religious sects living together from the fact that each of these must depend upon itself for extension. If the plan proposed be acted upon, it will anew open the door for quarrelling, bitter acrimony, jealousy and ill feeling—a state of affairs devoutly to be deprecated by all well wishers to the country.

We have received a pamphlet written by Henry Wentworth Monk, containing "An appeal to the American people and the civilised world in reference to the great question of the day Peace or War," "A protest against the American people for still persisting in endeavoring to conquer a peace by force of arms," and three letters—one to a person in Toronto, one to Horace Greely and one to Fowler and Wells—all upon the war, and propounding conditions of peace otherwise than by force of arms.

The whole does not occupy 11 pages, so the author cannot be charged with prolixity. He proposes to allow the South to separate on condition that they will abolish Slavery, the North indemnifying them for the loss of their Slave property; arguing not very unreasonable at all, if allowed to separate peaceably they would in the course of time seek readmission into the Union, which would be readily acceded to by the North when Slavery was abolished. The author merits credit more for the philanthropy of his suggestions than the ability with which he has presented them.

We have received two Communications this week,—one signed "Q" and the other "Truth."—but as neither writers furnished us with their names we cannot insert them with our standing rules. We would also remind "Truth" that postage should be paid on intended communications.

THE WAR NEWS.

The news received since our last issue leaves no doubt but that General Hooker has suffered not only defeat, but disaster. After crossing the Rappahannock South, to attack the enemy; after driving the enemy from the position on the rear of Fredericksburg, and after nine days very severe fighting, he was obliged to recross the River northward, to save his forces from annihilation. The struggle was of a most sanguinary character. Heaps of slain from both armies covered the field of battle, and many a brave, noble fellow on both sides was sacrificed in the strife.

The statements given of the losses put down the Federal at 15,000, and the Confederate at 18,000, in killed, wounded and prisoners. This battle, or rather succession of battles, commenced on Monday the 28th of April, and continued on till Wednesday of the following week. With the exception of the failure of a corps of Germans in the Federal army, there was no lack of pluck, valor or daring on both sides. The North, however, have, as every where else in this war, has had to succumb to the superior skill of the Confederate Generals. There has not yet appeared amongst the Federals a man capable of superintending the movements of an army; while the South has several able commanders, and always one of these is in every engagement of any moment.

General Hooker has, in his last attempt, "spoiled a horn." He is not discouraged however. After recruiting and getting his men in order he recrossed the Rappahannock in search of the foe, determined to try him again. General Lee, it appears, had retired towards Richmond, and likely the next fighting will be in the vicinity of Richmond. If Hooker gets the chance that McClellan had last year, he will surely attempt the capture of the Confederate capital. It will not surprise us to hear that "fighting Joe" has got entrapped some fine morning, and be bagged by his more skillful adversary.

The Conscription Act is causing trouble in New York, and the Income Tax is much disliked—two very unpleasant penalties to pay for indulging in war.

This gigantic war is not at all likely to terminate yet. Both sides may lay their account with yet greater sacrifices being demanded and they will realise to their cost that war is a "dear game."

We observe from the New York papers that several regiments of the two year volunteers have returned, and have been received with enthusiasm by the populace.

Recent reports state that the Federals have succeeded in cutting off supplies from Vicksburg, so that this important post for the South will have to yield. Other accounts, however, deny that the supplies are cut off, and state that the canal to obviate the passing of the fortress is a failure.

☞ By latest news we learn that on Tuesday, at 3 o'clock p. m., the Governor proceeded to the Legislative Council, and after giving his assent to several Bills prorogued Parliament with the following speech:

Honorable Gentlemen of the Legislative Council, Gentlemen of the Legislative Assembley.

The course of events has shown that it is not possible to conduct in a satisfactory manner, the public business of the Province under the existing conditions of the Legislative body. Within the last year two successive Administrations have failed to secure the confidence of the Legislative Assembly. I have therefore determined to prorogue this Parliament, with a view to its immediate dissolution, in order that I may ascertain in the most constitutional manner the sense of the people upon the present state of public affairs. The pressing importance of various questions connected with the trade and industry of the Province, and with its internal improvement and defence demands that no time shall be lost in convening a new Parliament. In bidding you farewell, I desire to express my earnest prayer that the constituencies of this Province may be guided by an All-Wise Providence to the selection of representatives, whose judgment, forbearance and patriotism may enable them to co-operate with me in my efforts to maintain the honor of our Sovereign, and to promote the prosperity and happiness of the people of Canada.

A re-construction of the Ministry is likely to take place. Messrs Blair, Wallbridge and Mowat are spoken of for Upper Canada; Messrs Dorion and Holton for Lower Canada.

We shall have all the bustle and excitement of an election upon us at once. We wait the arrival of our worthy member from Quebec, before we say anything upon the subject. We sincerely hope he may decide to stand for the County again; we have no hesitation in saying if he does he is sure to be re-elected.

The Council of Ashburnham met on the 4th of May, pursuant to adjournment.

Present—Robert D. Rogers, Reeve, H. Bennett, John Ludgate, H. T. Strickland and H. Calcutt.

Robinson Moore, Esq., was appointed Collector for the current year.

The Reeve, John Ludgate and H. T. Strickland were appointed a Committee to see to the repairing of Streets and Bridges.

The Council also granted a lot of ground west of Mark street to the Board of Trustees of said Village, for the purpose of erecting a School House thereon if the Trustees thought it proper to do so.

The Council adjourned to meet again on the first Monday in June, at the hour of 7 o'clock p. m.

☞ A mass meeting of all the loyal leagues, is called for the 27th day of May instant, to be held at the city of Utica, State of New York, for the purpose of manifesting to their country and the world, their fixed determination to sustain the government in prosecuting the war which it is compelled to wage in its own defence against a groundless and wicked rebellion.

There has been a long debate on the Interest question and a Bill has been agreed to fixing the maximum of interest at eight per cent. It is a pity that the Legislature will not learn wisdom from the records of the past, to allow money like all other commodities, to find its own level in the community. What does it avail passing laws to prevent the Usurer from lending his money at high rates? He will do despite of the Legislature. Opposition to the existing law comes chiefly from Lower Canada.

COMPANY DRILL.

(COMMUNICATED.)

To our Subscribers and the Officers and Non-Commissioned Officers of the Sedentary and Volunteer force:

We intend to publish a Catechism on Company Drill—the movements of a Company at Light Infantry,—Formation of advance and rear guards, &c.,—in the hope that it will materially assist the Officers and Non-Commissioned Officers of the Volunteers and Sedentary Forces in acquiring a thorough knowledge of Company Drill, as laid down in the Field Exercise and Evolutions of Infantry, for 1862.

GENERAL PRINCIPLES.

Question 1st.—State the method of placing a Company.

Q. 2nd—How is a Company formed, and told off?

A. 2nd—It will fall in, in two ranks, at close order, files lightly touching, and will be told off from right to left,—odd numbers being right files and even numbers left files; it will then be divided into two Subdivisions and four Sections.

Q. 3rd—How are the Companies of a Battalion told off?

A. 3rd—They are told off right and left alternately, the same as the files of a Company.

Q. 4th—When a Company cannot be divided into Subdivisions of equal strength which will be the stronger?

A. 4th—When there is an odd number of files in a Company, in a Right Company the Right Subdivision will be the stronger, and in a Left Company the Left Subdivision will be the stronger.

Q. 5—When a Subdivision is divided into Sections of unequal strength which will be the stronger?

A. 5—If there is an Odd File it will be placed in the Right Section of the Right Company; in a Left Company in the Left Section. If there are two Odd Files the Flank Sections will be the stronger. If there are three odd files in a Right Company the Third Section will be the weaker, and in a Left Company the Second Section will be the weaker.

Q. 6—Before a Company, singly formed, is told off for drill, what caution will the Instructor give?

A. 6—Tell off as a Right (or Left) Company.

Q. 7—Who compose the Supernumerary rank?

A. 7—The Subaltern, Sergeants, Drummers and Pioneers.

AGENTS and S. S. N. will appear next week.

W. H.—The next annual Provincial Convention of Teachers will meet at Kingston early in August.

C. E.—Why the County Board does not publish the names of those candidates that pass the second-grade examinations, is more than we can tell. It is done in other counties, and is a good plan in more ways than one.

S. J.—There is a 2nd edition of Robertson's Grammar. It is an improvement in some respects upon the 1st.

Do Teachers Study Themselves?

Many teachers assign lessons to their pupils without thought or consideration. If the pupils neglect to get them off, great is the complaint and severe the scolding or punishment. We believe, however, in many instances, that the pupils study more, apply themselves more diligently than do their teachers who "come down on hard upon them." It has always been our opinion that teachers should be as great students as their scholars. If this is not the case, we are afraid that comparatively little progress will be made. Teachers of even the most elementary branches will always find something new to learn, or some new way of imparting what they have already learned. It is a pernicious principle to imagine that in the studying is to be done by the teachers of the more advanced branches of education. It is a duty either to combat upon all. Every teacher should feel at night that he has learned something new through the day—has added something to that fund of facts and information upon which he finds it daily necessary to draw. Teachers who don't go a-head, generally get behind. There is no such a thing as standing still. They must either keep up with the improvements of the age or they will soon discover that they are becoming more and more unable to hold their ground in competition with those of a more studious and energetic disposition. Hence we urge that everytime that teachers assign studies to their pupils that they make it a point to become themselves thoroughly acquainted with those studies and all the bearings connected with them. The advantages derivable from such a course will soon manifest themselves both in teachers and taught.

Duty of Parents, &c.

SOME TRUISMS.

From the dawn of being to its close, the process of education is continually going on. Circumstances are the troubles in which the mind is cast. "Education," says Bacon, "is nothing more than good custom." The object of a teacher is not, therefore, so much to supply facts as to form habits—habits of observation, reflection and comparison, that will render the mind capable of rightly using the information which in after years it may acquire, or, in other words, of educating itself. Indeed, to attempt more, during the short and precarious period allotted to the school-master, would be altogether vain. Even this, he cannot accomplish without the co-operation of the parent. His best effort will be in a great measure nugatory, unless the parent lends his aid. But how few parents are there in this Canada of ours who are found doing so. Is it not a fact that instead of aiding the teacher in his efforts to do good to his children we often find them acting in opposition. "Sarah Jane" or "Billy" are often found at home, instead of being found in school and as a necessary consequence they make no progress in learning. And instead of putting the "saddle on the right horse," the teacher is abused (in the presence of the children) as being "no teacher," and pronounced as unfit for the situation he now occupies. Another parent join the aforesaid grumblers and another and another, till in process of time they form a party in opposition to the teacher when, at the end of the year, the teacher is dismissed, who, after a time, is succeeded by another. The new teacher experiences similar treatment; he also gets notice to quit, and so on, ad infinitum, to the end of the chapter. If there were no previously acquired habits to be uprooted, the task would be difficult in the extreme; but when these are thrown into the balance, where is the remotest chance of success. There is nothing more easily affected by external influences than the youthful mind. Early impressions are, generally speaking, indelible. During man's tedious childhood, when "the grasshopper becomes a burden," and the memory refuses to retain the events of yesterday, the occurrences of early life are ever present. Hence, therefore, arises the necessity of commencing well. The first step of the parent will either prove a material assistance or a serious detriment to the future labours of the teacher, and to the well being of the child. Children are eminently imitative. The future man will be a fair embodiment of the influences which were brought to bear upon him during the formation of his character. If Frank or Christopher in the hearing of his children allows himself to give vent to his ill nature in abusing his instructor, is it likely the children will respect him? If James permits his lips to be polluted by unclean language what can we expect but that the facility which enables the child so easily to acquire the use of his mother tongue, will also lead him to acquire its use? While the father is spending his Sabbath in the tavern must we go to the house of prayer to find the son. It may be so. God's free grace is as omnipotent as His mercy is unbounded; but arguing from human probability, as reasonably might we expect to find figs on thistles. Is it not, therefore, a object of importance that the parent should aid and not retard the efforts of the teacher.

C. S. D.

The recent failure on the Rappahanock.

(From the Toronto Leader.)

Six times, save one, the Federal army has made an attempt to take the Confederate capital; and at times, save one, it has been repulsed with more or less loss. McDowell was the first to try the operation, and t e memorable Bull Run told the tale. McClellan camped on advance, and the result is to be found in the seven days battles in the swamps and marshes of the Chickahominy. Then came Pope—the pompous self-sufficient Pope—discarding lines of retreat and promising great things. His rapid flight across the Potomac soon put an end to his beautiful predictions. Now Burnside is upon the stage. A much more modest man than his predecessor, he ventured an attempt along the same route to Richmond; but the well-fortified heights of Fredericksburg and the brave hearts which defended them brought his advance to an inglorious and sanguinary end. Then came Hooker—"fighting Joe"—swelling with vanity and brimful of glorious prophecies of what he would do if the Confederates would only give him a chance to get at them. Well Hooker has had his wish, and despite his pompous "orders of the day" and his glittering promises of success, he too has received a repulse which is even more serious than that of any of the commanding generals who preceded him. He staked everything on the result—and has lost everything—his reputation, his army and the only chance that was left of destroying one of the most powerful armies of the Confederacy and restoring the "glorious Union." Another attempt in the same direction is almost out of the question.

Some days since when we received the first news of the battle, we said that, result as it may, it would be the most decisive battle of the war. We are of the same opinion now. The battle has been fought and bravely won by the South. Under such circumstances the natural enquiry of every one is, What course will the Federal government take? Were it actuated by prudential motives, or by a noble spirit of generosity, preparing to heal wretched wrong which pandered to a partizan cry, the Administration would at once exert itself to obtain a restoration of peace. Why slaughter the brave longer? Why still array brother against brother, in the dread ordeal of battle? But by pursuit in carrying on the country, both North and South, into reckless bankruptcy. It is in the power of the Federal government to restore peace. The Northern people are prepared for it; they have been prepared for it for a twelvemonth past; but a manifest feeling of national pride has prevented them from demanding what they so earnestly desired. Now is the time for the government to bring themselves to the performance of a deed which rightly devolves upon them.—They should not feel any hesitation about admitting defeat; their principal object ought to be, to obtain as honorable a peace as possible. Everywhere the Federal forces have been defeated. Vicksburg ruthlessly hurls them back; Charleston bids defiance to their most powerful efforts; Richmond stands without fear of molestation; and in the West Rosecrans is in danger from the opposing army of Bragg.

There is no use in endeavoring to gloss over these facts. Far above all minor skirmishes they stand out in massive relief. The little Confederacy of nine millions of souls has, for over two long years, withstood every effort of more than twice their numbers to lay waste or enormally, to any great extent, upon their territory. And now the summer months are fast drawing on when, even if the North were prepared for battle, it is powerless to move against the enemy. No effort is made to enforce the conscription act. Daily, regiments whose time has expired are returning from the armies. The prestige which results from victory is wanting to the North. Every thing is against them, and yet there are those who counsel a continuance of the war. We hardly think it possible that it can go on much longer. The President and his cabinet we are inclined to believe, from all the indications we have noticed, determined that the battles which have now eventuated in the defeat of Gen. Hooker's army, should be of a more decisive character than any that preceded them. Like their General, they have risked much upon them; and the die has been cast. To raise such another army as that with which General Hooker commenced the late engagements is impossible within the next six months, under the most favorable circumstances; and we very much doubt whether it could be raised at all. Certainly it would be a very risky matter, in the present temper of the Northern mind, and moreover hardly worth the danger which would attend the operation.

If the Government are wise they will shape their course from this time forward in such a direction as will tend toward a cessation of hostilities. Perhaps it would be too much to expect them to have sufficient courage to avow, openly and above board so manly a determination. But they should, at all events, now see how futile it is to attempt to carry on the war any longer with the least possible chance of success. It is mere nonsense to talk about the South being exhausted. It is as strong to day as it was when the war broke out; and it is perfectly able to resist the North in times to come, if necessary, as it has done in the past. It may be taking too hopeful a view of the future to expect that good will result from the last defeat of the Federal forces on the Rappahannock. It may be, as some persons suppose that it will but serve the North to more desperate exertions. This may be so; but we hope the government will take a more patriotic and more Christian view of the war, and turn to the advantage of the country the power for good which this last defeat of the Federal army has placed in their hands.—Leader

To the Editor of the Examiner.

MR. EDITOR,—Some time ago you announced that a column was open for subjects on Education and Temperance.

He, whoever he may be, who aids in elevating the community by befriending its Educational interests, and frowning down those vices, even though practiced by the genteel, is a true Patriot.

Can those men holding influential positions who, by their examples and often persuasion, lure our youth into habits of dissipation, be called patriots?

Amongst the vices there is, that one Intemperance, stands out in bold relief. Is it because it is legalized that its devotees do not seek to hide their shame as to some other vices?

So much has been said and written illustrative of this subject it is needless to say much here. We have too many in our town living epistles of the ravages making among the people: the bloated and brutish aspect, the enfeebled frame, the wasted resources, disease and want, a short life, and misery entailed on families.

There is much to hope in reclaiming our country from this debasing vice. Men of noble and philanthropic minds, at much effort and cost, are labouring to rid our country of this plague, and the many organizations throughout the land are triumphing over this enemy to our prosperity and national greatness.

That wise act of the British Government in abolishing the grog ration in her army has aided much in its moral elevation and efficiency. There is now less insubordination, less immorality, and no whipping. The vicious and strictly temperate soldier is even physically the best; he can endure more, has more energy and pluck, while the dissipated one is feeble and diseased, and is a burden to an army. Take the renowned Havelock and his strictly temperate soldiers: one thousand of his men were worth two thousand, for bravery and endurance, in that trying climate of India.

Take a squint at the Yankee army and its vast resources. We have it from their own authorities that, owing to drunkenness among commanders and men, there is little discipline and much insubordination, and many of their officers disgraced and discharged as unfit for their post, through intemperance.

It is truly a cause for congratulation to see how nobly our young men have responded to the call of their country, and taken up arms for the defence of their liberties. It is fondly hoped that a thing shall be left undone to foster that spirit that animates the youth, and nothing done by those in authority and those in command to damp that spirit, or mar the efficiency of the volunteers.

Mr. Editor, could you inform the public if there be a clause in our new Militia Bill making it imperative on Commanders to lead to Grog-Shops their men, to test their efficiency in drill by guzzling down bad whiskey, and drugged and stupifying swills called beer, ale, and porter.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

MR. EDITOR.—As a great "fuss" and a great deal of excitement has been created by an attempt of a Committee, pretending to represent a majority of the Fire Company, to force a style of uniform upon, and which is obnoxious to a majority of that Company, and the writer having been not down by "certain members" as belonging to a party who are factious and anxious to "break up" said Fire Company, I consider it but doing justice to that party and myself to lay the whole matter before the public, who will then be able to form an opinion—and, perhaps it may lead them to take an interest in a Company, which, but for this incident, might have escaped their notice altogether.

As the money which the Town Council have given to the Company for the purpose of purchasing a uniform belongs to the people of the Town, I think they have a right to know how it is disposed of. It seems then that the Town Council have given a sum of One Hundred and Fifty Dollars to the Fire Company for the purpose of uniforming themselves, and that certain parties in that Company say they have been chosen as a "Committee," and this Committee say that they were "elected" at a full regular monthly meeting of the Fire Company, and that they, according to the "minutes" of that meeting, were invested with full authority to choose a pattern, receive tenders for uniform or reject tenders, manage everything, do every thing—in fact, "get up" the uniform, whether the Company liked it or no, it was no matter to them, for they, of course, represented a majority of that Company, and were at liberty to do just as they liked. We will grant them this, but at the same time ask, if such is the case, that that Committee were elected at such a full meeting, as presented the majority of that Company, how did it happen that at the last monthly meeting, which was more than ordinarily well attended, that upon the Committee producing the pattern chosen by them for the uniform, it was rejected by a vote of 16 to 4? Alas! poor Yorick, such indeed was the hard fact. It could not surely be that a Committee elected at such a full meeting, with such unlimited authority to do everything with the uniform they choose, should have at least as large a meeting as the one at which they were elected, 16 votes recorded against them to 4 in their favour! Surely there must be something very far wrong. Could it be that the they did not really represent a majority of that Company? Or was it that the men were wrapt in such a mesmeric sleep on that occasion as to be entirely ignorant of what they were doing? Or, perhaps, it was not such a very full meeting after all. Or, maybe, it was that seven of a Committee were nominated, and so few were at that time present, that no opposition offered, and the gentlemen had the pleasure of voting themselves into a Committee to represent a "majority" at least of a Company, as the paper list says, 46 strong. This Committee elected under such favorable circumstances, now comes forward and says that we must wear the uniform they have chosen, for they represent the majority. Of what Fire Company pray? Not the one in Peterboro, for they certainly gave a majority of 12 against them; the minutes will prove it. There must be something radically wrong, for if the men gave them such authority to act, why would the same men, without rhyme or reason, put a veto on their own actions. Perhaps upon a little mature consideration we may be able to find out the true cause. It is really such a serious affair and the Committee have been invested with such "awful authority" that the importance of the occasion demands, and shall have all the reverence due. It is, indeed, then, with no ordinary sensations, that the writer proceeds, and if a word is untimely used an expression or two a little out of place, I humbly crave, oh! Committee, as your authority is so unlimited, be also merciful!

The Committee have been guilty of an illegal and high-handed proceeding; first in giving the contract to a person who was one of the Committee, letting him send in his tender, which was illegal—for as a Committee can be had no right to tender—and in the manner in which they went about the "tender" part of the business: why, one or two went to one merchant belonging to the Fire Company, and then they went to another, also a member of the Company, and to another a member also, and they told these merchants to go to the Secretary's Office and they would find a sample of a uniform for which they could tender. And what was the consequence, only two tenders were received: one from the Committee men—which was accepted. By the bye, this member of the Committee also made the sample; and this extraordinary mode of receiving tenders led the other merchant to suspect something was up—perhaps they were not wanted to tender—and therefore they governed themselves accordingly. Was this a legal or an ordinary manner to receive tenders? Certainly not. As it was the money of the public the Committee were spending, every merchant in Town should have had an opportunity of making the uniform—advertisements should have been inserted in the papers, or bills printed in the usual way—every means resorted to make it as public as possible, and the Committee would thus have been furthering the interests of the Company which was at least their duty to look after. A good bargain could then have been made, sample of uniform received and laid before the Company. A special meeting could have been called which, being about the uniform would have been well attended; the Company could then have adopted a style, the choice if it was necessary to vote of the majority, and everyone would have been satisfied. But such was not done; a uniform was chosen obnoxious to a majority of that Company; the Committee comes forward and say, the contract is given and you must wear the uniform: the consequence is that both myself and party are called unruly members—members desirous of breaking up the Company—and actually got credit for much more than we really said or acted, because we make a stand for our rights. Are the proceedings of that Committee not illegal and high-handed? And why, when they found that a majority of the Company was against them, did they not resign? Is any uniform ordered by such a Committee, to be paid for by the public or themselves? It is not the choice of the Company. We certainly say that we do not recognize any such Committee, and say, that the uniform is a disgrace to the Town; that if the Town Council did not give us money enough to buy a decent one we would rather go without one than have a uniform that would be worse than any other Fire Company we should chance to meet; we also say the Committee are not infallible, but presume a little too much; that they went about the procuring of the uniform in a shabby way; that advertisements for tenders should have been issued so that every merchant could have had a chance; in fact, that one or two of the Committee wanted to rule the roast and only give us the sauce and we wont swallow it; and, lastly, that we will not resign, for we are a majority. It is for openly making these statements that we have incurred the annihilating displeasure of the Committee, and those actions I have had the audacity to defend—I really tremble as I do so, but it is from—laughter; for I can imagine how exceedingly it pleasant certain members of that Committee will be at my daring impertinence; but let me assure them, and perhaps I will be forgiven when I say, I mean as little as the Company, when on the night of the very full meeting they elected them to represent such a large majority.

Yours, &c.,
A. G. GILBERT.

Peterboro, 8th May, 1863.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

DEAR SIR,—A "Sergeant" proposes, in your paper, that inasmuch as the Queen's birth-day falls this year on Sunday the different volunteer rifle corps should all assemble in uniform on the Market Square on that day, and march thence to the different Churches.

I should like to know why our friend the "Sergeant" is so exclusive. Why not the Fire Companies turn out also? and the goodly company of cricketers? I feel sure that that worthy man, the President of the latter, would be proud to muster his men in full uniform, and march at their head to the orthodox Church.

But, in sober earnestness, Mr. Editor, if Mr. "Sergeant" is anxious to flourish round in his regimentals on the Sunday in question, I think I speak with a large number of the inhabitants of the Town, when I say that the Market Square would look far better on the Queen's Birth-Day, wearing the ordinary decent quiet of the Sabbath day, than occupied, just at Church time, by a Militia regimental, together with the gathering of lookers-on and noisy boys usual on such occasions. Nor do I think that the propriety of the different Churches in the town would be one whit improved by a armed military invasion just at the commencement of the service.

Besides, Mr. Editor, even though the 24th of 24th of May does fall on Sunday, we have a right to, and no doubt will, take the following Monday to ourselves as a holiday in lieu thereof, on which day our Rifle Companies will, if not to be feared, gratify both themselves and us (meaning the civilians) by a little military display when we can legitimately enjoy it.

Yours, &c.,
CIVILIAN.

In politics, pure as ever, the World is independent of whatever colour. Its only creed is a national one—of which are the corner stones.

The Cheap, the Convenient, and the Large, and Readiest Exponent of the Press, of Political Discussion and Action

The political events of the past year have notably demonstrated the need of an able, fearless outspoken, first-class

Conservative Journal,

in the commercial metropolis of the country, which shall give constant, bold and vigorous utterance to the conservative sentiments of a majority of the people, and the masses of the Opposing Party whether armed in rebellion at the South, or insidiously planning the spoils of dominion at the North.

[illegible]

Opposing every violation of the [illegible]

The Times

in high places or in low, believing that obedience to

Authority, Thrift, and Equal Assets

is the [illegible] of the rights and liberties of citizens, its arrest without warrant or suppressments without trial, its abrogation of state and federal laws, its illegal proclamation of an empty emancipation, or whether those violations are committed by the civil or power, its orators and its [illegible] measures which must sunder the Union for the sake of destroying slavery, and denouncing treason against all but political opponents.

Loyal to the government always, it will give to the administration a hearty and vigorous support wherever and whenever the administration itself is loyal to the law, the principles, and the purity of the government.

The World will oppose all compromises which would barter away or divide the Union, for which alone the North is waging war; it will oppose peace itself, till the success of the war has shed its permanence of peace, and will urge the prosecution of the war with an economy which has not hitherto governed its expenditures, and a vigor which the nation during a year has prayed for in vain.

The same care will be exercised over the columns of the World to exclude everything which could offend a pure, Christian morality, as if every line had always to be read by the same high principle as well to guard its columns as to guide its judgment of pen and pencil.

All the News

will be found in the columns of the World from the various departments of human activity,

Political, Agricultural, and Commercial, as well as in Literature, Science and Art.

New Publications, Inventions, Discoveries, and Works of Art will receive the same careful and thorough attention.

The latest and most important news from London, Paris, Turin, Rome, Syria, China, California, Japan, Egypt, and South America, our correspondents will send to us.

Our correspondents are attached to the various departments of the Federal Army, from whence they, as well as the Navy, will furnish us with the latest and most reliable information of the World.

A Complete Chronicle of the War, from day to day, and from month to month, in the Weekly and Semi-Weekly editions of the World, especially large space will be given to

Agriculture,

and to all departments of

Manufacturing and Mechanical Industry.

The Weekly World will contain an admirable serial story during the current year.

THE DAILY WORLD.

The Daily World is the most complete Commercial and News Paper published in America. Besides as full telegraph news, war correspondence, and foreign news, &c., as any two can daily, it contains a complete daily of commercial news. In Stock News, Produce, and Cattle Market reports, Foreign and Domestic Importations, Shoe & Leather and Commercial news, no business man can go without.

TERMS (INVARIABLE IN ADVANCE):

One copy for one year, $8
Four copies for one year, $30.
Town club of ten copies an extra copy will be sent for one year.

THE SEMI-WEEKLY WORLD.

The Semi-Weekly World is a large quarto sheet, same size as the daily, containing all its news, correspondence, miscellany and editorials, its commercial and market news, and entertaining selections and miscellaneous reading. Its cattle market and provision reports make it highly valuable to every farmer.

EMPLOYMENT.

THE Undersigned having for years past, been employed by [illegible] which has [illegible] to the sale of [illegible] thousand gold [illegible] annually, and [illegible] willing to [illegible] to others. The business is of a highly useful and general character, adapted both to city and village, and one that any person of ordinary capacity, young or old, male or female, can engage with a few hours' practice, and by which they can secure a handsome income. Several young ladies who have received instructions from me, both in New York State and Pennsylvania, are earning upwards of $15 per week by the business, and for the reason why any one else cannot do the same. Invalids, even, can do well; for as it is no peddling affair, but a business entirely respectable, gentlemanly and ladies of leisure who would like to keep the business for their own amusement or pleasure, will find the practice quite a pleasant occupation, and at the same time make great interest on the receipt of $3. I will send printed instructions by which any person can readily acquire the art, and all necessary instructions will also contain every particular relative to the carrying it on so that it will be highly profitable. The purchaser of the "printed instructions" will also be authorized to use my name in his letters, and I have sometimes received as high as $200, for teaching it personally to a single individual. I would state further that I do not as I will buy everything that is necessary to commence the business with, and the articles can be got almost anywhere, in city or country, or if preferred, I can furnish them. Address DONALD ALVORD T. PARSONS, No. 36 LIBERTY ST., NEW YORK. Dec. 17 1862. 51-3m.

Poetry.

AN INVOCATION TO SPRING.

Come quickly, O, thou Spring!
Write love's fair alphabet upon the sod
In many coloured flowers—to preach of God,
Our everlasting King!

Come from the rosy South,
In chariots of incessant sun of light,
Dissolve the lingering snows that glisten white
Beneath thy fragrant mouth.

Walk softly o'er the earth,
Thou blessed spirit of the Eden-time;
Thy breath is like an incense-laden chime,
Clasping rich bowers of mirth.

Thy virgin herald's here—
The snow-drop bares her bosom to the gale,
While down her cheek, so delicately pale,
Trickles a crystal tear.

The lark now soars above,
As if he felt his freedom on his wing,
While from his heaven-attuned throat there rings
A charming peal of love.

The yet unheeded wheat
Now timidly puts forth its tender leaf,
To drink sweet dews, for Winter, ancient chief,
Crawl off with tottering feet.

Your sorrows now inter,
Ye dwellers of dark cities; Spring is nigh
She bathes her garments in a sunset sky,
And treads the halls of Myrrh.

To God an anthem sing
When forth ye hurry to the fields of bloom;
He lights the flowers and lifts us from the tomb
To everlasting Spring!

Miscellaneous.

Starving the South.

There is a world of common sense in the following from the pen of Henry Ward Beecher in yesterday's Independent, which we commend to those foolish people who believe we can starve the South into submission, and who think a victory or two will end the rebellion.—N. Y. World.

"We see no substantial evidence that the South is yet discouraged. What legislature, convention, or influential men even has uttered a desponding word? The spirit of the people is not broken. With a few exceptions, the intelligent prisoners who are taken hold one language, and that it is of firm, resolute, bitter determination to resist to the uttermost. Nor can we learn that those who stay at home, and who suffer great deprivations, are weary or discouraged. Even when hunger drives women to riot and violence, it is remarkable that they demand 'bread,' but never ask 'peace!' Indeed, we are free to say that we cannot repress our admiration of the conduct of the Southern people in this terrible struggle. It needs only a worthy cause to be regarded as heroic. They seek to establish a detestable system of slavery. They seek for that end the overthrow of a beneficent government. Their cause is as bad as it well can be. Nevertheless, they have given up all things for what they regard as their country. They have relinquished luxuries, submitted to hardships, suffered bereavements and losses, not only without murmuring, but eagerly; and after two years of trial that may be said almost to have revolutionized the interior of southern society, and reduced them to the minimum of comfort, they are undiscouraged. They are even more fierce and bitter than ever.

The prospect of starving rebellion does not seem very cheering. The summers of the South come round too quick. Men that could march as Jackson's army did into Maryland, almost without a commissariat, and eating green corn for rations, plucked from the field for each day's use, are not likely to starve on cornmeal and green herbs. Already early garden crops are coming into southern markets. We object to a fair share of starvation as a part of military necessity, but we confess to not a little shame when we hear men taking it for granted that the North is playing a trencher-game, and does by knife and fork what it cannot do with the sword!

Death of Stonewall Jackson.

The New York papers bring us accounts of the departed hero which will be interesting to all our readers.

HIS EARLY DAYS.

The Evening Post says:

"Born in Lewis county, Virginia, in the year 1826, and left an orphan at early age, Jackson's family influence enabled him to enter the Military Academy at West Point in his seventeenth year. He was graduated thence in 1846, in the same class with McClellan, received the usual appointment of brevet second lieutenant, and was assigned to duty in the Second Regular Artillery. It was the time of the Mexican troubles, and Jackson saw his first military service under Magruder, in his celebrated battery, which went through the campaign. On the 20th of August, 1847, he was promoted to the rank of first lieutenant; was soon afterwards brevetted to a captaincy for gallant conduct at Contreras and Churubusco, and became a major for bravery at Chapultepec. On the 20th of February, 1852, he resigned his position in the army on account of impaired health, and accepted a professorship at the Military Institute in Lexington, Virginia, in which town he afterwards married a daughter of the Rev. Dr. Junkin.

HIS CAREER IN THE SOUTHERN ARMY.

"Appointed a colonel in the Army of Virginia, Jackson advanced from Harper's Ferry with a considerable force, and occupied that post on the 18th of April, 1861. On the first of the following July he was attacked at Martinsburg by General Patterson, and was obliged to retreat. From that time until the first battle of Bull Run, Jackson did good service to the rebels, checking here and there, committing depredations, and establishing himself to the reward of a Brigadier-Generalship which was bestowed upon. During the winter of 1861-2 his forces remained at Centreville, but while McClellan was removing his army to the Peninsula Jackson went into Western Virginia, where he was again defeated by our troops under General Shields. It was in this battle that Jackson received his nickname as "Stonewall;" the greater part of his forces having been stationed behind a stone wall on the battle field, it was a difficult task to dislodge them. Jackson afterwards fought Fremont in the Mountain Department, but was so badly defeated by that General in a series of running fights that nothing but the destruction of the bridges behind them saved the rebels from a total dissomfiture. Jackson, however, had his revenge by defeating part of Gen. Shield's force at Port Republic after the rebel disaster at Cross Keys. Hastening back to Richmond, he was in time to take part in the battles before Richmond which closed the disastrous campaign of our forces on the Peninsula.

"Untiring and zealous, Jackson retraced his steps to Northern Virginia, and with a larger force, led the advance of Lee's army in its campaign against Pope, crossed the Potomac into Maryland, occupied the city of Frederick, recrossed the river, moved westward and again captured Harper's Ferry, and returned to Maryland to take his prominent part in the battle of Antietam. Promoted to the rank of Lieutenant-General in the rebel army, Jackson was in command of a heavy force at Fredericksburg at the attack upon that place by Burnside, and again during the recent movement of Hooker; and it was in the terrible contest at Chancellorsville that he found the end of his career. He left the field and went home to die at the early age of 37.

INCIDENTS OF HIS MILITARY LIFE.

"The incidents which are told of this able and daring leader would fill a volume. They all hinge upon the sincerity of his zeal, his personal bravery, his dash and courage in military operations, and the remarkable influence which he exercised over his men. It is said of him that during the battle of Chapultepec, where he commanded a section of Magruder's battery attached to Pillow's division, he was ordered by that commander to withdraw his section, as, according to Pillow's idea, it was too much exposed.—Giving no heed whatever to the General's order, he rapidly limbered up and moved his section a hundred yards nearer the enemy's works, where he did great execution.—Another story is to the effect that at one time the expediency of removing him from his command was freely discussed in the Confederate Cabinet, and all but two members favored the motion; these two arguing that a man of such exemplary morality, and yet of such intense religious enthusiasm and indomitable firmness, must possess those moral elements which, combined with his military education and experience, should constitute a great general. Their opposition served to postpone a decision, and the motion was laid under consideration.—Meantime the people of the Valley got wind of the affair, and with a great outcry of indignation and threats so assailed the powers at Richmond that the question was dropped.

The Army of the Potomac.

We take shame to ourselves for having in a news column of this journal seemed to credit for a single instant the false rumors, so carefully disseminated by the Philadelphia Press and other equally unscrupulous administration newspapers, that General Hooker had recrossed the Rappahannock and was marching on the enemy. The only excuse we have to make is the detention of our own correspondent's letters, and the particularity with which the falsehood was set forth by journals which have intimate relations with the War Office and with President Lincoln.

General Hooker has not recrossed the Rappahannock, nor has he had the slightest intention of doing so. Fifteen thousand of his best troops were killed, wounded, or captured in the recent battles. The effective value of the rest, who have survived the chaotic route of Pope's campaign and the Fredericksburg slaughter-pen under Burnside, even of those who before the battle of Chancellorsville had the highest confidence in General Hooker, we leave each reader to measure for himself. Nobody but a fool or a fanatic would credit the declamatory bosh with which the Times doubtless deems itself to be doing patriotic service in representing the spirit and fire of the army to be undaunted and its confidence in its leader unimpaired. It is only a general whose generalship has already been proved by victories who suffers no material loss, in the estimation of his troops, by defeat. It is only troops who are archangels all that would suffer no loss of moral strength and nerve by a long succession of disasters.

It is a shame to conceal from the country the condition of its favorite army. It has not confidence in its general, still less has it confidence in the War Department and the General-in-Chief. It knows who withdrew it from the Peninsula and cheated it of the Capture of the capital of the confederacy. It knows who placed Pope in command, and what did more than Burnside's incompetency to shatter it anew. But if the army were all that we could wish it, it is too small, or soon will be too small, for any offensive movement against Richmond. It has lost fifteen thousand men in the late battles—more rather than less. Twenty-two thousand more men, whose term of service is expiring, will leave within three or four weeks. By the statistics of which the War Department took pains to publish through the country post before General Hooker's advance, a primary school boy could calculate with accuracy the total force of our army. It was about 141,000 men of all arms. Deduct 37,000 from the number, and we have but little more than 100,000 men left to fight Lee's army to-day. It has received no reinforcements from Washington—that was a department earned; none from Suffolk or Fortress Monroe—that was another. What Hooker failed to accomplish with 141,000 men, is he likely even to undertake to accomplish with 100,000?

General Order No. 49, which General Hooker has just issued to his army, leaves the best of a bad business. If the army could but be persuaded of the truth of its statements—that it was not whipped on the field—it would better take upon itself the shame of the defeat. Whoever knows the facts of the last two weeks will shudder as he reads this order. Whoever does not, let him credit it, and believe that his ignorance is bliss.

If Richmond is to be the object of our campaigns, we believe that finally, perhaps not but finally, the War Department will have to return to General McClellan's peninsular plan of attack. Not an officer of eminence in the army but believes it the best, almost the only feasible route; not a military student here or abroad but has again and again alleged its superiority. General Hooker himself, or we are greatly mistaken, coincides for the opinion, and would have taken that route had he not been overruled at Washington. At any rate his testimony before the War Comittee shows that what he has found himself unable to accomplish by the land route with a large force, and supreme command, that he thought he could do in about two days by the peninsula. But it is not to be hoped that General Halleck will confess his fatal error last year under any milder compulsion than a few more defeats, a few more wasted months, a few more thousands led to fruitless slaughter.

The Clergyman and the Burglar.

The world of fiction hardly contains a more thrilling chapter than an incident which marked the life of Rev Mr. Lee, who was recently cut down in his prime while pastor of the Presbyterian church in the village of Waterford, New York. The adventure says the Troy Times, occurred on the night before Thanksgiving, a few weeks previous to the commencement of the sudden illness which resulted sadly and fatally. Mr. Lee was sitting in his study about one o'clock in the morning, preparing a discourse to be delivered to his congregation when assembled for Thanksgiving worship, when he heard a noise behind him and became conscious that somebody was in the room. Supposing that a neighbor had dropped in on some unforeseen errand, Mr. Lee said: "What is the matter?" and turned around in his chair. He beheld the grim face of a burglar, who was pointing a pistol at his breast. The ruffian had entered the house by a side window, supposing that all the occupants were wrapped in slumber, and burst upon the presence of Mr. Lee before he was aware that the study contained an occupant.

"Give me your watch and money," said he, "and make no noise, or I will fire."

Mr. Lee said:

"You may as well put down your weapon, for I shall make no resistance, and you are at liberty to take all the valuables I possess."

The burglar withdrew his menacing pistol, and Mr. Lee said:

"I will conduct you to the place where my most precious treasures are placed." He opened a door and pointed to a cot where his two children lay slumbering in the sweet sleep of innocence and peace. "These," said he, "are my choicest jewels. Will you take them?" He proceeded to say that, as a minister of the Gospel, he had few earthly possessions, and that all his means were devoted to one object—the education of the two children that were reposing in the adjoining room. The burglar was deeply and visibly affected by these remarks. Tears filled his eyes, and he expressed the utmost sorrow at the act which he had been about to commit. After a few remarks from Mr. Lee, the would-be criminal consented to kneel and join with him in prayer; and there, in that lonely house, amid the silence of midnight, the offender poured fourth his penitence and sorrow, while the representative of peace and good-will told him to "go and sin no more." Such a scene has few parallels.

On the conclusion of the prayer, the burglar attempted to take his departure by the broken window through which he had entered.

"Why not go by the front door?" said Mr. Lee.

The man replied.

"There are confederates there who would shoot either you or me."

He desired Mr. Lee to take an oath on the Holy Scriptures never to reveal the particulars of this singular interview. Mr. Lee said it was unnecessary, as he had the kindest feeling toward him, and should never divulge aught he had seen or heard. The next day, Mr. Lee, while walking with his wife, met the man in the street of Waterford, and on subsequent occasions saw him from time to time.

One of the actors in this singular episode fills an early grave; but by means that we are not at liberty to disclose the event did not die with him. What must be the feeling of the other party to this mysterious meeting, whenever he reflects on the lonely parsonage, and the memorable scene that it witnessed on the night before thanksgiving, 1862?

LITERARY CURIOSITY.—The following, written in the time of the Revolution, may be read, 1st, in the order in which it is written; 2nd, the lines downward on the left of each comma in every line; 3rd, in the same manner on the right of each comma. By the first reading it will be seen that the Revolutionary cause is depreciated and headed by the others:

Hark! Hark! the trumpet sounds, the din of war's alarms,
Our seas and solid grounds, doth call us all to arms,
Who for King George dost stand, their bosoms soon will shine
Their race is at hand, who with the Congress join;
The cost of Parliament, to them I much delight;
I hate their cursed deceit, who for the Congress fight;
The Tyrant of the day, they say my daily toast;
They soon will expel away, who independence boast;
Who non-resistance hold, they be troops hand and hand;
May they for slaves be sold, who not a whig can find;
On Hemphill, North and Hall, may daily thanks be sung;
Confusion and ill-gifts, on Congress overmore,
To Hampshire direful Lord, may heaven still be kind;
I find I've cut her, to Gendet Washington.

Newspapers.

"How does it happen—says neighbour B, that your children learn much so much greater progress in their learnings and knowledge of the world than mine? They all attend the same school, and for aught that I know, enjoy equally advantages."

"Do you take the newspapers, neighbour B?"

"No, sir, I do not take them myself; but I now and then borrow one, just to read. Pray sir, what have newspapers to do with the education of children?"

"Why, sir, they have a good deal to do with it, I assure you. I should as soon think of keeping them from school, as to withhold from them the newspaper; it is a little school itself. Being new every week, it attracts their attention, and they are sure to peruse it. This, while they are storing their minds with useful knowledge they are at the same time acquiring the art of reading, &c. I have often been surprised, that men of understanding should overlook the importance of a newspaper in a family."

"In truth, neighbor B, I frequently think I should like to take them, but I cannot well afford the expense."

"Can't afford the expense! What, let me ask, is the value of five or six dollars a year, in comparison with the pleasures and advantages to be derived from a well conducted newspaper? As poor as I am, I would not for fifty dollars a year deprive myself of the happiness I enjoy in reading and hearing my children read, and talk about what they have read in the papers. And then the reflection that they are growing up intelligent and useful members of society. Oh, don't mention the expense! pay it in advance every year, and you will think no more of it.

TRAGICAL AFFAIR IN CHICAGO.—On Wednesday night John Golden, was found in his own house by a policeman, laying on the floor in a state of intoxication, while around him were pools of blood, and other visible indications that a severe encounter had taken place. His wife was missing. After some time spent in a fruitless examination of the house and surroundings, the officers discovered Mrs. Golden lying in an old shed near the dwelling, perfectly insensible. On examination, it was found that she had no less than eleven wounds on her arms and body—apparently inflicted with a sharp knife—while her face was literally mashed into jelly. She had probably lain there during the most of the previous night, and when found life seemed almost extinct. Her injuries are of such a character as to almost preclude the possibility of her recovery. At the opening of the Police Court yesterday, Golden was arraigned on a charge of assault with the intent to kill his wife. Golden is an Irishman by birth, about forty years of age, and the father of several children. He is represented as a man of industrious habits while sober, but when intoxicated is a very fiend, and has often been engaged in serious quarrels and fights.

SHOCKING AFFAIR.—A horrible accident resulting fatally, took place at the state factory of Clark & Campbell, yesterday afternoon. A man named Bride went to the factory where he had once been employed, and somehow became engaged in a scuffle with a boy at work there. He was getting the better of the boy when Reco, another workman, went to the assistance of the latter. This transferred the quarrel to another department—Bride going where Reco was at work. Bride was pushed over by Reco and returned the assault. He was again pushed away and fell across a buz saw in motion, running at high speed. The saw was 16 inches in diameter and projected 6 inches above the table. Bride fell in such a manner that his shoulder blade was sawed open, and some of his ribs were sawed through and his lungs were penetrated. He died at 11 last night. Bride leaves a wife and three children. Reco was arrested.—Rochester Union.

PEDESTRIAN FEAT—WALKING SEVEN MILES IN ONE HOUR.—On Monday last, Joseph Smith walked seven miles in one hour over the race course in this town. He was within a second or two of time. At least so said Mr. Turner, who timed the walk. There was upwards of 200 spectators present. Great as was the feat of seven miles in one hour, Joe has since totally eclipsed that leg-wrestling performance by walking off without paying the printer! Thus the result effected by insanly taking advantage of one of the employees of this establishment.—Stratford Beacon.

THE BEECH TREE.—The beech tree is said to be a non-conductor of lightning. So notorious is the fact, that the Indians, whenever the sky wears the appearance of a thunder storm, leave their pursuits and take refuge under the nearest beech tree. In Tennessee the people consider it complete protection. Dr. Beeton in a letter to Mr. Mitchell, states that the beech tree is never known to be struck by remarkable electricity, while other trees are often shattered into splinters. May not a knowledge of this afford protection to many when exposed?

A NEW BAROMETER.—M. Sauvageon of Valence has studied the different phenomena which are produced in a cup of coffee when the sugar is put into the cup; and the result of these observations transforms the demitasse into a barometer. "If, in sweetening your coffee," says M. Sauvageon, "you allow the sugar to dissolve without stirring the liquid, and the globules form a feathy mass, remaining in the centre of the cup, it is an indication of duration of fine weather; if on the contrary, the froth forms a ring around the sides of the cup, it is a sign of heavy rain; variable weather is implied by the froth remaining stationary, but not exactly in the centre."

In Hamilton, on Monday, a horse hitched to a post in front of a store, becoming frightened, started off, pulling with him the whole of the verandah, which fell with a tremendous crash. Fortunately there was no person underneath. At the commencement might have been serious.

THE COMING ELECTIONS.

Parliament was dissolved on Saturday last, so we may expect the elections to take places immediately. It will be remembered that the previous government and its supporters prized themselves upon the leniency shown to the McDonald-Sicotte Administration, and no doubt thought that they were entitled to consideration from the country for the "fair trial" they accorded to them. This was all very well, but recent events have proved that their professed forbearance was not so much of a virtue as a necessity. John A. McDonald and his followers when introducing the motion of non-confidence doubtless counted upon an immediate resignation of the Ministry, when the opposition leader would be called to fo m an administration. Finding that instead of their cherished scheme being carried Parliament was to be dissolved, they became savage, and positively refused to grant the needful funds for carrying on public business of any kind. Such a procedure if we mistake not is without a parallel in the history of Canada, except in 1836 when Parliament snubbed the high-handed arbitrary measures of Sir Francis Bond Head by stopping the supplies. In this case the Parliament quarrelled with the Governor personally, but in the recent case the terrible thumb screw was applied, not on account of any known cause of opposition to the Governor General, but either to frighten the Ministry into resignation or as a revenge for the course pursued by the Premier. Whatever may have been the motives, no intelligent reflecting man can hesitate for a moment to declare that the conduct of the opposition in refusing the Queen's representative the needed grant of money was unpatriotic, impolitic and selfish, —stamping the actors as more anxious for place and power than for the welfare and prosperity of the country. Let no one in future insult us by parading John A. McDonald as "a great statesman."

This stoppage of the supplies will necessarily tend to expedite the elections. It becomes the Reformers to be up and doing, as there will be strong efforts used to put the old Coalition party in power again.—Our old friend Mr. Conger will doubtless be soliciting the suffrages again of the electors, but it is well known that he is an upholder of the late Coalition Ministry, and as such we cannot support him; he is from home just now, in quest of health, and will likely be back shortly, energetically pushing his canvass. Then we have the Hon. S. Smith, who is to resign his seat in the House of Lords, in order to enter the Lower House; he says he is a candidate for Peterborough if Colonel Haultain does not come out. As a member of the late Coalition he will not do for the County of Peterboro. Our gallant Colonel if consulting his own inclinations would prefer remaining at home. He has no relish or love for parliamentary life. There is so much duplicity, such want of honour and straightforward action, such unscrupulous strife for place and power in our public men, not to use harsher terms, which may be applied with truth that he prefers being spared to witness any more of it. At the same time if there is a pretty general wish expressed for his being returned again, we think he will consent to represent us.

His course while in Parliament has been marked by a conscientious regard for the welfare of his constituents and the country generally. Although we differ from him in some of his views, and do not approve of some of his votes, we have yet every confidence in his integrity, independence and public spirit. No one can justly charge him with deceiving his constituents, or in voting or speaking where the public good was not the paramount object. Were the 130 men whom the country send to make their laws actuated by similar motives as Colonel Haultain we should have a different state of things from what we have.

We are pleased to learn that a requisition is in circulation asking him to come forward again; we trust it will be largely signed, and that he will consent once more to represent us. We have a sort of a claim upon him for two years more, which we hope will weigh some with him. In a short time the policy of the Ministry will be announced, when we shall have something definite to go to the polls with. The opposition will rake up all the filth they can against the government and the party supporting it.

We had hoped that the puerile contemptible cry of disloyalty had died away, but we noticed in some of their papers lately that this charge is again being made against the Government and its supporters. It is altogether likely, in the absence of something else, that this cry will be used by the Conservatives at the approaching elections.

A meeting of the friends of Col. Haultain will be held in the room over the Bank of Toronto, to-night (Thursday) be eight o'clock, at which we hope to see a good gathering. The time is short, and what is to be done must be done promptly. It will never do to allow the good County of Peterborough to send a member to support such a Government as the late Coalition

THE RECONSTRUCTION.

The following is the Ministry as reconstructed, taken from the Globe.

UPPER CANADA.

Attorney General West, Hon. J. H. Macdonald.
Solicitor General West, Hon. L. V. McDougall.
Com'r of Crown Lands, Hon. W. McDonell.
Postmaster General, Hon. A. Mowat.
Receiver General, Hon. W. Howland Provincial Secretary, Hon. Ferguson Blair.

LOWER CANADA.

Attorney General East, Hon. A. A. Dorion.
Finance Minister, Hon L. Holton.
Minister of Agriculture, Hon. L. De St Just.
President of Council, Hon. Mr. Thibaudeau.

The Solicitor-Generalship and office of Public Works are still vacant.

Of this Administration the Globe of Monday says:—

"As it stands at present, the new Administration will be acceptable to the people of both sections of the Province. But two gentlemen remain to be added. The Correspondent press are spreading reports that the Ministry find difficulty in filling up their ranks. They are simply absurd. The sole reason for the delay which has taken place is that Mr. Dorion has endeavored to make a careful selection from the ample material offering. To-day will probably witness the final completion of the Ministry, and we suspend comment in the meanwhile."

On the other hand, the Leader finds serious fault with John S. Macdonald for his conduct in being so long in the operation of reconstruction, and says that he should have either gone to the country with the old members of the Government, or have resigned. It considers that it has both deceived the Governor General and the country. It is rather amusing to notice the gradual alienation of our colemporary from the Ministerial ship since she was reported as sinking. So long as there was no just cause for alarm, the Opposition were warned to take care how they served the occupants of the Treasury Benches, but no sooner was there a reasonable prospect of the latter being compelled to cross the House, that the heretofore supporter becomes an unmistable opponent. Witness the altered tones of its leaders for a week or more past, and, like the Opposition in Parliament, it seems to feel chagrined at the turn matters have taken. If some humble "backwoods journal" had been playing so fast and loose, the great City Daily would have opened fire with shot and shell upon it. Ah! those unlucky York Roads are like a nightmare upon the dependent Leader. Never since its entrance into life, has it shown such servile, cringing obsequiousness as during the reign of the Macdonald-Sicotte Administration. The moment it fancies it is to be no more, it turns round and shows its true colours

There are many reasons why the Reformers of the country should support the present Government. The chief one is, that it is a Reform Government, founded upon the principles of the party, one of which is economy, and care in managing the affairs of the country. No more important question can be brought before the electors just now than this, and if a Reform Government will not husband the Finances of country better than the Coalition has done, we would be among the first to denounce them. We have faith in them, however, that they will act as the country urgently demands—and faith also, that the country will support them, in order to give them a "fair trial."

The reconstruction took place on Saturday last. It is exactly a year ago to-day that the Macdonald-Sicotte Ministry was organised and sworn in. Since the Opposition have not accorded them a "fair trial," it remains for the country to say whether it will give them what was promised but not granted. In six weeks more this question will be solved, as the writs are returnable on the 3rd July.

Tobacco.

We earnestly commend the following remarks on the use of this destructive weed, by the talented Dr. Kurtz, to our readers generally, more especially to our young men, and to those only commencing the use of tobacco. To those who have voluntarily acquired the inveterate habit, and who have surrendered their liberty to its galling exactions, it is almost hopeless to urge immediate emancipation from this debasing voluntary slavery, but we entreat those who are not yet past redemption—who "can use it or let it alone"—who listen with incredulity to the warning of those who point out its evils—who are ready to say "is thy servant a dog that he should do this thing"—to consider the arbitrary and tremendous control that tobacco usurps over its poor vassals, and while they may escape the grasp of such a cruel and relentless a tyrant.

The Dr. paints no picture from fancy, but a drawing from real life, as thousands can testify, and as the observation of every intelligent reflecting individual will endorse:—

"It is as strange as it is deplorable that men should form the habit of using tobacco. It is narcotic, emetic and cathartic; and in its first use, disagreeable to the taste, offensive to the stomach, and sickening in its effect. It is decidedly injurious to the process of digestion, and seriously enfeebles the digestive organs as well as the nervous system; and what is still worse, when the habit of using it is confirmed, it is almost impossible voluntarily to abandon it. It is very difficult for an inebriate to renounce intoxicating drinks, or an opium or hasheesh eater to give up his favorite narcotic, but probably more so for a tobacco-chewer to live without his quid. We have known habitual drunkards to dash from their lips forever the inebriating glass, and thus assert and maintain their liberty; but those same men did not succeed in throwing away their tobacco; they lived and died victims to the insatiable craving of the morbid appetite, and slaves to the cruel and tyrannic charm of the nauseous weed. Still it is not utterly impossible; many have succeeded and others may, if not by force of their own resolutions, yet by the grace of God, through which we can do all things. Phil. 4: 13.

"Considering the arbitrary and tremendous control that tobacco usurps over its poor vassals, how careful should those be who have not yet fallen under its first approaches; and how prompt and determined those not yet utterly enslaved to break asunder the despot's chains without a moment's delay, since those chains are growing heavier and stronger, and being riveted closer and tighter every day. We would especially entreat persons to watch faithfully over their children in regard to the use of tobacco in any and every form.—Warn, reprove, admonish; leave no properly means unemployed to save them from a habit so wasteful to the energies of health, so expensive in its indulgence, so offensive to those around us, so inimical to the nervous system and the just rights of the stomach, and without a redeeming quality."

We have received the June number of Godey's Lady Book. It is always a welcome visitor to the ladies, and is well

COUNTY COUNCIL.

The Council met in special session on Thursday, the 14th inst.

The following members were present: Peter Pierce, Esq., Warden, and Messrs Birdsall, Crow, Gibbs, Grover, Ingram, Lockie, Rogers, Clark, Nelson, Walton and Sullivan.

On account of the Councillors living in the rear Townships not getting their notice in time they were not present.

The Warden read his address which was referred to a special committee.

A By-Law was passed authorising the taking down and repairing of the Bridge across the Indian River on the Boundary Line between the Townships of Otonabee and Douro.

A By-Law was also passed, authorising the Warden to issue Debentures agreeably with the Statute, in that case made and provided, for the purpose of raising by way of loan, a sum of money to assist the municipalities requiring the same, in procuring seed grain for the current year.

Moved by Mr. Birdsall and seconded by Mr. Walton,—That in order to prevent all future disputes with the Municipalities requiring money under the act for furnishing seed grain, the Council hereby requests the Clerk to obtain from all Reeves to whom he is about to pay money for the above purpose, satisfactory evidence that their several Councils have given them authority to apply for the same.—Carried.

The Treasurer was authorised to pay $12 to the Warden for his expenses attending Court at Emily.

TOWN COUNCIL.

MONDAY, May 11, 1863.

The Council met; present: His Worship the Mayor, and Messrs. Toole, Lawson, Carlile, Fry, Ormond, S. Dickson, Nicholls, Cluxton, Ryan, J. Dickson and Lundy.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

On account of the illness of night watch McDonald, Thos. Jenkinson was appointed in his place.

Notice was given that the Railway Company had paid to the Treasurer the monthly payment due by them.

Several accounts were presented, and handed over to the Finance Committee.

Several petitions for improvements on streets and side-walks were read and referred to Streets and Bridge Committee.

A report of the special committee appointed to examine into and report upon the state of the Water Tanks was submitted and received.

Mr. Carlile submitted plans for the Engine House and Lock-up, which were ordered to be handed over to the Committee on Public Property.

Moved by Mr. Cluxton, seconded by Mr Ormond,—That Messrs. Nicholls, Toole, and the mover, be a special Committee to co-operate with a Committee to be appointed by the County Council, to take into consideration the propriety of fencing the Block of land in front of the Court House, granted by the Crown to the said Council in trust for a Public Square, and that the Committee be requested to apply to the County Council for a grant, by Deed, of the three acres of ground granted by the Crown to said Council as a general Burial Ground for protestants in the Town of Peterborough.—Carried.

A By-law to prevent animals running at large, got its several readings and passed.

Moved by Mr. Lundy, seconded by Mr Fry.—That the Clerk do, at the next meeting of this Council, give a statement of the names of the parties who have taken out license for Taverns and Saloons, and for Billiard Tables, Livery Stables and Carters, with the names, and who have paid for the same.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Cluxton, seconded by Mr. Ryan,—That the Mayor be authorised to purchase a Chandelier for the Town Hall cost not to exceed $40.—Carried.

On motion of Mr. Nicholls the Council then adjourned.

POLICE COURT.

Before His Worship the Mayor and Jas. Edwards, Esq., J. P.

Laziers LaBeauf had John Hay summoned up for assaulting him, by kicking him, while he had been impounding pig, was fined 2s. 6d. and costs.

Louisa Potter, for keeping a house of ill-fame, was imprisoned 30 days.

Two men by the name of Apjohn, for raising a row at the Hastings Hotel, and breaking windows, were fined $1 each and costs.

Martin McDonald, was summoned up, charged with assaulting Antone Dubois, fined $1 and costs.

James Beckett, for breach of Market By-law, was fined 50c. and costs.

James Beckett, for not coming to the Market, but selling elsewhere, was fined 50c. and costs.

Thos. J. Fisher, John Hays, Robert Perkins and John Barry, were charged with being drunk and disorderly; the former was fined $2 and costs, Hays fined $1 and costs, Perkins dismissed, and the latter committed to gaol for 10 days.

Patrick McDonald, for using abusive and threatening language, was fined $4.

Denis Brennin, was charged by the Inspector of Licenses for selling spirituous and fermented liquors without license, but in the absence of proof the case was dismissed.

William Yates, for driving horses on side walk, on George Street, was fined 50c. and costs.

John Carroth, for leaving the employment of Hugh McKinnon, was fined $1 costs.

Thos. Livingston, for trespassing and stealing a goose from David Sullivan, was sent to gaol for one month.

It is said that the dying words of Stonewall Jackson were, a request that General Buell might be assigned to the command of his troops.

A communication on Fire Company matters has been unavoidably crowded out, but will appear next week.

News of the death of Lord Seaton, at

We observe by the "Ottawa Citizen" that a most disgraceful proceeding took place at the recent election of Directors for Ottawa and Prescott Railway. Some of the leading shareholders, determined to effect by force what they could not accomplish by the legal and proper course, the ballot. Our Ottawa Correspondent in his Communication refers to these proceedings, and pays a well merited tribute to Robert Bell—the man above all others, to whom the credit of carrying through the Railroad belongs—A man whose public spirit, has achieved lasting benefits for the county around him. Our correspondent omitted to mention that he is the proprietor of the Ottawa Citizen. We hope to see him triumphantly returned again for Russell.

BANKS OF THE OTTAWA,
May 15th, 1863.

Dear Examiner,—On the 21st April, old Ottawa broke its prison doors, and freed from the sway of stern winter, united once more to its smooth waters, the commerce and travel of another season. On the 29th the mail steamers began their regular trips, thus uniting, by river communication, the political Capital elect with the commercial capital of Canada.

The season here is very dry, which is unfavourable to the farmer, and as much so to the lumberer, as there is danger of timber sticking on small streams. Feed is very scarce and dear, and large numbers of cattle have, consequently died of want.

The Ottawa people have had quite a great "kick up" ascut matters concerning the Railroad. It appears that the present management of the road is unsatisfactory to certain parties, who, to obtain a change try the virtue of rowdy expedient. Robt Bell, the President of the Road, has been mobbed and maltreated, forcible possession taken of the offices, and sundry other things said and done of which there will be reckoning anon. Knowing that a storm was brewing at home, Mr. Bell had to fly from Quebec to Ottawa, thereby escaping one fight to enter another. It has been said that he was glad to shirk the Want of Confidence motion, but he is not the man to desert his colours, and the mal-content Stockholders will find they have "the wrong pig by the lug," when they try by illegal and mean schemes to subvert him from the due exercise of his duties as President of the Road.

Robert Bell is a self-made man, but has done more towards advancing the interests of the country than those of himself, and if he could be induced to unmake a habit that destroys so many, few men could be more useful in Canada than he. Possessed of a massive intellect, bull-dog perseverance and unselfish disposition, he is bent on doing great things for their own sake. In a Township midway between Ottawa and Prescott, he spent the years of his youth assisting his father in the labors of a new farm. After the farm work of the day was closed, study occupied the early hours of night. Potatoe planting and chopping were followed by astronomical observations and thus the boy was preparing to become the man who would occupy an honorable and elevated position in the country. Familiar with every acre of the surrounding country, this knowledge afterwards became invaluable in locating the railroad. The duties of the farmer were exchanged for those of the surveyor and engineer. Mr. Bell performed several surveys for the Government which gained him special credit. He became connected with the press, and was thus enabled to exercise a powerful influence in promoting Ottawa interests: for he manner in which he wielding this influence, he will, at a future time get more renown than falls to his share as yet. Among these interests the Ottawa and Prescott Railroad stands foremost: it forms a necessary link in the chain of qualities which gave the City of Ottawa the pre-eminence which it now enjoys. Mr. Bell is now being paid with black ingratitude, but time will blow off the dust, and it will then be seen that if McGillivary, Goodwin, Hunter & Co. were in the right, they would establish their position by less questionable means than by turning rowdies, breaking and smashing the property of the road and endangering the lives of the officers and peaceful Stock-holders of the Company. Dr. Hunter has an eye to Russel, and would feign damage Mr. Bell: with him the end justifies the means—foiled twice in gaining a seat in the house, he has tried a desperate game to favor his ambitious views. If true to themselves, the people of this county will bed him seek a constituency where he practices his quakery—in New York—and not take into their confidence an adventurer who cares neither for the county nor country, but has some selfish purpose to gain by entering Parliament.

The people of Canada have self-government; shall the boon prove a bane? Wherefore do we not try to return men of common sense and common honesty—and not men who make speeches to suit the hustings and afterwards, on the floor of the house, admit that they had no faith in what they were saying—men who to gain office will forswear the profession of their lives. Wherefore is the country put to the expense and annoyance of a general election after two brief sessions? Forsooth the long lived double-shufflers can no borne with no Income Tax.

"ARE YOU ALL READY?"

To all whom these presents may come, greeting! Know ye, that on the first day of May next, every man, woman, and child in these, once, United States, whose income is over $600 per annum, must pay a tax to the Government. Please call on the assessor of your respective districts, and he will give you full particulars in regard to your duty. This will be something entirely new to the people of this country. Thus far, we have been exempt from all taxation of such a character. A new era is now about to dawn upon us, and one which, in its very nature, will be exceedingly annoying and vexatious, to all—particularly to the Copperheads.

This tax will do more to try our patience and our honesty than any other measure ever adopted. All business men—merchant princes, bankers, speculators, misers, farmers, mechanics, everybody—must now have a reckoning with their consciences. They must, practically, make a full disclosure, under oath, of all their affairs, and the results will be open to public inspection and criticism. Those who make their hundreds, or thousands, or millions, will all fare alike. This law is no respecter of persons.

What a large amount of gossip will follow in the wake of this new movement! How easy it will be to know all about our neighbor's business! What "special revelations" there will be in all quarters! It will be found that Mr. Smith has lived too fast entirely—that he has been far too extravagant; and as to Mr. Jones, who has succeeded so well, thus far, in keeping up appearances, he must come down a little, and no longer train in the Fifth-avenue ranks. Mr. Snooks, that good old fellow—who has been snubbed all his life—will at last come out "respectable." We shall say to him, "who would have thought a millionaire lived so near to us?" "We must call on him at once." "He really has an interesting family." But what has all this to do with the sober reality of taxpaying? You will find out, reader, after the first of May. "Are you all ready?"—N. Y. Independent.

The Arrest of Vallandigham.

(From the N. Y. Times.)

It has not yet transpired whether the arrest of Vallandigham was made by the express direction of the authorities at Washington, or whether Gen. Burnside, in military command of the department, did it at his own instance. Whoever the author or whatever the specific cause of the arrest, we rejoice that a leading man was the subject of it, and not a weak and obscure one, as has too often happened. The true policy of the Government is to strike first at the fomenters of sedition, and not at their miserable dupes.

The real character of the work Vallandigham is doing is evinced by the resistance which was attempted against his arrest.—That mob was the genuine exponent of his own spirit. The defiance of authority which has marked all his recent speeches, naturally, and we may say almost inevitably issued in just such open violence. It is not at all important to know his text in this particular instance, when we have so thoroughly practical a commentary. Were a really loyal and innocent man to be unjustly suspected and arrested neither he nor his friends would ever think of a violent rescue. They would calmly await the opportunity for him to purge himself, knowing that such an opportunity, sooner or later, must surely come. Nothing could be more preposterous than for a law-abiding man to attempt to approve himself such by brute force. But Vallandigham, whatever else he may be, is no fool. He talks and acts consistently. His disposition is essentially rebellious; and it is this, and this only, which makes him so quick to turn to mob violence. He has infected his followers with this same malignant and lawless spirit which animates himself, and had it the physical force, it would riot in the overthrow of all civil order and law.

Now that this arch-schemer of mischief has at last been arrested, we trust he will be made to feel the full measure of every penalty he has incurred. Of all Northern coadjutors of the rebell on, Vallandigham is the very one of whom an example ought to be made. His peculiar notoriety would make the example all the more signal in itself, and all the more effective as a warning. The executive branch of the Government has been clothed by Congress with every power necessary to the maintenance of its authority; and the people have a right to expect that this authority will be the most strenuously vindicated where it has been the most injuriously defied.

A Million and a Billion.

We are perpetually hearing of millions, and of how many millions it would require to do this or that. We have a good idea what a million of dollars will do, but we very much doubt whether one person in a thousand has a correct idea of the quantity or number contained in a million.—For instance, if you would ask a person how long it would occupy him to put down a million dots on a sheet of paper, he will generally tell you something so far from the fact as to be laughable. Permit us therefore to say for we have tried the experiment more than once, that it would occupy an expert man about 14 days supposing him to work bank hours (that is six.) ince-santly, doing nothing but putting dots on the paper or dipping his pen into the ink. This will give our readers some idea of the quantity or number contained in a million. Let one try it, by laying his watch on the table close to the paper, and work for ten or twenty minutes, then add and multiply.

But what is a million compared to a billion? A very short answer will suffice for a long story. It is a million times a million. But who could count it? No man! A quick bank-teller can count one hundred and sixty o seventy a minute; but let us suppose he could go as far as 200. Then one hour will produce 12,000, a day 288,000, and a year (or 365 days) 105, 20,000. Let us suppose, now, that Adam at the beginning of his existence had begun to count, had continued to do so, and was counting still, he would not now, according to the usually supposed age of our globe, have counted near enough; for, to count a billion 9,520 years, 34 days, 5 hours and 20 minutes. Now supposing we were to allow poor Adam 12 hours daily for rest, eating and sleeping, he would need 19,024 years, 60 days, 10 hours and 40 minutes.—Investigator.

A Slight Difference.—A Providence paper remarks, that anthracite coal lately found in Rhode Island looks like coal, feels like coal, and smells like coal; all the difference is, that coal burns, but that will not. Were every one to use the Rhode Island coal, they of course would be cold in the Winter; but if every one used Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers, they would soon be free from

FINAL CORRESPONDENCE.

Peterboro', Canada West,
April 8, 1863.

MY LORD,

I have the pleasure to enclose a Draft on the Union Bank of London for $459 89c., being the balance of the amount raised in behalf of the British Operatives, in the County of Peterboro, Canada West.

On the last occasion of my addressing your Lordship, (December 24, 1862,) I forwarded, in the name of the Central Committee, the sum of $2000. The sum of $63 was previously transmitted by the Village of Ashburnham, a village separated from the Town of Peterboro only by the river Otonabee, to the Montreal Committee; so that the total amount placed at the disposal of the Committee under your Lordship's presidency, by the County of Peterboro, C. W., is $2,522 89 cents.

Begging the favour of an acknowledgement of the communication,

I have the honour to be,
My Lord,
Your Lordship's most obedient,
Humble servant,
VINCENT CLEMENTI,
Hon. Sec.

The Right Honourable, the Lord Mayor of London.

BRITISH RELIEF FUND,
Mansion House,
London, 28th April 63.

SIR,

I have now the pleasure to acknowledge on behalf of the Lord Mayor and Mansion House Committee the receipt of your letter of the 8th April enclosing a Draft, value $459 89 cents, being the balance of an amount subscribed by the residents in the County of Peterboro, Canada West, in aid of the distressed poor in the Cotton Manufacturing districts of this country. I am requested by His Lordship and the Committee to express their earnest thanks for this further donation to the Mansion House Relief Fund.

I am, sir,
Yours obediently,
JOSEPH GIBBS,
Secretary.

Rev'd Vincent Clementi, Hon. Sec. British Operatives' Relief Fund, County of Peterboro, Canada West.

An alphabetical list, containing the names of all Subscribers to the above Fund, has been printed, and the Collectors have been furnished with copies. Should any Subscriber fail to obtain one, the undersigned will be happy to supply the deficiency.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—Being present at the adjourned inquest on the late Edmond Uglow, and hearing John McKeown state in his evidence that he was a Physician and Surgeon, and that he graduated at the Medical Department of Victoria College, in Toronto, and that he had the degree of M. D. conferred upon him by said College.

On enquiry I find that he did apply for a degree, but was given to understand that the only way he could possibly obtain a degree was to attend the usual course of Lectures, and pass the usual examinations; he has not done neither, not even attempted it. So much for the Drs. truthfulness.

I have the honor to be,
Yours, &c.,
ARGUS.

Q. 6—Does the Lieutenant make a corresponding change?

A.—Yes.

Q. 7—When the leader of a Company, Subdivision or Section changes his flank on the march, what words does he give as he falls in,—in his new place?

Q. 8—If he changes during the wheel, when does he give those words?

A.—Immediately after the word "Forward."

Q. 9—What caution should commanders of Companys give, previously to giving a word of command?

A.—They should call the number of their Company, thus No. 1, halt—or as the case may require.

Q. 10—When in motion, when must executive words be given?

A.—Executive words must be given as the men are commencing the pace which will bring them to the spot on which the command has to be executed.

The next Section will be the Formation of a Company in Line.

Exciting Night in a New Orleans Theatre.

(From the New Orleans Era, April 24.)

There was an exciting time at the Varieties Theatre last night. The house was crowded, and many ladies present, as it was a benefit occasion. The play of Rathelien had progressed to the conclusion of the first act. The curtain fell, and quiet reigned throughout the theatre, while without the elements were at war—the thunder rolling, lightning flashing in the windows and the rain pouring down upon the roof. The orchestra prepared to play as usual, when there was a sudden shout, raised as if by preconcerted signal; the Star Spangled Banner was displayed in the second tier, and a general demand was made for "Hail Columbia." The orchestra hesitated, and the demand grew more loud and determined—the excitement increased—but still the music tarried.

A portion of the audience began to leave and calls of "come back, come back;"—"let no one leave"—"he is a coward that flies now"—"we will have 'Hail Columbia'"—shouts and all sorts of noises—threats and violent language—conspired to make the scene one of the most stormy and boisterous we have ever witnessed. One man, who was leaving with a lady, stopped to expostulate, saying it was unjust to call for National airs while there were Confederates in the house; but he had scarcely spoken the words before he was surrounded by an angry crowd of Union men, and a struggle ensued in the dress circle, during which we saw a pistol drawn. This served to increase the fright among the ladies, and several of them fainted. Still the orchestra refused to answer the demand.

In the midst of this exciting scene, Mr. Baker, appeared on the stage. He was received with applause; and, upon asking what was the meaning of this demonstration, he was informed by Dr. Dostie, that this being a Union city, the audience were determined that the national airs should be played—that the theatre had had a prosperous season, and had been patronized by Union people, and no symbol of the Union had been displayed, or national airs played during the entire season—and the present company were determined that Hail Columbia should be played before the performance proceeded any further.

To this Mr. Baker answered that he had permission from the military authorities and license from the city to conduct the theatre, and he had received strict orders from these authorities to allow nothing of a political character. ("'Tis a lie, 'tis a lie," from all parts of the house.) That only four weeks since he had received such orders from Capt. Kilborn, and he dare not disregard them, therefore he could not comply with the demand.

The audience interrupted him with the demand that the national airs should be played, and would listen to no further reasoning. Mr. Bowers now appeared on the stage, as also Mrs. Baker, and attempted to speak, but it was in vain—there appeared to be but one determination on the part of the majority of the audience then present, and that was, Hail Columbia or a row.—Mr. Ives the Mayor's Secretary, now made his appearance, and attempted an explanation—to the effect, that under the orders of the Mayor, it was not permitted to play the national airs. His voice was drowned in a renewed outburst of vociferations, and he was compelled to withdraw, when an officer, wearing the uniform of a major (Major Foster, 128th New York Volunteers) stepped upon the stage from one of the private boxes, and, commanding silence, said he would take the responsibility. He ordered the orchestra to strike up Hail Columbia, and the order was reluctantly obeyed. The old tune was greeted with cheer upon cheer; and the Union men, having carried their point, resumed their good humor, and it was announced that their demands having been satisfied the play could proceed. Many of the ladies returned to their seats, good order again prevailed, and the play went on.

But we discovered another storm brewing, which we felt must sooner burst with greater fury upon the house than the first. When Mr. Bowers made his appearance, there was much applause from a portion of the house, which subsided amid hisses from another portion of the house. He stepped forward to the footlights, and inquired: "What is the meaning of those hisses?" repeating the question several times before he was answered, when some one said: "Because we wish to hiss." He then said he would be happy to meet the man who hissed outside, where they could settle the matter. This episode caused some hard feelings and harder words, and one gentleman threw his card upon the stage. Dr. Dostie quieted any further demonstration at the time by saying: "Gentlemen let the play go on, and we can settle all these private matters to-morrow."

The curtain had fallen on the third act, and the signs of the renewal of the difficulty were so portentous, that we thought it advisable to see some ladies in whose company we were, and who were trembling with fright, out of the building.

When we returned, loud cries were being made for music; but the musicians, after the first difficulty, had gathered up their instruments and notes and skedaddled. The call was responded to by hoisting the curtain for the fourth act. The disturbance, however, continued. The audience were determined not to let the play go on till the orchestra had responded to their call for Yankee Doodle. The actors persevered, but the audience out-persevered the actors—still there was no music. Again were the walls of the theatre shaken by the shouts of the people, and everything was indeed "confusion worse confounded."

The noise attracted the Provost Guard, at this juncture, just as a rush was made by several parties for the stage. One gentleman had got on the stage and struck at Vining Bowers, who drew a small stage sword which he wore, and throwing up a guard, cried, "Stand off, sir; the gentleman at the time appeared to be in the act of drawing a pistol. The scene of excitement was now beyond description—ladies and gentlemen rushing in fright from the theatre—the actors and actresses hurrying excitedly round the stage—people, maddened by passion, rushing forward in a menacing manner—while the Provost Guard rushed in and at once took possession of the stage.

The guard having succeeded in establishing some sort of order, Capt. Davis, of Gen. Bowen's staff, peremptorily ordered the theatre to be closed. Lieut. Col. Hopkins empowers us to say that this order was not authorized—and that the guard could have restored order without closing the theatre.

Col. Hopkins was at the St. Charles Hotel, and hearing of the disturbance, at once reported it to Gen. Bowen, who issued an order immediately, and sent it to the threatre to be read to the audience, which order would have put an end to all further disturbance; but, unfortunately, it did not Shocking and Fatal Accident.

Another of those terrible accidents arising from the careless use of firearms which cast a gloom over a community, occurred on Sandwich street on Friday night last, when a brother unfortunately shot two of his sisters, one of whom is already dead, while the other is not expected to recover.

The following are the facts of the case as we have learned them from a neighbor of the unfortunate family:—

The young man Greaves is a member of Captain Wagstaff's Company of Volunteers, who meet for drill on Sandwich street, about fourteen miles from Windsor. On the evening in question Greaves returned home from drill, when the conversation turned upon what he had just learned. He said he would show them, and went into the house for his gun to go through the manual exercise, and went into the yard, his sisters standing in the door of the house and looking on. In the course of his exercises he said he would show them how they fired, when the gun went off, lodging some buckshot in the side of one of the sisters, and shooting the other through both arms, as she stood sidewise to him with folded arms. Dr. Cosgrain was immediately summoned, but notwithstanding all his exertions one of the sisters, who was married, died at five o'clock on Saturday afternoon. The other is not expected to recover.

The unhappy author of the mischief is in a fearful state of mind at the result of his carelessness; and the untimely death of this young woman adds another casualty to the hundreds already on record against leaving loaded fire-arms about the house.

It may be proper to state here that it was not his Government rifle that he was using, but a fowling piece of his father's. Under which the management of the theatre will in future be required to conduct the establishment.

There was but one arrest made during the evening, that of a gentleman who sprang upon the stage during the excitement, and drew his pistol upon Bowers, when that gentleman's sword was drawn, and the person arrested was a Union man. We are happy to be able to state that notwithstanding the excitement, there were no accidents and nobody was hurt.

The following is the order of Gen. Bowen referred to above:

ORDERS OF PROVOST MARSHAL GENERAL,
DEPAR MENT OF THE GULF,
New Orleans, Third April, 1863.

Mr. Baker, Manager Theatre:

It is reported to me that you have declined to cause National airs to be played at your Theatre at the request of your audience, for the reason that you have been forbidden by the Mayor of this city. No such order can be recognized or held as valid in the presence of the United States army. You will, therefore, cause the National airs—Hail Columbia, Star Spangled Banner and Yankee Doodle—to be played before the audience leaves your Theatre this evening.

JAMES BOWEN,
Brig. Gen. P. M. G.

Serious Railway Accident.—On Tuesday morning last, as the Way freight train, from Brantford for Buffalo was stopping at the Caledonia railway station, to take on freight, &c., a through freight train, ran directly into the rear of it—completely cutting the passenger car through in the centre and smashing it to atoms. It also smashed up the second class car and one or two freight cars, and did considerable damage to the engine, as well as to a number of freight cars, which were not entirely broken up. Just previous to the collision several male passengers were in the passenger car, together with a young lady named Nelly Moore, the daughter of Mr. C. Moore, of Brantford; but when they saw the coming train the men jumped off, and coward like, left the young lady to her fate, without warning her of her danger; and the first intimation she had of it was when she found herself lying on the embankment among the debris of the demolished cars. She was immediately picked up and carried into the railway hotel by parties who had rushed to the rescue, among whom was the gentleman in whose company she was traveling, and, who, at the time of the collision was with the conductor, near the station house, settling about some freight matters. Drs. McPherson and Wheeler were immediately on the ground and examined the patient, when they found she had gone through the terrible crash with only the fracture of a leg, below the knee joint and several slight scratches, from all of which she will probably recover within a few weeks by good attendance and careful treatment. A colored boy was in the second class car and happily escaped without injury, as did also the engineer, firemen and the brakesmen, with one exception, and he was but slightly injured. The escape of Miss Moore from death is nothing less than a miracle, and how the rest escaped injury is equally so. We can only account for the safety of any part of the train from the presence of mind of Mr. Oxley, the conductor of the freight train, who immediately on his seeing the coming train ordered his engineer to put on all steam, which he did, but owing to the slippery state of the rails, he could not make head way very fast, but still lightened the shock materially. There has been gross carelessness in the matter somewhere, and we have no doubt the officials will ferret it out and punish the guilty parties, by dismissal or otherwise.—Grand River Sachem.

A Hint.

How few, of even well educated men, speak correctly. They seem to ignore the principles which they have spent so many long hours in acquiring. They forget to reduce to practice that which they know well how to theorize upon. Hence, the importance of making children associate with those only who are naturally in the habit of using correct, refined and chaste language. Hence, likewise, it is a bad practice to let children be too much with domestics, as they are apt thereby to "catch up" "phrases and words," which, if not improper in themselves, are at least highly undesirable. A hint to the thoughtful is sufficient.

May 14, 1863.

Mr. Editor —With much fear and trembling I am again in print, (I write this presuming my epistle will appear in print.) I wish to say a word upon several things. First then: I saw that very wondering and wonderful letter of Master Erastus in your column last week. I must own it was a very fine production for a lad, who is evidently a little "verdant," and not a little conceited. (Erastus needn't read the last clause except he likes.) Erastus has, in my opinion,—and he no doubt thinks that worth something valuable—made a very good beginning. I advise him to persevere and go ahead, for he does not know what one day he may become or come to. He may be a puisne, (puny?) judge, a member of parliament, or even a town councillor; or,—what, I can't for the life of me get a word to cap the climax, oh! I have got it—or a newspaper Editor. But, dear me, what I am doing, and mamma says I must not answer young gentlemen's letters. Now I wish to obey mamma. Do you think, grave sir, I am breaking her command in my present writing? Perhaps not, as Erastus's letter is not TO me but ABOUT me. By-the-way in reading over his letter again, just now, I don't think he is so very verdant or conceited after all, (E. may read this.) "Second impressions," &c. everybody knows the rest.

Now 2nd: You will remember that in my first tall effusion I urged upon my sex the propriety of fitting themselves for teachers, &c. Oh, if you only had seen the crowd of feminine candidates that were before our staid and learned County Board the other day, you would have jumped at the conclusion at once, that many of my sex believed as I do. There, sir, you might have, would have, I am afraid, been not a little mistaken. I will tell you how. I believe that "we" should see the propriety of fitting ourselves to become teachers.—Now not a few of the candidates strongly believe in the idea of becoming teachers; but the idea of seeing, entertaining or regarding the propriety of fitting themselves, or being fitted at all, for the duties of such positions, never in my humble estimation (I had 'opinion' before and I hate tautology,) and as far as my limited experience goes, seems to have found a lodging place (or an entrance either) inside of their craniums.—T ere is some little difference between my idea and theirs. What is your opinion? But our County Board is a good natured Board, and the 'batch" of pedagogues and pedagogueenes (in that right?) of all kinds and classes which it turned out last week proves it. The Board was pleased with the candidates, and the candidates were pleased with the County Board, and all were pleased with each other. It was a happy state of affairs, and a happy time. But it does seem to me (poor me, I wish I was some body sometimes) that good nature and turning out good Educators d n't always go hand in hand, like the lovers we are told of in novels or in the Ledger's tales (I say "told of" for I wish you to distinctly understand I don't read novels or the Ledger.) How tickled were some of the candidates at the close? I had a friend (a female one of course) who went up, prepared with all a martyr's fortitude, to be "plucked," as I think they call it when the unlucky candidate cannot crawl through the examinative crevices, (poetry or rhetoric that, which?) or at best to get a third class; but when she returned what joy was in her eye, and on her cheek. She had not got a third but a second class. She said she didn't hardly think (I didn't think anything about the matter, I knew it) she deserved it; but the Board was so kind, how could she refuse what it had so generously offered her; nay, she insisted, thrust upon her, (I could not if I had been in her place.) It is said (my friend did not say so) that very strong power woman's tears (especially when the woman is young and pretty) "presto d" —as the Wizard of the North says—an ungainly figure 3 into his more comely neighbor 2. I only give what many-tongued rumor says, as a matter of course I don't believe it. But people will say such things one does not know what to believe. I declare, Mr. Editor, I am not half through, but must conclude for the present.

"AGATHA."

P. S.—Perhaps I am a little sore upon the 2nd point. I think "brains" and not "age" should have to do with certificates. A.

An Island of Salt.—The salt-works that Com. Buchanan attempted to destroy at Petit Anse, Western Louisiana, proved to be only a storehouse of rock salt, which constitutes almost the bulk of the island. The discovery of this remarkable salt-mine has only recently been made. The immense value of this mine of wealth can scarcely be realized. A million dollars was offered to its owner by a company of persons in its neighborhood, but refused. This island of salt—possibly three or four miles long and one wide, of irregular form, and covered from fifteen to twenty feet with rich soil—bears on its surface immense green and live oak trees. Some 500 prisoners and deserters have from time to time come into possession of Com. Buchanan; also large quantities of sugar; also 300

THE BRITISH AMERICAN.
A MONTHLY MAGAZINE DEVOTED TO
Literature, Science and Art.

NOTWITHSTANDING the repeated attempts which have been made in Canada to establish a Monthly Magazine devoted to Literature and Science it is nevertheless apparent, that success has not been the reward of those who have engaged in the undertaking.

The Canadian Institute at Toronto, the Natural History Society of Montreal, the Literary and Historical Society of Quebec, aided by the Government grants they enjoy, regularly publish their proceedings, and thus occupy to a greater or less extent, the several fields which from the special objects of their incorporation. But the public at large are still unsupplied with a periodical Magazine devoted to general Literature of Canadian origin and growth, and to Science divested of unattractive technicalities and adapted to the requirements of those who do not profess familiarity with its sterner details.

It is the design of the originators of the British American Magazine to occupy this vacant field, and endeavor to satisfy a want which is so generally felt to exist.

In maturing the plan of a new periodical, it is desirable to supply the public with some guarantee of its character and prospects. It is therefore determined to request intending contributers to permit their names to be published in the prospectus, as among those who are willing, not only to give it countenance and support, but to add to its vitality by contributing to its pages. It is also thought advisable to publish the names of those who are willing and anxious to encourage the undertaking by a literal subscription to the first number.

Many of the difficulties which have impeded the progress, and intimately led to the abandonment of a Monthly Periodical, all star in general design to the British American Magazine, have disappeared, with the advance of the country in population, wealth and civilization: hence the originators commence their labours with far brighter expectations than their predecessors could have enjoyed, and they anticipate, without doubt or distrust, the successful progress of the undertaking.

The aim of the British American Magazine is to encourage British American Literature, to offer an opportunity long desired by many for giving public and permanent expression to their thoughts, to foster a taste for literary pursuits, to prevent the marvels of Science in familiar language, easily understood by all, to supply a monthly abstract of whatever is interesting and valuable in the periodical literature of Great Britain, and a brief resume of the progress of Literature, Science, Industry and Art, throughout North British America.

It will be within the province of the Magazine to furnish critical notices of new publications, unfettered by prejudices, nationality, or religious bias; and while political discussion of a party character will be absolutely excluded from its pages, set descriptive articles relating to our home institutions, affecting the general interests of the country, will be freely admitted.

Each monthly issue will contain one hundred and twelve pages, of the same size as the English Monthlies, which will form at the close of the year two volumes containing 672 pages each.

The publishers hope to be able to commence their issue in April next, and from the success which has already attended their efforts to procure subscribers, they anticipate that they will be able to present the British American Magazine with a subscription list amounting to 10,000 copies for the first number.

Terms $3 per annum, in advance.

CONSULT THE OLD ENGLISH PHYSICIANS FOR ASTHMA, INCIPIENT CONSUMPTION, Infirmities of Youth and Old Age.

NO MERCURY USED.

Dr. Amos & Son, 48 EAST GENESSEE STREET, BUFFALO, N. Y.

ARE the only Physicians in the State who are members of the Royal College of Surgeons, London.

May be consulted from 8 o'clock in the morning, until 9 at night, in every stage and symptom of Disease.

The treatment they adopt is the result of upwards of thirty years' extensive and successful practice in London.

A most Scientific Invention

An instrument for the cure of general Debility, or Nervous Exhaustion, more properly known as Seminal Weakness, &c. These complaints can be permanently cured in from 48 hours to two months by the use of this Instrument, when used according with medicines.

DR. AMOS & SON, in order to satisfy the most skeptical as to the merits of this Instrument, pledge themselves that in any instance where it may prove unsatisfactory after a fair trial, the money will be refunded by the Instrument in good order. Price 10 dollars, by mail or express.

YOUNG MEN TAKE PARTICULAR NOTICE

That those sad and baneful practices so fatally practised in boyhood, a habit frequently learned from evil companions, or at school, the effects of which are nightly felt even when asleep, and if not cured, renders marriage impossible and destroys both mind and body, should apply immediately. Self abuse is one of the most formidable enemies to health, for nothing else in the dire catalogue of human ills causes such a general prostration of the system, diminishes the power of procreation, destroys the faculties of the mind, weakens the memory, causes mental derangement, and in the course of time, renders the sufferer wretched, miserable and unfit for the enjoyments of life, or society, business, and all earthly happiness, and leaves the sufferer wrecked in body and mind, a burden to himself and friends.

Those who have injured themselves by a certain practice, should not marry, as they may be successfully treated by the above physicians.

Persons doubtful of their cases should write a statement of the same, and address Dr. AMOS & SON, 48 East Genesee street, Buffalo, N. Y.

THE WORLD.

AN INDEPENDENT

Daily, Weekly and Semi-Weekly NEWSPAPER.

IN soliciting for another year a continuance of that liberal support which has given to the World its present rank among American journals—a circulation, business patronage, and influence equalled by other Journals only after the effort of many years—we renew to our old and new subscribers the promise that no labor nor expense will be spared to maintain for the World its claim to be,

The Best Newspaper in America.

In politics, journal as ever, the World is, and ever will be, perfectly independent but never neutral. No only credit is a national one—of which are the corner stones.

The Union, the Constitution, and the Laws, and Freedom of Speech, of the Press, of Political Discussion and Action,

The political agents of the past year have notably demonstrated the need of an able, fearless quickening, [illegible]

In the commercial metropolis of the country, which shall give constant, bold, and vigorous utterance to the conservative sentiments of the great men and the honest masses of the nation. Opposing every enemy to

The Union,

whether armed in rebellion at the South, or insidiously planting the seeds of disunion at the North.

Opposing every violation of the Constitution,

the only bond and hope of union, the only ground upon which we can exhort and compel the allegiance of the South:

Opposing every infraction of

The Laws,

in high places or in low, believing that obedience to Law is service to God.

Opposing every violation of the

Freedom of Speech, of the Press, of Political Discussion and Action,

by whomsoever those violations are committed, whether by the executive in its Embassy, Illegal, and Unjust Arrests.

its refusal of the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus, its denial of the rights and liberties of citizens, its arrest without warrant, its imprisonments without trial, its abrogation of state and federal laws, its illegal proclamation of an empty emancipation, or whether those violations are committed by the party in power, its orators and its appeals, subscribing to measures which must sunder the Union for the sake of destroying slavery, and denouncing treason against all their political opponents.

Loyal to the Union always, it will give to the administration a hearty and vigorous support whenever and wherever the administration itself is loyal to the bond, the principles, and the practices of the government.

The World will oppose all compromises which would barter away or divide the Union, for which alone the North is waging war. It will oppose peace itself, till the success of the war, as the true peacemaker, is secured; and will oppose the prosecution of the war with an economy which has not justified its enormous expenditures, and a vigor which the nation during a year has prayed for in vain.

The same sense, zeal in exercised over the columns of the World to exclude everything which could offend a pure, Christian morality, and recourse will always be had to the same high principles as well to guard its columns as to guide its judgments of passing events.

All the News

will be found in the columns of the World from the various departments of human activity,

Political, Aeronautical, and Commercial, as well as in Literature, Science and Art.

New Publications, Inventions, Discoveries, and Works of Art will receive the same careful and thorough attention.

The latest and most important news from London, Paris, Turin, Rome, Syria, China, California, Japan, Egypt, and South America, our correspondents will send to us.

Our correspondents are attached to the various divisions of the army; will accompany them wherever they go, and by the free use of the telegraph and the mails, present in the columns of the World

A Complete History of the War,

from day to day, and from month to month.

In the Weekly and Semi-Weekly editions of the World, a specially large space will be given to

Agriculture,

and to all departments of

Manufacturing and Mechanical Industry.

The Weekly World will contain an admirable serial story during the current year.

THE DAILY WORLD.

The Daily World is the most complete Commercial and news paper published in America. Besides as full telegraph news, war correspondence, and foreign news, &c., as any two cent daily, it contains also much fuller commercial news. In Stock News, Produce and Cattle Market reports, Foreign and Domestic Importations, Stock Lists, and Commercial news, no business man can do without.

EMPLOYMENT.

THE Undersigned has, for several years past, been engaged in a business which has yielded him at the rate of three thousand dollars per annum, and is now willing to teach it to others. The business is a highly useful and genteel character, accepted both to cities and villages, and one that any person of ordinary sense, young or old, male or female, can acquire with a few hours' practice, and by which they can secure a very handsome income. Several young ladies who have received instructions from me, both in New York State and Pennsylvania, are earning upwards of $15 per week by it, and there is no reason why any one else cannot do the same. Invalids, even, can do well by it, as it is no peddling affair, but a business that is perfectly respectable. Gentleman and ladies of leisure who would like to learn the business for their own amusement or pleasure, will find the exercise not a little pleasant and healthful, and one that they will take great interest in. On receipt of $1, I will send printed instructions by which any person can readily acquire the art, and these instructions will also contain every particular relative to the carrying it on so that it will be highly profitable. The purchaser of the "printed instructions" will also be authorized to teach it to others; and I have sometimes received as high as $200, for teaching it personally to a single individual. I would state further that for $1-50 I will buy everything that is necessary to commence the business with, and the articles can be got almost anywhere, in city or country, or if preferred, I can furnish them. Address ALVORDY PARSONS, No. 30 Liberty St., New York.

ANNUAL MEETING

INVESTIGATION REPORT - DECLARATION OF BONUS.

THE thirty-fifth annual Meeting of this Company was held within the Royal Hotel, Aberdeen on Friday, the 18th April.

Alexander Stronach, Esq., of Drumallan, Chairman of the Ordinary Directors, in the Chair.

There were submitted to the meeting—

1.—Report by the Directors, which, on the motion of the Chairman, was cordially and unanimously approved of and adopted.

2.—The Balance Sheet for the past year, with detailed states relative thereto, duly certified as correct, in terms of the Act of Incorporation, by the Chairman and Manager, and also by the Auditor.

There was also laid on the Table the various Valuation States in connection with the Quinquennial Investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, as at 31st January, 1862.

The following particulars derived from the Balance Sheet and States before-mentioned, show the result of the operations of the Company for the past year:—

Amount proposed for Life Assurance during the year, contained in 1189 Proposal	£454,836 0 0
Amount of Proposals accepted, and for which 981 Policies were issued	350,686 0 0
ANNUAL PREMIUMS or said Policies	11,170 1 0
CLAIMS BY DEATH including BONUSES on PARTICIPAT ON POLICIES, and after deducting Sums recovered from other Offices under guarantees	23,679 1 0
TOTAL SUM Assmured under 4,759 current LIFE POLICIES	1,955,85 0 0
TOTAL ACCUMULATED FUNDS	372,567 3 3
TOTAL ANNUAL REVENUE	96,756 4 4

With reference to the recent investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, as at 31st January last, the Report States that both the principles of valuation and the details thereof, had been submitted to James John Downey, Esq., Actuary to the Economic Life Office in London, a gentleman well known as one of the highest authorities on such subjects in the kingdom, and had received his entire approval, as having been made on just and sound principles, and a curately carried out as certified in his report to the Directors, which formed part of the Appendix to their Report. This step the Directors considered could not fail to give the utmost confidence—both to the shareholders and the Policyholders—in the soundness and correctness of the valuation.

During the Quinquennial period, the claims by death, including the bonus additions which had been paid, and which had been considerably under the number that might have been expected from the Mortality Tables on which the Office rates are based, amounting to £93,915 6s 6d

In valuing the Policies, each had been separately calculated, and net premiums had only been used, thus leaving a surplus of annual revenue of £11,427 10s 7d, to meet future expenses and to form a source of profit for next investigation. The total amount of claims by death paid since the commencement of the Company, was £217,821 4s.

The Securities held by the Company were in a satisfactory position, and had been recently carefully scrutinized in detail by the Directors.

In conclusion, the Directors con ratulated both the Proprietors and the Assured on the high position which the Company now occupied in the estimation of the public, and on the encouraging prospect of its business operations for the future.

DECLARATION OF BONUS.

From the profits realized on the Life business, a retrospective Bonus of £1 7s 6d per cent per annum for the Quinquennial period was declared, on the sums originally assured under all Participating Policies in force at the previous additions thereto; also a further prospective Bonus of £3 per cent per annum, on the amount of the Policies with said Bonuses, on all such of said Policies as may become claims by Death previously to the 31st January, 1867.

It will be observed, that this rate of Bonus is equivalent in the case of our older Policies to £1 14s per cent per annum on the original sum assured: that the total additions to the sum assured, now vested, are equal to 32 per cent on the sum assured: and that as the younger ages the additions amount to upwards of 75 per cent of the premiums paid.

Statement showing the Progress of the Company's Business during the Quinquennial Period, ending 31st January, 1862:

Year ending 31st January.	Amount proposed for Assurance	Amount of New Policies Issued.	No. of New Policies Issued.		New Annual Premiums.	Total Revenue in each year.	Accumulated Funds.
			Assured for £500 and upwards.	Assured for under £500.
1858	£169,640	£136,180	435	356	£3 989 18 0	£60,706 11 10	£248,656 9 2
1859	206,805	169,171	510	477	5,102 1 6	65,701 5 3	301,431 3 4

Totals	£1,536,276	£1,219,697	3579	3209	37,600 15 10	338,431 16 6	1,597,228 15 6

Votes of thanks were passed to the Directors and Office-bearers of the Company at Head-Offices and Branches, and after a very hearty vote of thanks to the Chairman for his conduct in the Chair, the meeting was dissolved.

PROGRESS.

First the blade,—then the ear,—then the ripe corn.—St. Mark.

"I've found you out," said the rain drop
To a tiny grain of wheat,—
"Did you think you were buried up, and dead,
Forevermore, in your darksome bed?
Come forth to the light, my sweet.

Then it opened its eyes like a baby,
And turned in its cradle mold,
And drank the draught to its lips that pressed,
And felt strange vigor inspire its breast,
As a steed at the trumpet call.

Then forth crept a spider-like fibre,
And a filament; root took hold,
And a tender, tremulous root was seen,—
While a wiry stem with its banner green,
Transpierced the cleaving mould.

So, freed from a stranger's terror,
Its fresh blade flourished high,—
And anon the ripening sheaf came in,
With manhood's beard around its chin,
Gladdening the reaper's eye.

Even thus, the span-long infant,
Expands to five feet ten,
And he who knew but to pine and cry,
Uplifts the sword of the warrior high,
And leads embattled men.

For little by little while hear below,
Our greatest works are done—
And stone by stone, with progress slow,
Tome, castle, and cathedral grow,—
And the pyramid meets the sun.

From the humble basis of A B C,
The dome of Learning ascends,
There the princes of science, in dignity meet
And the crown'd philosopher takes his seat,
While the world in homage bends.

Miscellaneous.

The death of Jackson.

A brave and honest foe has fallen! Thus Jefferson Jackson has died of wounds received in the confusion of the battle of Chancellorsville, at the hands of his own men! There is not left another man in the South to take his place, and Richmond papers scarcely exaggerate when they say that the Confederacy could better have lost fifty thousand men! Good in counsel, his peculiar excellence was in the field. We know of no man on either side that surpassed him, if any equalled in handling an army.

We are in some respects better judges of his military talents than Southern men, since we felt the blows which they only saw dealt. It is certain that no other man has impressed the imagination of our soldiers and the whole community so much as he. An unknown name at the beginning of the war, save to his brother officers, and to his classes at the military school in Lexington, Virginia, his footsteps were earliest in the field, from which now death has withdrawn them. But in two years he has made his name familiar in every civilized land on the globe, as a General of rare skill, resource and energy.

No other General of the South could develope so much power out of slender and precarious means, by the fervid inspiration of his own mind, as Jackson. He had absolute control of his men, seeming almost to fascinate them. He drove them through marches long and difficult, without resources, feeding them as best he could; he delivered battles as a thunder-cloud discharges bolts, and if fortunes were against him, then, with even more remarkable skill than in advancing, he held his men together in retreat, and with extraordinary address and courage, eluded pursuit, sometimes fighting sometimes fleeing, till he brought off his forces safely. Then, almost before the dust was laid upon the war path, his face was again toward his enemies, and he was ready for renewed conflict. His whole soul was in his work. He had no doubts or parleyings within himself. He put the whole force of his being into his blows for the worst cause man ever fought for, as few of our Generals have ever learned to do for the best cause for which trumpet ever sounded.—Henceforth we know him no more after the flesh. He is no longer a foe. We think of him now as a noble-minded gentleman, a rare and eminent christian! For years he has been an active member of the Presbyterian Church, of which he was a ruling elder. He never, in all the occupations of the camp, or temptation of campaigns, lost the fervor of his piety, or remitted his Christian duties.

We know that before every important move he spent much time in prayer. He had so put his soul in the keeping of his Master that he was relieved from all thought of self, and had the whole power of his life ready for his work. Officers of Fremont's army who pursued him in his famous retreat from the Shenandoah Valley, found him to be greatly beloved by the common people, among whom, in former times, he had labored in prayer-meetings, in temperance-meetings, and in every Christian word and work. No wonder he fought well along a region whose topography he had mapped down with prayers, exhortation, and Christian labor!

He was unselfish. Neither did he fight for personal advancement. He therefore did not fall into the ruinous habits of our generals who are always neglecting to do the things that can be done, because they are small, but squander time, and men, and patience in getting ready for great battles, which elude them, or defeat them. He incessantly struck on the right and on the left, and kept alive the fire in the hearts of ill-clad, poorly-fed, and overworked men by the excitement of enterprise and the constant relish of victories, small in detail, but whose sum was all-important.

Let no one suppose that the North will triumph over a fallen son with insulting gratulations! Nowhere else will the name of Jackson be more honored. Not for adhesion to the cause of slavery, but for his unauthorized personal character, for his devout piety, and for his military genius.

Our admiration of the personal and professional excellence of Jackson must not hide from our eyes the grand mistake of his life. He was in arms against a just Government. He was fighting against the National Rights of man. He was the champion of Slavery! Nothing can redeem a life prostituted to such ends from condemnation. No fervor of devotion, no amiableness or dignity, no personal blamelessness can atone for such a crime. Indeed, when from sympathy with their class, or from a vicious philosophy, or from political heresies sincerely adopted, men choose the wrong side, all their good qualities make their deed the worse. It intensifies their power for harm. We may pity, we may extenuate, we may accredit honesty, moral convictions, and the whole train of Slavery excuses. But the day is coming when men will be judged not by the mere moral quality of the elements and details of their life, but by the use which was made of that whole organized life and character. And nothing can save men from condemnation who in this age of the world, in the grand conflict between the people and their oppressors, take sides with the strong to put down the poor and unoffending!

Slavery is not another kind of government. It is simply organized oppression.—It is—by its own legal definitions and by the whole practicle administrations of it—as oppressive that denudes men of manhood. It denies education, destroys mortality, corrupts the heart of master and slave, leaves women unprotected, reduces the relation of parent and child to the wild instinct that connects the animal and its whelp. Slavery in the South lay like the great desert of Sahara, torrid, scorched, barren of all but venomous reptiles. Now, no man can take sides with such a system without having suffered in his own moral nature. It is comprehensive and fundamental degradation of heart and mind and soul. And the beauty of special personal excellences in other directions no more atones for the awful wickedness of such a crime committed by a man's whole nature, than the beauty of the blossoms neutralizes the poison of the deadly nightshade. As Paul did not spare himself of his awful career against Christ, although ignorantly and conscientiously pursued, so neither can we spare any men who aids in the brutalization of myriads of men, by any consideration of his sincerity or his amiableness.

The day is coming, and its light is already on the morning hills, when the lowest and weakest man who has cast in his mite to the cause of Liberty and Universal Education will stand immeasurably higher than the noblest, richest, and strongest who employed splendid talents and fervent piety in the cause of a detestable Oppression!

He has gone to the bar before which all are alike! He has met that Savior before whose face the poor, the weak and helpless, are even dearer than his own life! The veil has been removed. The mist is gone from before him. He stands by the Eternal Throne, to see the horror of that slavery which he sincerely defended in his earthly life, and to praise that grace which could save a great sinner, even, as a Slaveholder. In another world through better knowledge, let him rise high in worship and joy. But, in this world, and in the realm of History, all his personal excellences will serve but to temper the severity of coming condemnation, with pity and regret that so much that was good should be enslaved to gigantic wickedness.—Henry Ward Beecher in the N. Y. Independent.

Report of the Finance Commission.

(To the Editor of the Montreal Witness)

SIR,—The evidence taken before the Financial and Departmental Commission, having been called for by Parliament was produced, with some unfairness to the Commissioners, before the Report was ready; but this Report will, it is understood, be merely a judicial "summing up," for there is little place for anything sensational;—which there would have been if the Commissioners had commenced their inquiry into the accounts and vouchers themselves, instead of into the system by which accounts are kept and vouchers rendered.

The first world have been an attack against individuals, and left the Commissioners fairly open to the charge so often, in ignorance, made against them, namely, that they had undertaken a partizan job to blacken the characters of political opponents. They would have only the value of electioneering handbills. An inquiry into the system is fair, honorable and upright. The people will see by what machinery they are governed, and the results that will follow from an investigation into accounts and contingencies, will show, not merely that certain men have been spendthrifts and plunderers, but, that any men under such a system, might be the same,—not always from any positive dishonesty; but from the smoothness of the old paths, and the ruggedness of new, which so soon accustoms human weakness to habitual routine.

The evidence printed is mostly the personal testimony of the principal officials in the Departments of the Receiver-General Finance-Minister, Crown Lands, and Public Works, and for the information of the thousands of readers of the Witness who will not see the Report, it may be well to condense what is said of each:—

THE RECEIVER-GENERAL.

The Receiver General is the Treasurer of the Province; but he keeps no cash.—Any person owing the Government anything for land or timber dues, or anything else, and every collector of money, such as Collectors of Customs, or Excise, or Postmatters, pay their money into the Bank—usually the Bank of Upper Canada—to the credit of the Receiver-General, and send to the Department a certificate of deposit, for which an official receipt is returned to them. Any sum received by other departments, or coming direct to the department, as occasionally happens, with trifling amounts, is deposited in the Bank, a certificate taken and receipt sent in same form as if it had been originally deposited. Special deposits on interest may be made with other Banks; but the Book accounts where all the money is kept for current use is with the Bank of Upper Canada. The money is not paid except on authority of order of Council. Whoever has a claim or right to demand public money, whether a private individual, Chief of Department—must apply to the Council, which refers the question to the Finance Minister's Department, after the manner the other claims are dealt with. Particular payments on services that may be drawn against, a warrant issues to the Receiver-General, on which he gives the parties a cheque on the Bank, which is not valid till countersigned by the Inspector-General. For every shilling paid into the Receiver-General, a return is made to the Finance Minister's Department, where a duplicate account is kept. Then the Bank makes its return of monies received, which is regularly checked, so that no money can come under the Receiver-General's control without being recorded in another department and in the Bank; and no money can be touched or paid by him except by a warrant, or order issued by the Governor in Council, and drawn from the Bank by a cheque given to the party claiming. Nothing can be stricter than the checks on the Receiver-General from the time the money is put to his credit. What occurs before the money is put to his credit, or what the reasons for which warrants are issued, are things which the public must know.

THE AUDITOR.

By the Audit Act the Deputy Inspector General, the Commissioner of Customs, and Mr. Langton, whose office was created by the Act, are made a Board of Audit. The general impression has been that the "Auditor" was a high official authority, whose signature was an evidence of truthfulness wherever it appeared, but it appears that all these are subordinates of the Finance Minister's department, and consequently not in a position to say anything concerning the expenditures of their masters, at the head of the respective departments controlled by the different ministers, and consequently we find that they do not, as we heard, exercise the more important power given them by law of inquiring behind the vouchers presented with accounts as to whether they are correct.

The Commissioner of Customs checks and examines all the returns of customs and excise, and a few things are remitted by the Deputy Inspector General, but the Crown Land Department, the Department of Public Works, with many other services and accounts of institutions of persons who receive public money to be accounted for, make returns to Mr. Langton, whose evidence is fully taken by the Financial and Departmental Commission.

By his evidence, his examination and audit of accounts, in which the public assumed there was much safety, amounts to very little. It is after all, though pages are occupied in defending it, merely the Accounts for expenditure are rendered to him with vouchers, and the signature of the party sending in the account, is taken as sufficient evidence of the correctness of the voucher, for the Auditor has no means of going behind these. But these, when placed on the voucher has ever been done, or the articles charged were furnished, or the service ever performed, or whether the prices are in any way correct. Consequently the voucher may be valuable enough so far, as the amount of it corresponds with a line in the statement of account. In fact, the credit is a mere checking of figures, which in this way may prove themselves to be correctly as a problem in Euclid, while behind the voucher all is uncertainty.

The Savings Banks and Insurance Companies send no return at all, or such returns as they please and when they please, and the Auditor has no means of ascertaining their truth. As to the Chartered Banks, their returns published monthly, and examined by the public to possess an official guarantee of correctness in the signature of the Auditor, turn out to be flattery and delusive. The books make up their own statements with their own clerks, and send them to the Auditor, who publishes them just as they come without enquiry into the truth of any portion of the statements.—The Government might order further enquiry, but it has never done so. It is not to be assumed that the bank statements are not correct, but public attention should be drawn to the farce of a public officer bearing the high title of "Auditor" appearently certifying to statements as facts, of which he knows nothing.

The New Ministry.

The Montreal Herald thus speaks of the new members of the government:—

We believe that no point of respectable standing and high personal character, no ministry, which ever took office in Canada, has occupied so high grounds. With one exception, the whole of them as now constituted are men of considerable wealth, making them thoroughly independent of those influences which too often divert public men from the direct course. Of those sworn in on Saturday, who are new to office, we need only speak of four, as the others are well known already. Mr. Fergusson Blair is a son of the late Hon. A. Fergusson Jong a member of the Executive Council and one of our best Scottish Agriculturists, and Mr. Blair himself has, since his father's death, inherited a large property in Scotland. He was for some time a judge in U. Canada, and is a man of first-rate character and influence. Mr. Mowatt is a native of Kingston, of a good old Presbyterian stock, and is one of the first, if not the first Chancery lawyer in Canada West, he has realized a considerable fortune. Mr. Thibaudeau is a partner of Mr. Thomas, of this city, one of the most enterprising, successful and respected merchants in Quebec, and President of the Banque Nationale. Mr. Letellier St. Just is a gentleman of landed fortune residing some distance below Quebec. Mr. Wallbridge is a son of a U. E. loyalist, one of the earliest residents of that part of the country where Belleville now stands, and is possessed not only of the property, but the spirit of his ancestors. He has besides been for many years a successful lawyer. We are satisfied that it would be difficult to find any men who have a greater stake in the country, who are better qualified to take the management of the Government, or who are more likely to command confidence from this influential section

Mr. F. Hincks and Mr. Cobden.

Mr. F. B. Head, formerly Lieutenant-Governor of Upper Canada, replies to Mr. Hincks' Times letter:—As I have not the pamphlet in the House of Commons, Ottawa, where according to Mr. Hincks' words, it is to be found, I cannot refer to it, but I remember perfectly well that in England of having given great aid to the Confederates and after contrasting such conduct with the pecuniary measures for non-interference adopted by the government of the United States during the rebellion in Canada in 1837, which reference was which no immediate money grant was asked for, he says, 'I have mentioned these circumstances, in the hope that they may be generally known, and in order that they may bring the sentiments of this House and the public opinion of this country to a proper state, that feeling as we now do, I deem it right to enclose to you, without comment, the following two documents, printed and published by the Provincial Parliament of United Canada during the period determined by Mr. Gobeau as "causing a remarkable want of good faith of the United States." The documents referred to are a "Proclamation to the deluded supporters of British loyalty in Upper Canada, issued by General Sir George D. Sutherland, an American, and also a confession of the same individuals after he was captured by the British troops, and a few minutes before he attempted to commit suicide. "Sutherland" says the officer who was in charge of the prisoner, "showed me his own views, and on the back, those of his Government, for the line of conduct likely pursued by them. He said it was their determination, at all hazards, to obtain the Canadas as they had Texas, and then they would have the northern from the Gulf of Florida to the Northern Ocean. I asked him when he said 'they,' did he mean the people of the United States or the government? His answer was that the people of the States were the government, and the will of the people was the law by which their rulers must abide; that in the acts of the Americans in favor of the insurrection in this province and in the proclamations of the President and General Scott to put down the meetings and disturb the patriots, the Government had acted with duplicity, for it was not their wish or their intention to suppress them. 'In fact,' said he, 'it is a piece of humbug on their part, and, as a proof of it, I will tell you that some of the arms'll were robbed of the locks, or that the doors were opened, and we were told to help ourselves.'"

ATTACKED BY A BULL.—The Markham Economist says:—

"It is with sincere regret we learn that our old neighbor, Geo. Miller, Esq., the celebrated stock-breeder, was on Saturday last attacked by his large Bull Monarch, and so terribly injured as to leave him in a very critical state. The bull had been out of his yard or pen for an hour or so, when a servant man of Mr. Hawkins, a neighbor, undertook to drive him in. The animal became somewhat obstreperous; Mr. Miller, who was present, walked up to the head and struck him such a small cane he had on his hand; this seemed to enrage the brute, when he went at Mr. Miller, forced him down between his horns, where he held him some time, tearing his vest and shirt to ribbons, and broke four or five of his ribs. Had not Mr. Miller's son, who was on the opposite side of the yard, come to his immediate assistance, he would most likely have been killed on the spot. At last accounts, we were pleased to learn, Mr. Miller was in a fair way of recovery."

QUICK PASSAGE FROM NEW YORK.—Within the past few days some remarkable passages across the Atlantic have been reported at this port. Among the rest, as having performed one of the very fastest runs from New York this spring, we may instance the ship Milton Lockhart, Capt. G. Hatfield.—This vessel has just made the passage from New York to Liverpool in the remarkable short period of sixteen days—a fact which reflects equal credit on the builders of the vessel and the seamanship of her commander. It is a somewhat singular coincidence that the next best passage from New York, lately reported, should have been made by Capt. Hatfield's brother; the Gen. Wilmans, having made the run from the same port in seventeen days.—Liverpool Telegraph, April 3.

The Milton Lockhart is a regular trader to Montreal, having left Liverpool 25th of April for the port, with a large and valuable cargo.

ADULTERATION OF LIQUORS.—Mr. Bourassa has introduced a bill at the present session of Parliament, "to prevent the sale of adulterated liquors." The Governor, if the bill become law, is to appoint an inspector and analyst in each revenue division, who shall, on the order of any justice to whom complaint is made, examine any liquors submitted to him; and on his certificate of adulteration of said liquors, the justice may convict the seller, who shall be punished by three months imprisonment, and a fine of fifty dollars, and the condemned liquor shall be destroyed in front of the seller's establishment on a second conviction, the judgement to be publicly posted up and published in the newspapers.

A TOUCHING INCIDENT.—A little girl about nine years of age, who was being conducted to the Lunatic Asylum at Amherstburgh, was left for one night in charge of the matron of that town (Amherstburgh.) Upon sitting down to the table, she enquired if permission would be given her to ask a blessing. The lady in charge of her at the gaol replied that she might. The blessing, "May I not say my prayers to night and of the morning?" received the little unfortunate, "for mother told me to do so." This strikingly shows the deep impression of a mother's teachings, retaining their hold even after reason has lost her throne. Mothers! think of this.—Baltimore Journal.

THE PETERBOROUGH REPRESENTATION.

Colonel Haultain, by his independent, upright course in Parliament while our representative, secured not only the approval of his friends, but that of many heretofore opposed to him, consequently a general opinion prevailed that it was useless to offer opposition to him. Some time last week, however, the Conservatives in Town, being anxious, if possible, to secure the Colonel on their ticket, had a consultation, and a deputation waited on him to ascertain, if elected, whether he would vote against the present Government or not. He replied, he would not promise until they had declared their policy; and as this would not suit them they determined to bring out Mr. Dennistoun to oppose him, and while Col. Haultain was aspiring to his friends invitation to become again their representative. Mr. Dennistoun in the Town Hall was nominating to the electors the sins of the Macdonald-Sicotte Government, and stating that if elected he should oppose them. All went smoothly enough until Saturday evening, but when Mr. D. heard of the enthusiastic manner that Mr. Conger was spoken of, he decided, very wisely, to abandon the field. This decision was probably helped by the manner, it is said, that Mr. D. was received in Otonabee.

Whatever may be said for or against him as a member of Parliament, he deserves credit for discerning so soon that he was not the man for Galway!

Hon. Mr. Smith has been very anxious to represent this County in the Lower House, but dreading to oppose the Col. he would not come out while the former was expected to be in the field. Mr. Dennistoun's candidature at once precluded his. Mr. Conger has bluffed them both. Mr. Dennistoun retires, and Hon. Sidney Smith, we hear, has resigned his seat in the Upper House and actually gone into Victoria to oppose Mr. James Dunsford. To us the conduct of the hon. gentleman in thus heedlessly giving up his seat in the Legislative Council and entering a very uncertain contest for a seat in the Assembly, is inexplicable and strange. We were told by his trumpeter when he came to solicit our suffrages as our representative in the Council that his conduct in doing so was "a nice appreciation of British practice." Is it, we ask, a "British practice" for an individual to resign a higher for a lower seat? or, is it fair without some good reason thus to throw a people's gift in their face. But hold! we had no hand in putting him in, and we may have no right to complain.

It is as well he has gone out of the Division, or he might have some hard knocks upon this matter. It will surprise us if he can beat Mr. Dunsford in Victoria.

On Thursday night last in accordance to notice a large number of the friends of Colonel Haultain assembled in the room over the Bank of Toronto. Dr. Burnham was called to the Chair, and Mr. Gilbert appointed Secretary.

The Chairman said they were met to ascertain if Colonel Haultain was willing to become a candidate for the representation of the County in Parliament at the approaching election. After some approbatory remarks on the conduct of the Colonel while in the Legislature, and expressing his conviction that if he can be would be sure to be returned, a committee of five were named to wait upon Colonel Haultain and learn his views as to whether he would accede to the request of the electors to become their member or otherwise. They waited upon the Colonel rod soon after returned with him.

After some preliminary terms m the Col. addressed the meeting. He referred to this repeated mark of their confidence as very gratifying to him, and for which he expressed his sincere thanks, at the same time assuring them that grave and obvious reasons existed why he should decline the kind invitation of being the representative again. These were of a private and public nature, and he briefly alluded to them.—Among the latter was the measure of the Deficoes of the Province, in which he had taken opposite ground from the Ministry of the day—so much so indeed that in the matter of non-confidence he had felt it his duty to record his vote against them. This had placed him in a somewhat anomalous position with the Reform party by whom he had been elected, and who now again solicited his compliance to the request of his being again their representative.

After the remarks from the Colonel several persons present addressed the meeting, expressing their regret at the accomplishment of the Colonel, when it was arranged to meet again on Saturday afternoon at four o'clock.

Accordingly on Saturday a large number assembled, when the Colonel reiterated his former determination to decline standing as a Candidate.

It was here suggested by a person present that he now felt had better have been left to the decision of the Reform party, as they were willing to support him. It was generally felt that Mr. Conger's position in the Legislature, and was heartily resolved and cheered. A full account of the meeting, by the Secretary, appears elsewhere.

Our readers will observe that during these proceedings Mr. Dennistoun was still a candidate, but no sooner was the result of Mr. Conger's reception in the Town Hall known than Mr. Dennistoun receives at once to withdraw, and on Monday morning placards were observed around the Town stating as there was a likelihood of a split in the Conservative ranks, if he continued his canvass, he would withdraw from the contest—thus leaving the field with Mr. Conger undisputed. Mr. Conger may well feel elated at the prospect so unexpectedly of walking the course.

He is to make the tour of the County at once. His Address which appears to-day is commendable in the extreme—allowing him "to take such a course as in his judgment the interest of the country demands."

THE WAR.

The fall of Vicksburg has been triumphantly reported through the telegraph and Northern press—which at the last advices wants confirmation. Like many unfounded rumours it may yet appear to be false.—Several battles and skirmishes are reported, some favorable to the Federals and some to the Confederates. The scene of conflict at present is in the South West. Doubtless we shall hear of some heavy work soon. The Rebel force is said to be 300,000, and is fast getting less. It will take some time to defeat even that force, and from present appearances the war will last two or three years yet.

A great deal of excitement has been caused by the forcible arrest and abduction of a Mr. Vallandigham of Ohio, who was charged with being a traitor. He was to have been taken to Fort Warren and detained as a State prisoner, but finding a popular outburst of indignation at the illegal and arbitrary arrest the Government have sent him South and allowed him to go at large.

There have been several raids into the Rebel territory, resulting in the destruction of stores, grain and munitions of war, as well as destruction to rail roads and bridges.—

but a horrid business war is which deputies in spreading consternation, destruction, misery and death among the enemy. Can it be possible that war proceeds from the best portion of our natures, or from the author of our being? Is it not rather the offspring of the worst passions of our hearts, from the enemy of our race—the devil? If might is right in the present war we see it is in every war where numbers are engaged. If right in 1,000 men opposing 1000, or any larger number you please, is it not equally right when one man opposes another? Ah, there are some anomalies about war not easily reconcileable with our civil or moral code of laws,—leaving Christianity out of the question.

Mr. CONGER'S MEETING.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

One of the largest and most unanimous political meetings held in Peterboro, during the present election contest, was Mr. Conger's meeting of Saturday evening last. The utmost harmony and good feeling was manifested during the evening, and the usual animosity freely exhibited on such occasions, was, in a great measure, wanting. It must have been gratifying to Mr. Conger to see so many of his friends about him, and to find that those who have been opposed to him heretofore, are willing, at all events, if not cordially—that is, with heart and soul—to support him; at least, to offer no unreasonable or serious opposition—all uniting in thinking that political shades and party lines if too much intensified, only serve to impede good government and clog the wheel of progress.

Mr. Conger is not the nominee of the Reform party, and if elected, will owe his election rather to negative than positive, or in more plain words, he will owe it rather to a want of opposition from the Reform party, though to their combinating in his support.

The grounds on which Mr. Conger receives this indirect support of so many of his former opponents, are simply the facts of his being moderate in his views, and his expressing his determination to give the Administration now before the country a hearing and not to condemn them simply for the sake of opposition.

The meeting having been called to order it was Moved by Mr. Heathorn, seconded by Mr. R. Stevenson,—That Dr. Brown take the Chair.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Heathorn, seconded by Mr. Stevenson,—That Dr. Pringle act as Secretary.—Carried.

Dr. Brown having in a few appropriate remarks, mentioned the object of the meeting,

Mr. Conger then addressed the meeting at some length, the substance of his remarks being embodied in his address now before the public.

After Mr. Conger, followed Mr. Reed and Mr. Heathorn, who both pointed out the many claims Mr. Conger had upon the County.

Capt. Sutherland was now called on to address the meeting. He commenced by stating that he had not come to the meeting for the purpose of offering any remarks, and that he had been called on quite unexpectedly to himself. He felt in duty bound to say that Mr. Conger was not, as all reports, the man of his choice or that of his party, and that if any candidate of moderate Reform views had been nominated, he, for one, would have felt bound to support him rather than Mr. Conger, but that under present circumstances his position and that of the party to which he had the honor to belong, was simply that of choosing between the lesser of two evils, namely, a choice between Mr. Dennistoun, a strong, Conservative, and Mr. Conger, a man of the moderate Conservative party, and that of two men he preferred the latter; and he would say that what influence he possessed, he would, in the ab nce of any one else coming forward, use in favor of Mr. Conger.

Mr. Jones Stevenson said addressed the meeting, and stated that he had always been a supporter of Mr. Conger, that their politics had been of the same shades, that he (Mr. Stevenson) had be believed been the first and the principal one who had urged Mr. Conger to give up a good situation and become a candidate for the Legislature and that he had often been sorry that he had urged him to a step that had been an injury to him. He felt convinced that Mr. Conger, if returned to Parliament to represent the County of Peterborough, would do all in his power to advance the interests of the County. His course in Parliament would be that of an independent man, moderate, and as such he would offer the fairest opposition; that in plain words he believed Mr. Conger would support the Administration now before the country to their choice of speaker. He then moved the following resolutions:

Moved by Mr. James Stevenson, seconded by Capt. Sutherland,—That this meeting considers Mr. Conger a fit and proper person to represent this County in Parliament.—Carried unanimously.

Moved by Mr. James Stevenson, seconded by Capt. Sutherland,—That Dr. Brown do leave the chair and Mr. Heathorn take it.

The thanks of the meeting was then given to Dr. Brown for his impartial conduct in the chair.

And with three cheers for the Queen and three for Mr. Conger, the meeting broke up.

TOWN COUNCIL.

TUESDAY, May 26, 1863.

The Council met; present: His Worship the Mayor, and Messrs. Burnham, Lundy, Dixon, Cluxton, Ormond, Fry, Toole, Lawson, Nichols, Ryan and Dickson.

The minutes of former meeting were read and confirmed.

A letter was read from Mr. Lionel York.

Several accounts were received and handed to the Finance Committee.

Several petitions asking for improvements on streets and sidewalks in different parts of the town, were referred to the committee on Streets and Bridges.

A petition from Widow Powers, asking for relief, was read.

The Streets and Bridge committee recommended certain improvements and appropriations on different streets in the Town among others, a sidewalk has to be built on the East side of Aylmer Street, from Charlotte to Dalhousie Streets; also, said street to be graded at Mr. Forty's.

Moved by Mr. Nicholls, seconded by Mr. Toole,—That the Clerk of this Council advertise for Tenders for the erection of a Look-up and Engi e House. All information respecting the same will be obtained on application to the Clerk.—Carried.

The Treasurer was authorized to pay to the Captain of the Fire Brigade the amount passed by this Council, for the pay for the clothing furnished for said Company.

The Finance Committee were instructed to report on the claim of E. Wilson of $16.

Moved by Mr. Clurton, seconded by Mr Ryan —That it be an instruction to the Committee appointed to visit the County Council as reference to the Court House Ground, that this Council is not willing to expend a sum exceeding $500 for the object in view.

Considerable discussion having taken place on the above resolution, it was discovered that there was not a quorum, so the Council adjourned.

Fire.

On Saturday night or Sunday morning a fire took place in a back building belonging to Mr. Wm. McBurney, occupied by some disreputable characters. An attempt was made the night before to fire the building, but it was prevented. Mr. Lundy's family were quite in terror as the building was close to their sheds. When the fire did occur the whole block would have been burnt but for the engine and the exertion of the firemen.

Just before 3 o'clock on Monday morning another fire took place in the stables and sheds in the rear of Mr. Armstrong's, used as a livery stable by J. T. Fisher, and an iron house by Mr. Hamilton. We regret to learn that a very valuable Stud Horse, owned by Mr. Thomas Beatty, was burnt.

Both fires appear to have been the work of incendiaries.

The Queen's Birth-Day in Peterboro'.

The same loyal feelings and sentiments that animate our fellow subjects elsewhere are felt here, and on the anniversary of the birth of our beloved Queen the flags were to be seen flying all over the Town.

The Volunteers turned out and marched over to Ashburnham and back, and after review they assembled at the Market Square and fired a fue de joie.

In the evening the Volunteers and Firemen joined and had a torch-light procession, which was very good.

The Band was engaged all day, and enlivened the proceedings by lively music.

The Lakefield Company of Volunteers turned out at Lakefield and were put through the exercises of the day; they fired a fue de joie. Success to them.

ELECTION MEETINGS.

Mr. Cooper will address the Electors of the County of Peterborough, at the following places, viz:—

Thursday, 28th inst., at Hastings, at 8 o'clock p. m.

Friday, 29th inst., at Norwood, in the Town Hall, at 8 o'clock, p. m.

Saturday, 30th inst., at Keene, at 8 o'clock, p. m.

Monday, June 1st, at North Monaghan, at Scott's Hotel, at 8 o'clock, p. m.

☞ Turn out, and give Mr. Cooper a bumper meetings!

The Weather for the past week has been delightful, and wonders in the vegetable world are daily to be seen in the progress made in growing. The season has been all that a farmer could wish, and present appearances give promise of abundant returns from the ground.

The following extract is taken from the [illegible] Witness:

[illegible] all origins, and whether resident in the Lower or in the Upper section of the province, are equally interested in preserving intact the representation actual. Representation by Population means Protestant Ascendency; it means the overthrow of Separate schools in the West, the pillage of our centennial, charitable and educational institutions in the East. It means in a word, the inauguration of that political and social order throughout the Canadas, in which the Globe and the Witness delight, and which we are bound to resist to the death, if necessary."

THE MURDERER COULTER.—The Kingston Whig says that the Judges in Chambers refused to grant a new trial to Robert Coulter, now under sentence of death in the Jail. It is understood that a telegram was received on Monday from Peterboro to the effect that no hope could be held out to the unfortunate man. Next Monday is the day fixed for his execution.

Company Drill.—Section 1.

FORMATION OF A COMPANY IN LINE.

(Communicated.)

Question 1st—What caution is necessary when forming a single Company in line?

2nd—On the caution, where will the Captain, the Covering Sergeant, the other Officers and Sergeants, place themselves?

3rd—When a Company is formed singly, or when it is consecutive, where will the Drummers be?

4th—Do the Lieutenant and Ensign always retain their places?

5th—How do the Sergeants comporing the rest of the supernumerary rank form themselves?

6th—On the command "Rear Rank take Open Order," where do the Officers place themselves, and how do they hold their swords?

7th—How do the flank men of the rear rank act?

8th—Where does the covering Sergeant go? and whose vacant place does he occupy?

9th—On the word "march" being given how many paces do the Officers take? and to what flank do they look for their dressing?

10th—How many paces do the rear and supernumerary ranks step back.

11th—How will the covering Sergeant in re, and whose vacant place will he fill?

12th—How will the flank men on the rear rank act?

26th—When a Company is formed in line, and the Captain is required to change his flank how will he move?

27th—Is there any exception to this rule?

28th—How will the Supernumeraries and covering Sergeant always move?

The answers will appear next week.

Origin of the Printer's Devil.

When Manutius, the elder, set up in business in Venice, he came into possession of a little negro boy, who had been left by some merchant vessel at the city to be properly cared for. This boy was known over the city as the "little black devil," who helped the mysterious bibliofactor along and some ignorant people supposed him to be none other than the embodiment of Satan, who helped Aldus in the prosecution of his profession. One day Aldus, to dispel this strange hallucination by publicity, displayed the young imp to the poorer classes. Upon the occasion he made a very characteristic speech: "Let it be known in Venice that I, Aldus Manutius, printer to the Holy Church and Doge, have this day made a public example of the printers devil. All those who think he is no flesh and blood may now come forward and pinch him." He was the first roller-boy, and he must have been intelligent, or else Manutius' fame would not have been so bright, perhaps, for he was one of the first to discover that the pressman's first rule was to have the ink well distributed.

ONLY A SOLDIER'S BLANKET.—When the gallant Sir Ralph Abercromby was mortally wounded in the battle of Aboukir he was carried on a litter on board the Foudroyant. To ease his pain a soldier's blanket was placed under his head, from which he experienced great relief. He asked what it was. "It is only a soldier's blanket," was the answer. "Whose blanket is it?" he asked, half lifting himself up. "Only one of the men's." "I wish to know the name of the man whose blanket this is," insisted the dying commander. "It is Duncan Roy's of the 42nd, Sir Ralph," answered his attendant. "Then see that Duncan Roy gets his blanket this very night," said the brave man not forgetting in his last agonies, the welfare and comfort of another, however humble.

Communications.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—In your impression of the 14th inst., a communication appears from Mr. J. Gilbert, making serious charges and implied grave many hard things generally against a committee appointed by the Fire Company at a regular monthly meeting. As a member of that committee, I thought, at first, of treating the rigmarole with the contempt which it and its author deserves, viz: silence; but, after mature consideration, I thought it better to reply to his assertions, that the public might see the utter disregard your high-minded and accurate correspondent has for truth, courtesy, the general rules that govern all institutions, and, in fact, for common decency. I wish also to disabuse the public mind from the most remote idea that this committee that the "little man" treats with so much scorn and derision, did anything more than they ought to have done, or were threatened to do. I cannot, for the life of me, see the object he had in view in writing his letter, unless he is afraid that your readers are not aware that such a person as Mr. Gilbert "lives, moves, and has a being" in this locality, and that we cannot get a better opportunity of introducing himself generally than by rushing frantically into public print. Alas! sunk, however, is vanity!

It is very fortunate for the institution, in which he has the honor of filling a subordinate situation, that his position is so high. If he were one of the directors for instance, the stock would be so fluctuating and the affairs in so unsatisfactory a state that the public confidence would be lost to it, and the result would be: down goes the institution!

It is a wonder that a person of his wonderful abilities, inventive faculties, great merits, notions of superiority, and last, tho' not least, his great mind position, could not make better use of his time than vilifying the members of the committee chosen by himself, for I hold that in any company or institution, where, according to the By-laws, a certain number of members form a quorum for the transaction of business at a regular meeting—the business done by them is sanctioned by the Company, notwithstanding the absence of Mr. Gilbert! The automatic ideas of the "little man" are really amusing; he actually ignores the committee, why? because it was appointed in his absence! Who ever heard of the like? He abuses them for doing what they were asked to do at one meeting; at the next he makes an apology, with sincere regret for his language—the man must be crazy! You would fancy from the enthusiasm displayed in his letter, that he was the most active member in the Company; in fact, that he was a whole Fire Company! By his bombastic style would naturally come to the conclusion that he was the founder and holder-together of the Company.

For your gratification, I will look at the roll and see how many meetings he has attended. The Company was organized on the 31st of October; that meeting he attended; also a subsequent one in November. The first regular monthly meeting was in December; we find him absent; January, ditto; March, ditto; April, in time to answer his name; May, of course he was present. I give this to show what an active member he is.

Now with respect to the working of the Committee: At a regular meeting held March 3rd, 1863, the following resolutions were passed:

"Moved by Capt. Bradbeer, seconded by Lieut. York,—That the uniform of this Company be a red flannel shirt, with cap and belt.—Carried."

"Moved by J. J. Lundy, seconded by A. Stewart,—That the Captain, J. O'Donnel, W. B. Ward, J. Campbell, Captain Bradbeer and J. J. Lundy, be a committee to arrange a style of summer uniform, whose decision shall be final, and report the same to the next meeting.—Carried unanimously."

At the next monthly meeting, after the report brought in by the committee was read, the following resolution was "Moved by T. Croly, seconded by M. Lane,—That the report just read with reference to the style of uniform, be adopted.—Carried," without a dissenting voice.

During the interval between the meetings in April and May, Mr. Gilbert took it into his head that the committee were acting in a high-handed manner, and that there was a possibility of getting up a row between the Company and committee. He came to the meeting in May, prepared to listen to no explanations but commenced a tirade of abuse such as no gentleman would use. I, vainly, tried to explain that any alteration (notwithstanding the resolution empowering us to adopt a style) would be made, providing it pleased the Company, but so arbitrary was he that nothing would answer but a complete abandonment of everything done—the intention, no doubt, was to prevent us turning out on the Queens Birthday. He claims to have a majority with him; I will give you some idea of the majority. On the 12th inst., a special meeting was held, when he introduced a "bifolium" resolution; the intent and meaning of which was, that we might get no uniforms at all, if we did it would not be till late in the season; an amendment was moved to his motion, that the style of shirt then before the Company be adopted. The yeas and nays being called; what was the result? the little fellow found himself without a single follower—to which disgusted was he with being foiled, that he voted for the amendment and withdrew his resolution. "Consistency," thou art a "jewel" but, unfortunately, he is not acquainted with any such commodity. I hope this paragon of perfection by the next time he appears in print will be to better advantage, and that he will confine himself as nearly as possible to the truth; bearing in mind the old proverb about "lines and ends."

Mr. Editor, I humbly crave your pardon for trespassing so far on your valuable space. I can assure you I would not do so did not the importance of the occasion demand it.

Yours, &c.,
D. McNAUGHTON.
Peterboro, May 18th, 1863.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—I seen a very well written article in your paper about a month ago, speaking very highly of Mr. Martyn's new Flouring Mill; but sir, I believe he said nothing only what is really deserved, because it cannot be excelled in this Province, and I assure you in truth as I have got all my wheat ground in it this year, and I must say, that I never got so great satisfaction in my life as I have received from the hands of Mr. Martyn and his new Flouring Mill. But, sir, there is one thing above all others that "J. P." overlooked, and that was the water-wheels and their construction. He had not said enough a word about them, I would inquire him to go back and see them, because I must say that I never saw anything to be compared with them for power and speed, and the whole machinery about them. I speak of, in all fitting and construction on which there is built on. I believe the head of the water is not more than six or seven feet, and the old mill he left—belonging to S. Dixon—had twelve or thirteen feet, and still it could not travel like this new mill.

I understand that Mr. Dixon drove Mr. Martyn out of the old one because he (Martyn) would not agree to pay a yearly rent of £400 or £500, and Mr. Martyn it seemed was much grieved at the treatment he had received at the hands of that gentleman. But, sir, I am told that the old man is not so much to blame, as he has got a new legal adviser—some say the prime minister,—but not a profe-sional gentleman, but if true that gives a very unwholesome advice to himself and all others that may adhere to his command. I am told that he was instrumental in driving away Mr. McDonald and all the factory business off the premises, and all others of the old tenants that were settled down there under the honorable gentleman Judge Hall, who would be the last man to drive away one single tenant with lease or without lease. But, sir, may not Mr. Martyn make such grievous complaints about Mr. Sam and his Legal Adviser driving him out of the old flouring mill when Mr. Martyn himself says that he never could make a single barrel of first quality flour during his long lease under Judge Hall? It is well known to all the old settlers of this town that that mill was built by the Government under Sir John Colborne about the year 1823,—that is about 40 years ago, and it has been tinkered and patched from that time to this; and now, sir, I think on the whole that Mr. Martyn was not treated so very bad after all is said and done.

Will he just take a look into your paper after the last court of Queen's Bench and read the case of agreement brought by Mr. Sam or his Finance Minister against the Widow McFarlane—a very respectable lady, and one of the very last remnants of Judge Hall's old tenants. But the jury very honestly gave the verdict in the poor widow's favor, to the great satisfaction and applause of that crowded Court room.

TRUTH.

May 11, 1863.

THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

New York, May 22.—The Richmond papers of the 20th inst., contain the following:—

A despatch from Pascagola, from New Orleans on the 15th inst., mentions a rumour that the Hartford was burned by Farragut after being stripped.

The Southern editorials are devoted to the news from Mississippi, and are very desponding in their tone.

The Sentinel of the 19th says it is reported that the Confederate authorities have determined to detain one Federal captain and one lieutenant, with a view of retaliating in kind for the hanging of two of the Confederate officers in the west, by order of Gen. Burnside.

A Brandon, Miss., despatch of the 17th to a Confederate paper, says that two gentlemen of note rode to Jackson to-day and traversed the city, which the enemy had evacuated about two o'clock; they supposed that their number was about 40,000, and that they had retreated toward Vicksburg. Firing was heard in that direction; it was supposed to be Pemberton, in their rear. They burned the Confederate State House Depots, penitentiary, two factories a colony, 11 ck of buildings, medical purveyors and other offices, also several miles of railroad track and both bridges over Pearl River.

The Confederate sapers contain a Mobile despatch of the 18th inst., stating that a special reporter of the Advertiser at Jackson on 17th says the Catholic Church is destroyed, &c.

Farmers estimate the amount of damage done by the Federals at from $5,000,000 to $10,000,000. Much suffering prevails.

The last of the Federals' rear guard left at about two o'clock, when the Confederate cavalry dashed in and killed a Federal Colonel and captured two others.

The Yankees captured and paroled 200 South Carolinians and Georgians.

A despatch from Gen. Johnston to the Confederate War Office, dated Brownsville, May 18, says that Pemberton was attacked on the morning of the 16th, near Edwards' depot. After 9 hours' fighting he was compelled to fall back behind the Big Black River.

A Jackson dispatch of the 18th, to the Mobile Advertiser, says that there was a heavy but indecisive battle near Edwards' depot on Saturday. We fell back to our intrenchments. The loss was heavy on both sides. Gen. Tilghman was killed.

The Federals sent a flag of truce on the 18th for surgeons. The officer in charge of the flag states the Federal loss at 6,000 men. They took 16 guns, and the Confederate troops fell back across the Big Black River, destroying the bridge. They advanced eight miles north-east and on the morning of the 18th found Johnston in line of battle. According to Confederate advices no artillery was lost and the brigade was not burned.

The Confederate account says our force of 120,000 fought two army corps of 24,000), sustained themselves, and fell back at night to concentrate. Loss heavy—battle severe and indecisive. The Yankees are on the way to intercept communication.

A Murfreesboro despatch, dated the 21st says, General Sheridan's scouts report that the Confederates admit Grant has defeated Johnston, and has secured the railroad bridge across the Big Black River, thus cutting Vicksburg off from supplies and reinforcements. This bridge is the largest in the South.

The Herald says the following:

Murfreesboro May 21.—The Whaleter, Tenn., Bulletin of the 15th says the Tories and Bushwhackers are engaged in forming political organizations to select peace candidates for State officers. Our military authorities should put these sneaks to better employment, and if they push their treasonous plots too far, should make examples of them.

Cincinnati, May 22.—The Gazette's Murfreesboro despatch has contradictories reports from the Mississippi. One reports that Gen. Grant has been driven back from Jackson and Port Gibson, and that Gen. Joe Johnston's forces have possession of the Jackson and Vicksburg Railroad.

Another report is that Gen. Grant has beaten Gen. Johnson and taken possession of the railroad bridge over the Big Black River, which is a most important movement, as it entirely cuts off communication with Vicksburg.

Advices via Cairo, say that our loss at Raymond was 71 killed and 300 wounded and that 65 rats to dead will bacon and cornmeal were captured between Raymond and Jackson.

It appear to be Gen. Grant's intention to march on the rear of Vicksburg to Haines' [illegible]

Philadelphia, May 22.—The [illegible] letter from Sparta says, it appears that [illegible] Jackson's brigade charged the [illegible] over the 100 or 40 men were killed or wounded.

A special despatch to the Bulletin from Cincinnati, May [illegible] says the rebels received here say the Confederate General Wharton was thrown from his horse at Sparta, Tenn., last week, and fatally injured.

Wheeler's Confederate cavalry are mainly at McMinnville.

Morgan has gone up the Cumberland to East Tennessee. Their cavalry are almost wholly without sabres.

New Armor for Ships.

A new armor for the ships has been constructed by a Mr. Chalmers, in England, and a section of it has just been tried by the authorities, at Gosport, very successfully in favor of the armor. This is consisting of three iron plates, jointed edge to edge, of the thickness of three and three quarters inches and backed by a kind of cellular structure of alternate blocks of timber in a series of plate iron cells—of the construction of which we may form a rough idea by supposing a set of pigeon-holes in a merchant's office to represent the iron framework of the cells; while in lieu of the letters filling the pigeon holes, the iron cells of the backing are firmly plunged with solid blocks of wood. Behind this cellular backing is a second iron plate, one and a quarter inch in thickness, resting against a cushion of four-inch timber planking, and thus against the skin of the ship. The whole structure—some say as much total thickness of iron as the Warrior's target, but differently distributed—was bound together by thirty-three iron bolts, flush in front, and secured up from the inside by nuts and screws; a washer of India-rubber half an inch being on each bolt. By these arrangements, it is said, Mr. Chalmers conceived he had obviated the evil which result from a backing composed of wood only—such as buckling; and that he reduced to a minimum the injurious effects of vibration, such as the fracture of the armor plates, and the destruction of the fastenings and the frame of the ship.

The target bore all the tests from a shell filled with sand, fired from a 110-pounder rifled gun, to a volley from two 68 pounders and three 110 pounders, and received no serious damage.

An English writer on this subject says of the "work" demanded the ship's armor:

First it has to resist the shot: secondly, it has to stop its penetration; and thirdly to prevent its pass through into the interior of the ship. These various kinds of work evidently belong to three separate portions of the plate. The outside must stop the shot; if it fail to make the shot scatter itself to pieces or to reflect it back the work of resisting penetration fell to the middle portion of the plate; if this fail also to do its special duty, on the interior portion there falls the last work of holding the shot, and prevent its passing by. No one kind of iron possesses all these three different properties, but certain kinds possess each separately in a high degree. We want iron therefore, of different special works. Outside the plate we want an iron to resist compression, such as fibrous soft wrought iron; in the interior of the plate the densest, most impenetrable material, such as soft steel; and at the back of the plate, iron that by its ropy-like tenacity of fibre will sustain the other portions of the plate at their work. Extensive trials on plates formed of such a combination of materials will shortly take place at Portsmouth and it may well be expected that true scientific principles will on that occasion be as much elucidated by the failures as by the success.

MARRIAGES IN ENGLAND.—The English marriage returns furnish some interesting particulars. Those for 1861 are just published, and from them it appears that in London during the year 33 girls were married at 15 years of age, one of them to a man of 50; five widows married the second time at 19, and 23 married again after 70; 26 women over 70 were married, one of them to a man under 30; two men above 80 married women of 20; 157 men married when above 70, and two women above 80. In one case only was the marriage of a divorced man with a divorced woman reported. These statements were much below the real facts, for the ages of persons marrying were found to be put down in not more than half of the marriages of the year.

CHILD-MURDER.—Speaking of the Protestant and their anti-Christian practices the New York Freeman of the 6th instant has the following passage:—

"The advertisements in nearly all papers in New England show them—the Puritans—like the race of Chanaan, to have a widespread custom of "parents sacrificing with their own hands helpless souls"—Wisdom. c. xii."—N. Y. Freeman.

Our contemporary might have extended his remarks beyond New England for it is a melancholy truth that the abominable practice of child-murder, and especially of child-murder in uterol, we may judge from the advertising columns of the Protestant press, as common in Canada as it is in the Northern States of the American Republic, and indeed in every country where the precepts of the Catholic Church have lost their force. There is scarce, we say it with shame and regret, a Protestant paper in Canada, from the Toronto Globe downwards, which for a consideration does not prostitute its columns to the professional abortionist or child-murderer; and from the fact that these gentry find it profitable to pay for the insertion of their filthy advertisements, we may logically infer that the trade, business, or profession which they pursue is extensively patronized on this, as well as on the other side of the Lines.

Indeed the abortionist is here in Canada regarded with special tenderness; and when, as in the case of a Yonk recently called Patterson, he commits a double murder, and destroys the life of the mother as well as that of the unbaptized child, the usual punishment in his case remitted—in consideration, we suppose, of the excellence of his intentions.—What is called justice is indeed very strangely administered in this Province.

It is perhaps not too much to say that many Protestants no longer consider the destruction of life in utero as a crime of a very heinous complexion, or hardly as a crime at all; for unless the moral sense of a community were torpid, indeed almost dead, it would be revolted by the aspect of the advertising columns of the Protestant press, and by the constant appearance therein of the baleful prospectuses of professional child murderers. In this matter, as we said before hardly a paper in the province, with the exception of our Montreal co-temporaries, by gentlemen like the Toronto Globe the Magnus Apollo of Protestantism, to the lowest rag, they all contain ad-

Educational Column.

"Knowledge is Power."

☞ All Communications must be addressed, (post-paid) "Educational Column," box 330 Peterborough.

SIR.—Seeing you devote a column of your valuable journal to the propagation of educational principles, I approach you with a few hasty thoughts together above on the subject, leaving it optional with you[illegible] or not I shall be pleased with the publication of the same.

Reflecting upon the many learned Professors who have already written upon the subject, and the consciousness of my own [illegible] I might well shrink from my present undertaking; but, a desire to enlarge the comforts of human life, together with an [illegible] in the welfare of the youth of our town and c[illegible] prompt me to offer the following remarks.

[illegible] our schools [illegible] grave.

[illegible] to elicit the [illegible] persuasion which, when properly directed by a virtuous education, dissipate the languors and pains, which the [illegible] mind of man may make upon the [illegible] shock, and embolden his [illegible] paths of this fleeting existence.

The directing of the [illegible] proper channels, and the [illegible] those early [illegible] would properly be called the duty of the candid and faithful teacher. I feel happy to know that the teachers [illegible] Town and country have formed themselves into a Society for the purpose of generating, as far as it may be found practicable, the ideas of teachers in their professions—thereby facilitating the progress of education and prompting general good.

The teacher who embraces every opportunity in self-improvement, cannot fail but prove successful in his highly exalted calling. He by enabled, I say, [illegible] that by occasions whose importance and utility are not merely to prepare and qualify the youth for the professional departments in life, but to disseminate that rational view of religious principles which enlarges national felicity, social comforts, domestic peace, and personal happiness, in the widest sense of the word, high and exalted; and the teacher who does not regard this profession in this light, labors under a sad mistake with regard to his character, utility and importance, and is highly censurable, eminently deserving all that disrespect of which he may be led to suffer to complain. A teacher should, in all cases, form just and adequate notions of his own character and profession, considering at the same time what his country, employers and the community at large expect from him, marking well early developments of his youthful charge, and appreciating the same; for where did Socrates and Plato and the other sages of antiquity acquire so great a knowledge of the human heart but by attending to the gradual developments of the human mind in their schools.

The teacher who pays attention to the early expressions of the minds of the youth committed to his care, will generally find that there is not a family of his employers but whose predominant virtues or reigning vices are perfectly familiar to him. This, oftentime, will no doubt give rise to a variety of feelings, painful as well as pleasant—pain[illegible] when he sees the passions of vice in some more than counterbalancing his good precepts; and in the other case pleasant, when he observes precepts followed by good example.

The aim of education ought to be to teach rather how than what to think.—Reading, it is true, may furnish the mind with material of knowledge, but it is thinking alone that makes what we read ours. We are (if I may be allowed the term) of the ruminating kind, therefore it is not enough to cram ourselves with a great load of collections—[illegible] unless we chew them over again, they afford us neither strength for nourishment. Our memory may be stored with rule after rule, proposition after proposition, our judgment being little better and the stock of knowledge not increased by being able to repeat what others have said, or produce their arguments. A mind properly trained and cultivated in order to think for itself, is an emblem of a fruitful field yielding a hundred fold to every grain committed to it.

A very considerable part of the teachers profession is to enlarge the head and mend the heart; to wait upon the gradual openings of the mind, and to direct them in their proper channels of usefulness and practical virtue. Let a regard to this, the dictates of the conscience of every faithful and effect ve teacher, together with no be able dependence upon God, who alone can render your labors successful, and harmonize your unwearied and interesting toils ever excite you to the manly execution of your most important trusts.

Scolding.

Two thriving farmers, A. and B. lived near neighbors whose wives were patterns of energy, industry, frugality, neatness, etc. Each had been married about fifteen years, and the wife of A. proved to be a tormentant, while that of B had not up ten petulantly since her marriage. Those pen were once in the midst of an interesting conversation, when the dinner-horn from the house of Mrs. A. was sounded, and he said to B, "I must go at once, or my wife will give me such a lecture."

"I really wish," replied B, "that I could hear my wife scold as yours does for five minutes, just to see how it would sound, for she has never uttered a crooked word since our marriage."

A great wonder! Any sufferer of ordinary tricky lot for long centuries. Indeed it is day it is to be indefinitely comprehended; and it is also doubtful whether it is also credible to pause; a research in search science which may never be attained by any beneficial results to mankind; but the principle which actuates a man to purchase a bottle of Dr. [illegible] and Henry's Liniment will [illegible] to live with and family, to [illegible] should really one person of mankind. Dr. Clarke, Chief Engineer of the Fleet is the most excellent remedy that ever be given, and in a Public sense the Vermont Lieutenant is unequalled.

Long [illegible] the subsequent restorations of [illegible] and further." In friendship, in love, in society, in the home circle, the daily and quiet nature of life, the Christian temper, the meek forbearance, the spirit [illegible] should be cherished if we should live happy.

To the Free and Independent

ELECTORS

OF THE

COUNTY OF PETERBOROUGH,

GENTLEMEN,

Once more in the course of events you are called upon to exercise one of the privileges due to you as freemen, that of choosing a person to represent you in the Legislative Assembly of this Province.

An invitation so general as the one I have received, inviting me to accept the honoured post of your representative, coming as I observe it does from persons of all shades in politics, is a convincing proof in my mind that the electors of the County have a greater desire to see its resources developed than the time of the country taken up in the unprofitable discussion of political theories.

It is fitting, therefore, that I should say to you that the same principles, and the same course of action, which I laid down for my guide on former occasions are those by which I shall continue to be guided while I have the honor of a seat in the Legislature.

As a Canadian strongly imbued with feelings of loyalty and attachment to the British Crown and Government, my first great duty will be to insist upon immediate and ample provision being made for the defences of the country.

My views upon Representation by Population are potent to every elector, and it is unnecessary for me to do more than to say, they are unchanged.

I shall also insist upon Retrenchment in the Public Expenditure, and will oppose any such expenditure without the consent of Parliament.

I shall, if elected, use every proper means to encourage Emigration, and insist upon the construction of Roads, and the settlement of the country in rear of us.

I am in favour of such an adjustment of the Tariff between this Country and the United States of America, as will place the Manufacturer and Agriculturist, of this Province, upon a footing of equality with the same class of persons in that Country.

I am, more than ever impressed with the importance of our local position, and the great natural resources of our County which if properly developed, will serve to place Peterboro', foremost among Canadian Towns.

Respecting the course I may pursue in the Legislature; I have only to say that—I shall enter Parliament unpledged, independent of party, and at liberty to take such course thereafter, as in my judgement—tempered with moderation—the interest of the country demands.

I shall endeavor before the day of nomination to visit you in your respective localities, and address you upon the state of the country, at which time also I shall be able to give you more fully than could be done in a printed address, my views upon the leading questions now before the country.

I have the honor to be, Gentlemen, Very faithfully yours,

THE BRITISH AMERICAN

A MONTHLY MAGAZINE DEVOTED TO

Literature, Science and Art.

NOTWITHSTANDING the repeated attempts which have been made in Canada to establish a Monthly Magazine devoted to Literature and Science it is nevertheless apparent, that success has not been the reward of those who have engaged in the undertaking.

The Canadian Institute at Toronto, the Natural History Society of Montreal, the Literary and Historical Society of Quebec, aided by the Government grants they enjoy, regularly publish their proceedings, and thus occupy to a greater or less extent, the several fields which from the special objects of their incorporation, but the public at large are still unacquainted with a periodical Magazine devoted to general Literature of Canadian origin and growth, and to Science divested of unattractive technicalities and adapted to the requirements of those who do not profess familiarity with its sterner details.

It is in the design of the originators of the British American Magazine to occupy this vacant field, and endeavor to satisfy a want which is so generally felt to exist.

In launching the plan of a new periodical, it is desirable to supply the public with some guarantee of its character and prospects. It is therefore determined to request intending contributors to permit their names to be published in the prospectus, as among those who are willing, not only to give it countenance and support, but to add to its vitality by contributing to its pages. It is also thought advisable to publish the names of those who are willing and anxious to encourage the undertaking by a liberal subscription to the first number.

Many of the difficulties which have impeded the progress, and ultimately led to the abandonment of a Monthly periodical, similar in general design to the British American Magazine, have disappeared, with the advance of the country in population, wealth and civilization; hence the originators commence their labours with far brighter expectations than their predecessors could have enjoyed, and they anticipate, without doubt or distrust, the successful progress of the undertaking.

The aim of the British American Magazine is to encourage British American Literature, to offer an opportunity long desired by many for giving public and permanent expression to their thoughts, to foster a taste for literary pursuits, to prevent the marvels of Science in its [illegible] language, easily understood by all, to supply a monthly abstract of whatever is interesting and valuable in the periodical literature of Great Britain, and a brief resume of the progress of Literature, Science, Industry and Art, throughout North British America.

It will be within the province of the Magazine to furnish critical notices of new publications, unfettered by prejudices, nationality, or religious bias: and while political discussion of a party character will be absolutely excluded from its pages, set descriptive articles relating to our home institutions, affecting the general interests of the country, will be freely admitted.

Each monthly issue will contain one hundred and twelve pages, of the same size as the English Monthlies, which will form at the close of the year two volumes containing 672 pages each.

The publishers hope to be able to commence their issue in April next, and from the freedom which has already attended their efforts to procure subscribers, they anticipate that they will be able to [illegible] the first number.

Terms $2 per annum, in advance.

CONSULT
THE OLD ENGLISH PHYSICIANS
FOR
ASTHMA, INCIPIENT CONSUMPTION,
Infirmities of Youth and Old Age,
&c., &c.
NO MERCURY USED.

Dr. Amos & Son,
49 EAST GENESSEE STREET,
BUFFALO, N. Y.

ARE the only Physicians in the State who are members of the Royal College of Surgeons, London.

May be consulted from 8 o'clock in the morning, until 9 at night, in every stage and symptom of Disease.

The treatment they adopt in this resort of [illegible] many years' extensive and successful practice in London.

A most Scientific Invention

An instrument for the cure of general Debility, or Nocturnal Emissions, more properly known as Seminal Weakness, &c. These complaints can be permanently cured in from fifteen days to two months by the use of this Instrument, when used conjointly with medicines.

Dr. AMOS & SON, in order to satisfy the most skeptical as to the merits of this Instrument, pledge themselves that in any instance where it may prove unsatisfactory after a fair trial the money will be refunded by returning the instrument in good order. Price Ten Dollars, by mail or express.

YOUNG MEN TAKE PARTICULAR NOTICE

Those who have injured themselves by certain practices indulged in when alone—a habit frequently learned from evil companions, or at school—the effects of which are sometimes felt even when single, and if not cured, renders marriage impossible and destroys both mind and body, should apply immediately. That dreadful and destructive habit which annually sweeps to premature graves more victims than all the wars of ambition that ever drenched the earth with human gore, is fearfully on the increase. It is the duty of every parent to save his children from the consequences of ignorance in this particular. Many a youth of the most exalted talents, brilliant imagination, and splendid genius, who might have stood proudly pre-eminent in the various walks of life, and reflected honor upon his parents, has been hurried down to premature graves by this destructive habit, or has become a confirmed wreck, both mentally and physically, and is thereby rendered unfit for the enjoyments of life, or the society of his friends, and is an object of horror to himself.

THE WORLD.

AN INDEPENDENT

Daily, Weekly and Semi-Weekly

NEWSPAPER.

IN soliciting for another year a continuance of the favor which in so short a period has given to the World its present rank among American journals—a circulation, business patronage, and influence equalled by other journals only after the effort of many years—we assure to our old and new subscribers the promise that no labor nor expense will be spared to make the World what it aims to be,

The Best Newspaper in the World.

No political party or [illegible] will be permitted to [illegible] control one of which

The Union, the Constitution, and the Laws, and Freedom of Speech, of the Press, of Political Discussion and Action

are the corner stones.

The political events of the past year have notably demonstrated the need of an able, fearless outspoken, first-class

Daily Newspaper

in the commercial metropolis of the country. It shall give constant, bold and vigorous advocacy to [illegible] and the honest [illegible] of the people in every emergency, to whether aimed to overthrow at the outset, or insidiously planting the seeds of dissolution at the North.

Maintaining every energy

Opposing every violation of the Constitution, the only bond and hope of Union, the only ground upon which we can exhort and appeal to allegiance to the Government.

Opposing every infraction of

The Laws,

in high places or in low; believing that obedience to Law is service to God;

Opposing every violation of the

Freedom of Speech, of the Press, of Political Discussion and Action, by whomsoever those violations are committed, whether by the constituted [illegible] By

Arbitrary, Illegal, and Unjust Arrests,

its refusal of the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus, its denial of the rights and liberties of citizens, its arrest without warrant, its imprisonments without trial, its abrogation of state and federal laws, its illegal proclamation of an empty emancipation, or whether those violations are committed by the party in power, its editors and its presses advocating measures which must surrender the Union to the [illegible] of destroying slavery, and denouncing treason against all their political opponents.

Loyal to the government always, it will give to the administration a hearty and vigorous support whenever and wherever the administration itself is loyal to the bond, the principles, and the purity of the government.

The World will oppose all compromises which would barter away or divide the Union, for which alone the North is waging war; it will oppose peace itself, till the success of the war as regards the perpetuity of the Union, and will urge the prosecution of the war with its economy which has not hitherto governed its expenditures, and a vigor which the nation during a year has prayed for in vain.

The same care will be exercised over the columns of the World to exclude everything which could offend a pure, Christian morality, and recourse will always be had to the same high principles as well to guard its columns as to guide its judgment of men and events.

All the News

will be found in the columns of the World from the various departments of human activity,

Political, Agricultural, and Commercial, as well as in Literature, Science and Art.

New Publications, Inventions, Discoveries, and Works of Art will receive the same careful and thorough attention.

The latest and most important news from London, Paris, Turin, Rome, Syria, China, California, Japan, Egypt, and South America, our correspondents will send to us.

Our correspondents are attached to the various divisions of the army, will accompany them wherever they go, and by the free use of the telegraph and the mails, present in the columns of the World

A Complete History of the War,

EMPLOYMENT.

THE Undersigned has, for several years past, been engaged in a business, which has yielded him at the rate of three thousand dollars per annum, and is now willing to teach it to others. The business is of a highly useful and general character, suited both to cities and villages, and one that any person of ordinary capacity, young or old, male or female, can acquire with a few hours' practice, and by which they can secure a very handsome income. Several young ladies who have received instructions from me, both in New York State and Pennsylvania, are earning upwards of $15 per week by it, and there is no reason why any one else cannot do the same. Invalids, even, can do well by it, as it is no confining affair, but a business that is perfectly respectable. Gentleman and ladies of leisure who would like to learn the business for their own amusement or pleasure, will find the practice of it a pleasant pastime, and one that they will take great interest in. On receipt of $1, I will send printed instructions by which any person can readily acquire the art, and these instructions will also contain every particular relative to the carrying it on so that it will be highly profitable. To a purchaser of the "private instructions" will also be authorized to teach it to others; and I have sometimes received as high as $200, for teaching it personally to a single individual. I would state further that $2.50 or $3 will buy everything that is necessary to commence the business with, and the articles can be got almost anywhere, in city or country. If preferred, I can furnish them. ADDRESS ALVORD T. PARSONS, No. 36 Liberty St., New York.

ANNUAL MEETING

[illegible] DECLARATION OF BONUS.

[illegible] Meeting of the Company was held at the Head Office, Aberdeen [illegible] Esq., of Drumellan, Chairman of the Ordinary Directors, in the chair.

[illegible] were submitted to the meeting.

[illegible] the Balance Sheet for the past year, with detailed statements relating thereto, duly examined as correct, in terms of the Act of Incorporation, by the Chairman and Manager, and also by the Auditor.

There was also laid on the Table the various Valuation Staffs in connection with the Quinquennial Investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, as at 31st January, 1863.

The following particulars derived from the Balance Sheet and Statements before-mentioned, show the result of the operations of the Company for the past year:—

Amount proposed for Life Assurance during the year, contained in 1189 Proposal Schedules.....£ 0 0
Amount of Proposals accepted, and for which 881 Policies were issued.....880,000 0 0
ANNUAL PREMIUMS on said Policies.....34,179 1 0
CLAIMS BY DEATH during the year, including BONUSES on PARTICIPATION POLICIES, and after deducting sums re-assured [illegible] Policies under guarantee.....27,999 1 0
TOTAL SUM Assured under 4,958 current POLICIES.....1,955,26 0 0
TOTAL ACCUMULATED FUNDS.....313,563 3 2
ROYAL ANNUAL REVENUE.....[illegible] 4 4

With reference to the recent investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, as at 31st January last, the Report states that both the principles of valuation and the details thereof, had been submitted to James John Cowper, Esq., Actuary to the Economic Life Office in London, a Gentleman well known as one of the highest authorities on such subjects in the Kingdom, who had signified his entire approval, as having been made on just and sound principles, and accurately carried out as certified in his report to the Directors, which formed part of the Appendix to their Report. This and the Directors considered could not fail to give the utmost confidence—both to the shareholders and the Policyholders—in the soundness and correctness of the valuation.

During the Quinquennial period, the claims by death, including the bonus additions which had been paid, and which had been considerably under the number that might have been expected from the Mortality Tables on which the Office rates are based, amounting to £93,975 6s 6d.

In valuing the Policies each had been separately calculated, and nett premiums had only been used, thus leaving a surplus of annual revenue of £11,427 18s 7d., to meet future expenses and to form a source of profit for next investigation. The total amount of claims by death paid since the commencement of the Company, was £217,831 4s.

The Securities held by the Company were in a satisfactory position, and had been recently carefully scrutinized in detail by the Directors.

In conclusion, the Directors congratulated both the Proprietors and the Assured on the high position which the Company now occupied in the estimation of the public, and on the encouraging prospect of its business operations for the future.

DECLARATION OF BONUS.

From the profits realised on the Life business, a retrospective Bonus of £1 7s 6d per cent per annum for the Quinquennial period was declared, on the sums originally assured under all Participating Policies, increased by the previous additions thereto; also a further prospective Bonus of £1 per cent per annum, on the amount of the Policies with said Bonuses, on all such of said Policies as may become claims by Death previously to the 31st January, 1867.

It will be observed, that this rate of Bonus is equivalent in the case of our older Policies to £1 14s per cent per annum on the original sum assured; that the total additions to the sum assured, now vested, are equal to 33 per cent on the sum assured: and that as the younger ages the additions amount to upwards of 75 per cent of the premiums paid.

Statement showing the Progress of the Company's Business during the Quinquennial Period ending 31st January, 1863:

Year ending 31st January.	Amounts for Assurance.	Amount of Policies Issued.	No. of Policies.	New Annual Premiums.	Annual Premiums in each year.	Accumulated Funds.

Totals....	£[illegible]1,375,800	£1,218,630	[illegible]	2,991	£[illegible]37,499 15 10	£[illegible]803,691 16 6	£1,427,282 15 6

Votes of thanks were passed to the Directors and Office-bearers of the Company at Head-Offices and Branches, and after a very hearty vote of thanks to the Chairman for his conduct in the Chair, the meeting was dissolved.

Poetry.

Poetry of the War.

From a poem in last week's N.Y. Sunday Mercury, entitled "Greenbacks," we extract the following:

There's a river that runs from the North to the South,
Channeled by God's mighty hand,
It runs between valleys of cotton and corn,
And once on its beautiful bosom was borne
The wealth of a wonderful land,

The valleys spread out upon either side,
Richer than fabulous mines,
Reaching from Regions of frost and snow,
Down through the limitless prairies below,
To the lands of the palms and the vines.

Navies whose cost would have beggared a king,
Calmly its waters caressing,
Floated for years on its arrowy tide,
Wedding the South to the North as a bride—
Navies of peace and of blessing.

Magical cities arose on its banks,
Wonders of wealth and of grace.
Forests were melted, and Temples were reared:
Hamlets and towns as by magic appeared,
Gemming its b autiful f ce.

The wonderful river is silent now,
Bolted and locked, and barred!
Its current is rapid as ever before,
But the navies of peace its bosom once bore,
Are under suspicion and guard!

Vain are the riches of valley and plain,
All in that wonderful land;
For the rivers that weeded the North and the South
Is closed at the middle and closed at the mouth,
Closed by an iron hand.

On the limitless prairies the corn may grow rank,
And down in the valleys below
The cotton and cane may flourish in vain,
Till God shall see fit to sunder the chain
That nerves the palms from the snow.

The navies that float on the wonderful stream
Are navies of terrior and wrath.
Destruction and death through the valleys they bear;
With sulphurous vapors they burden the air,
And fury flames up in their path.

The cities are sullen and sorrowful now;
Their beauty is wa ted and worn.
The hamlets and towns are shattered and burned,
The panther, the bear, and the wolf have returned
To the fields of the cotton and corn.

What do we get for this loss? I asked;
Loss of a wonderful land;
Loss of our navies, of blessing and peace,
Fruit of the corn and of cotton's increase—
What have we got in our hand?

A half-burned steamer, broken and charred,
Lay on the bank near by:
And the waters surged through the useless wreck,
The bell still hung on the shattered deck,
And solemnly tolled the reply—
"GREENBACKS!"

Miscellaneous.

A Gigantic Swindle,

(From the Rochester Union.)

One of the most stupendous frauds of the day, perpetrated by a single individual, has just come to light, and the guilty party has been brought up to answer. The party who suffered by the operation is our well known and very wealthy citizen Aristarchus Champion, and the alleged swindler is Luther Calvin Saxton.

It appears by the papers presented that Saxton came here to reside something over two years ago with his family. He was a man pretending to deep religious feeling, and an earnest supporter of great reforms—a patron of the arts, of education—in short, of everything that was good.

He worked himself into the confidence of Mr. Champion, and so long ago as July 1861, he began to reap the fruits of that confidence. Saxton pretended to be the managing man of an immense concern, known as the "Union Book Company," with a capital of $3,000,000, which was engaged in the publication of books, religious, moral, historical and scientific. It was represented that 24 libraries were to be published, embracing over 5,000 different works. The title of these books were given in a magazine purporting to be issued by the Company in New York, called the Union Magazine. It is understood that but one copy of this periodical was ever issued, and that was probably prepared for the purpose to which it was devoted.

Mr. Champion became interested in the project, having in view the dissemination of knowledge and truth as well as the realization of profits, and he made over in notes and mortgages to Saxton about $10,000 for stock in the "Union Book Co." As the operations of this company extended to Great Britain, the mortgages were made payable in London, interest and all.

Saxton went to Europe last year and returned with another big scheme to Mr. Champion. This was the "intercolonial Manufacturing Company," to operate in both hemispheres with a capital of one hundred millions, liable to be raised to one thousand millions. The details of the plan and of the operation of this company were drawn up by Saxton, and he and Mr. C. were to be the American managers. It was clearly demonstrated upon paper that $13,000,000 could be realized per annum upon the $100,000,000 with which the company commenced operations.

Saxton represented that he had an immense property in New Jersey, which could be put in as capital to this company for five millions, if a certain cloud resting upon it could be removed. It would cost fifty thousand to remove this cloud, and that amount Mr. C. advanced his paper for, and Saxton realized within three hundred dollars of the whole sum.

For a period of two years this confidence game has been played, and Mr. Champion had no distrust of Saxton until a few days since, when he addressed letters to W. B. Astor and others in New York, with whom Saxton pretended to be intimate, and who had stock in his companies, as he represented, and answers came that they did not

Last week Mr. Champion put the matter into the hands of his attorneys, a warrant was issued by Judge E. Darwin Smith, and on Saturday, chief of police Mudgett arrested Saxton at the Astor House, in New York, and brought him to Rochester. He was lodged in jail and will have an examination before Judge Smith soon.

Proceedings were instituted to recover what could be found in the way of money or property, and it appeared that Saxton had some funds in the deposit here and at the Metropolitan Bank, in New York. It is by no means probable that any considerable portion of the amount received, $3:50,000, will be recovered.

Saxton is a man of about 55 years of age, and has practised law. We have not been able to get much of his history, but it is said he once resided in Otsego county and was involved there in matters which kept him upon the limits for a considerable time. He has made this city his home for about two years, and he had purchased 50 acres of land at West End, near the residence of Mr. Champion to make that his future home.

The above statement is but a brief outline of the case. The details show that it was one of the strangest cases of fraud ever perpetrated or made public. It is presumed that Saxton will be put in defence, and may make one that is very plausible. There will be curiosity on the part of the public to see it.

Sleeping in the Cars.

A great many funny things happen, and any quantity of amusing stories are told of occurrences that take place on railroads. A little incident transpired on the road between Buffalo and Rochester that is really about as good of its kind as anything we have heard lately, and proves conclusively that the longest way round is the shortest way home.

A gentleman having business to transact at Syracuse took the evening train from Buffalo at 7 o'clock, and departed on his journey. Having been laboriously engaged during the whole day, and being considerably fatigued, he fell sound asleep just the other side of Attica, and only stirred from his position when the conductor came about to collect the tickets. At Rochester passengers are transferred to another train which takes them East, and those who had come from the West had arranged themselves comfortably in the other train—all except our friend. He was so sound asleep that nothing waked him. The consequence was that the cars started at their time and he was left

The train from the East arrived just as the other was leaving, and the passengers for Buffalo left the car it which they had been riding, and stepped into the same train in which the sleeper came to Rochester.—Another conductor was in charge of the train, and was obliged to wake the gentleman to obtain his fare.

"Do you go through, sir?" asked the conductor.

"Y-e-s," replied the sleepy head.

"I'll take your fare."

"How much?"

"Eleven shillings."

"Well, that's cheap," said he, supposing that he was paying from Rochester to Auburn—and, forking over the amount, subsided into his former position to finish his snooze.

At Utica, he was again shaken unmercifully by the conductor, and his fare again demanded.

"By George, I've slept like a book all the way—never had a better bed in the cars in my life. What's the fare?"

"Ninety-three cents."

"Well, that's cheap—cheaper than I have ever paid before," and he again relapsed into unconsciousness.

By-and-by the cars arrived at the depot in Buffalo, the noise and confusion here effectually awakened our traveller, and he left the cars with the rest of the passengers. On alighting he stops short, stared about, rubbed his eyes, stared again, looked at the lamps, then at the conductor, and finally exclaimed:

"Well—by thunder!"

"Why, what's the matter?" asked the conductor.

"Where am I?"

"Why, you are in Buffalo to be sure. You can't go any further West on this road."

"Well, this is pretty business. Last night I took the cars here to go to Syracuse, and now find myself at five o'clock in the morning at Buffalo. If I ain't an ass there never was one!" And off he went, muttering and swearing to and at himself—the swearing being done up in language nervous but very malignant—strong but very unsentimental, such as would be very improper to ears polite.

ARRANGING FLOWER BEDS.—To have a well-formed and nicely-filled garden is not enough—it must also be nicely arranged. Nay, the latter is of much more importance than the former. It is of the first importance that the outline of the beds, and their relation to each other, should be good; but it is of much greater importance that the colors with which they are filled should either harmonize our contrast with each other. Colors are separated into cool or warm colors. The former should prevail in gardens laid out on gravel, which is itself generally a warm color. For instance, in gardens on gravel, grey, blue, yellow, white, blue, green, &c., should predominate; in those on grass, purple, pink, scarlet and orange should prevail. White, however, is equally suitable for gardens of both descriptions; and unless where the gravel is very light, is very striking and effective; and nothing can be more chaste and beautiful than beds, broad margins or lines of white contiguous or grass—it is equally striking in juxta-position to bright red gravel. As a practicle rule, the most intense colors should be placed in the centre of the beds, and the less tints used for contrasting the rings or edgings. Generally, too, the smaller the beds, the more liberally may be the intense color, as scarlet, be introduced, and vice versa.

Deaths by Fire.

In the 14 years, 48-1861, 39,927 persons—about eight a day—were burnt alive in England, or were scalded to death, 1,344 were infants under one year of age; 4,500 children of one and under two years of age; 9,777 between two and four years of age—and in these two years the child, not having learnt to dread the fire, incurs the greatest danger. The boys being in nursery language, "most mischievous," are up to four years of age burnt in greater numbers than girls; but afterwards the clothes of boys are less combustible than the clothes of girls, and fewer of them are burned to death. Between the ages of five and fifteen 6,235 girls, but only 3,750 boys, were burned to death in the 14 years. Subsequently men are exposed to fires and explosions in mines and works, die by fires in greater numbers than women up to about 50 years of age, after which the men grow more cautious or are partially withdrawn from danger, and the combustible dresses of women again turn the scale against them. 2,122 old women (above 65) in their feebleness were burnt to death in the 14 years. The Druidical sacrifices, the fires of Moloch, the Inquisition, the fires of Smithfield, the burnings of witches in the middle ages, and the immolation of widows in India, naturally excite horror in the present age. Still it is evident that the lives were offered up mistakenly with a view to the removal of evil, and that the sacrifices were sanctioned by the religion or superstition of the age and people. The deaths by burning in England are ascribed to accident, but they are none the less dreadful on that account, particularly when it is considered that the victims are often as unnecessarily exposed as moths to the flames in which they perish. The time has assuredly come to endeavor to put a stop to these human sacrifices. A special investigation might suggest means by which they might be effectually prevented; in the meantime, the following points deserves immediate attention. 1 Open fires, lights, and kettles of hot water should be surrounded by good guards. 2. Children and young people and old women should be systematically taught the danger of fire. 3. The dresses of young children and old women should be made as much as possible of worsted or wool, which will protect them against cold as well as against fire. 4. Muslin dresses and cotton and linen clothes might be starched with the chemical materials which are found by experience to render them to a certain extent incombustible. 5. Private houses should all be provided on the floor of the sleeping apartments with the means of escape in the event of the lower apartments taking fire during the night; especial provision to be made for women and children. 6. Persons falling asleep near the fire or near lights in a state of intoxication, or in fits, are frequently burnt to death. 7. Dangerous trades require special arrangements.

Changing Clothing.

It has come within the observation of many a reader that serious and severe illness has been induced, and even fatal sickness caused, by a change of clothing. Injury never comes, perhaps, by putting on more or warmer clothing, but by diminishing the amount inconsiderably. The first great general rule, and always the safest, is to make the change when you first dress in the morning; if you wait until you are uncomfortably warm during the day, it is most likely to be in the early part of the afternoon. To making the change then there are two or three causes of disease in operation; the fact of undressing endangers a check of perspiration; the garments about to be put on may not be perfectly dry, there may be no opportunity, even if they are dry, to warm them up to the heat of the body; and further, just about the time you have changed, the cool and damps of the afternoon and evening begin to come on, increasing until dark, while having been thrown of your guard by the warmth of morning, you may not feel the necessity of a fire, and by tea-time you are surprised with a disagreeable chilliness running over you; then the cold has been taken, to settle in the eyes, causing weakness and watering; or in the throat, creating a raw or burning sensation at the little hollow at the bottom of the neck and top of the breast bone; or on the covering of the lungs, to give you painful pleurisy; or in the lungs themselves, in the shape of a troublesome bronchitis or a dangerous pneumonia; or in the bowels, causing weakening diarrhea; or on the covering of the bowels, inducing peritoneal inflamation, to end probably in death in a few days.

It is very unsafe to lessen the amount of clothing sooner than the first of May, and then not in quality, but in less thickness of the same material; from yarn socks to worsted; from a thick, knitted flannel shirt to one of common woolen flannel; then about the first of June, to a gauze flannel; if this is oppressive to some, then employ canton flannel. But it is certainly a great mistake for any body to wear any thing else next the skin, even in the hottest summer weather, than woolen flannel. Silk shirts next the skin cannot be advocated on any tangible grounds; the moment a man begins to twaddle with you about "electrical influences," turn your heel upon him and set him down as a perumptive and impudent ignoramus.—Hall's Journal of Health.

A great principle. The principle of electricity lay locked beyond the reach of science for long centuries. Indeed at the day it is but indefinitely comprehended; and it is even doubtful whether it is conceivable to pursue a research in occult science which may never be attained by any beneficial results to mankind; but the principle which actuates a man to purchase a bottle of Dowes' Elixir and Henry's Liniment and present them to his wife and family, is one which should excite our warmest admiration. For Coughs, Colds, &c. the Elixir is the most excellent remedy that can be given; and as a Pain-Killer the Ver-

Horrid Murder on the Grand River

On Tuesday, the 19th of May, a horrible murder was committed in the Township of Brantford. The particulars, as near as we have been able to ascertain them are as follows: It seems that on the day mentioned, a logging-bee was being held at James Anderson's, lot 9, township of Brantford. At the bee were the brother of Anderson, Samuel and Benjamin Copeman, and his son, John Copeman. During the day, Anderson and his brothers picked a quarrel with the Copemans, which ended in fighting. Nothing serious resulted from this however; but when Copeman and his son went home, they were followed by the Andersons, who re-commenced the quarrel, crying that they would have satisfaction. They approached Copeman's house, which they entered, without knocking. The Copemans put out the intruding party, saying they desired to have no fighting. Upon being put out, the Andersons, now infuriated, rushed at the house with sticks and brick-bats, breaking the doors and windows. In the melee, old Copeman threw a brick which struck Samuel Anderson in the head, and at the same time, John Copeman struck him on the neck with an axe, severing the windpipe and cutting his head nearly off. Dr. Dee was called in, who sewed up his neck; but the unfortunate man died next evening. We may say that the row was caused, as most rows are, by liquor, which had been freely used at the bee. An inquest was held before Coroner Buckell, and the jury gave as their verdict "that the deceased came to his death by the blow of some sharp instrument, in the hands of John Copeman." Copeman has been committed to jail to await his trial at the next assizes.

A FEARFUL PUNISHMENT.—Mr. Heywood M.A., who has just published "A vacation Tour at the Antipode," relates some illustrations of our former convict system. We hope he has been misinformed as to the truth of the following terrible story:—"The treatment of the convicts was often very severe, and even very cruel. One man (who had been at the battle of Navarino) received several hundred lashes for more trivial offences; and was at last sentenced to 100 lashes, and to be chained to a rock on Goat Island, in Sydney harbor, for two years, with barely a rag to cover him. The chain was 26 feet long, and a hollow scooped out in a rock large enough to admit his body, served for his bed. His only shelter was a wooden lid perforated with holes, which was placed over him, and locked in that position at night, being removed in the morning. He was fed by means of a pole, with which the vessel containing his food was pushed towards him. Exposed to all weathers, his bare back and shoulders a mass of sores, rapidly became covered with maggots through the heat of the climate; and even then he was denied water to bathe his wounds."

THE OLD MAN AND HIS NEW JACKET.—Rev. Walter Dunlop, of Dumfries was the most reputed of Scottish clerical humorists of the age. A member of his congregation, in humble life, had been presented with a gay particolored waistcoat by his son, a college student. It became part of his holiday attire, but was scarcely in keeping with his age or the gravity of his deportment. One Sabbath, while attending divine service in Mr. Dunlop's church, he fell asleep during the first prayer, and so remained in a standing posture when the others of the congregation had, at the close of their exercise, resumed their seats. Mr. Dunlop looked at him attentively as he announced his text, and then exclaimed, "Willie, my man, ye may tak doon—a' the folks. I think, hae now seen your braw new vest."

—A Fort Ruby (Nebraska) correspondent gives the following sketch;—Yesterday the "belle" of the Shoshones—"Sugar Plum" by name—was pointed out to your correspondent. Her dress consisted of an old tattered red calico skirt and a dirty grey flannel shirt drawn over her shoulders, over which fell innumerable strings of colored beads and trinkets of various kinds. Her feet were encased in a heavy pair of men's shoes, a world too large, and her ankles enveloped in wrappings of old red flannel. Her face, around which fell tangled masses of jetty hair, was not indeed repulsive, but could certainly not be called handsome or attractive. This is the nearest approach to the "beautiful Indian maiden" I have seen during a residence of six months in the territory.

THE ORIGIN OF HAND-SHAKING.—The Romans had a goddess whose name was Fides or Fidelity—a goddess of "faith and honesty," to whom Numa was the first to pay divine honors. Her only dress was a white veil, expressive of candor, frankness and modesty; and her symbol was two right hands joined, or sometimes two female figures hold each other by the right hands, whence in all agreements among the Greeks and Romans it was usual for the parties to take each other by the right hand, as a token of their intention to adhere to the compact; and this custom is in more general use even among ourselves, at the present day, than would at first thought be realized.

WHO WOULD BE WITHOUT IT.—None we are sure, if they knew the wonderful effect the "Canadian Pain Destroyer" has upon all kinds of aches and pains. No matter what part is affected, or from what it arises, the moment the "Pain Destroyer" is applied, that moment you will get relief. It is the greatest cure ever known for rheumatism, pleurisy, neuralgia, tooth-ache, head-ache, sprains, bruises, bowel complaints, &c., Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

The Cologne Gazette attributes to the King of Swedden the following words. Having been asked some weeks ago what assistance Sweden could offer to France in case of war with Russia, King Charles the XV. replied, "Let two French people enter the Baltic and I will be there

THE ELECTIONS.

The excitement consequent upon the selection of the people's representatives, is now upon us, and agitates the country from one end to the other. The contest appears to be between the supporters of the present Government, and those who favour the Rate coalition, who may be defined as Reformers and Conservatives, or, as the Leader has it, the 'Grits" and the "Moderates" The policy of the two parties is pretty well defined, and in theory approach each other nearer than we ever remember before. We are disposed to narrow down the difference between the two parties chiefly to the management of the funds of the Province; one party insisting upon economy and retrenchment, the other reckless and careless of expenditure. If we could secure men of common honesty to conduct our public affairs, we should soon have but little to differ about. Our present strife seems chiefly to be which party shall have the control of the public exchequer. This affords the party in power an influence, which is often used in a very corrupt manner. The revelations brought out by the Finance Commission seem to implicate the late Coalition, who, it is said, were so desirous of escaping from the exposure, that their aim in voting non-confidence in the Government, was more urgent in this respect than anything else. The Report, however, has seen the light, and the Macdonald-Cartier Government, will have the credit and blame for their recent acts. Their friends throughout the country are strenuous in their efforts to reinstate them in power, and every application at work to secure their end. Their chief organ in Toronto has jumped over the fence, and is using its power to restore its former friends to power. It has of late been very severe and bitter upon the Premier, and, in fact, the whole party who support him. Its former advocacy of the Government astonished the whole country; its opposition now is natural, but its tergiversations and shuffling has had the effect of lowering it in public estimation, which no editorial ability can efface. Not only so, its late fierce attacks upon characters prove that it has lost its former dignity and honorable standing. It need not read lectures on scurrility to the Globe any more. It can write down character with any other journal. The friends of the present Government are also active in their efforts to sustain them, and we sincerely hope they may succeed. The Administration is composed of men of talent and means, and taken as a whole will compare favorably with any Government we have had since the Union. The Globe, after a long dubious course, has came round strong in support of this Government, although the Representation question has got the go-by for the present. It is somewhat consolatory to those who have long advocated the views now held by members of the Government, and the Globe on this question to find them coming round, and taking the only practicable and common sense view on the question. Great men and great journals are not always sound, and we hope the "altered views" now put forth will teach them in the future to weigh their principles more carefully.

In the present contest, we observe a goodly number of new aspirants and many that have been formerly in Parliament. We observe in Russell three candidates; Robert Bell, the ex-member, Dr. Hunter, who has twice before tried, but failed to represent that Northern little country, and George Byron Lyon Fellows! The county who was swindled by this shameless fellow of his representation, deserves proscription if they encourage such a man to come forward again. We do not forget the audacity with which John A. Macdonald and his colleagues held on to this unprincipled man, because a thick and thin supporter of that Administration. It was one of the black acts in screening him so long, and when forced to inflict punishment upon him, to move for the mitigation of the sentence. This shameless fellow should be taught a lesson he has yet to learn and never would forget. Men who would encourage or shield such a man are as bad as himself. What better can you expect of double shufflers, who trampled upon the people's rights, and announced to the world that the sacredness of an oath had no sanctity with them. We observe that the Rev. Wm. Ryerson, the late representative of West Brant, is out again in full blast for the county. We supposed that the old gentleman, after being in Parliament, would have gladly retired. He is a worn out preacher, and in the superannuated list—considered too old to call ordinary sinners to repentance, but he fancies himself quite able to walk with extraordinary sinners in Parliament, and wrangle with them; sit up all night, eat late dinners, endure the thirst and wear of a politician. One is led to doubt of his honesty in retiring from preaching the Gospel, and entering political life. He has surely parted with his religion, in leaving the calling he has followed so long, and which is acknowledged the highest and most honorable a man can engage in, for one so incongenial to it. An old man whose years should command respect, made ridiculous by his speeches and the Tory party must be in West Brant, to select so miserable an object to represent them. How anxious for a "British education" they must be, to select a Yankee Canadian in the dotage of life, to procure it for them. We have in East Durham the same two contestants out again. After a great deal of delay, Mr. Burton's qualification is considered good. We trust he may be left at home. Then in Victoria we have the Hon. Sidney Smith opposing Mr. Dunsford. A dreadful struggle may be expected here. The Reformers have unanimously called out Mr. Dunsford, and he is strongly supported by most of the leading men in the county. His Committee embarces chief men in every party and profession, and it would be a lasting disgrace for the good county of Victoria to reject an old, tried and reliable servant like Mr. Dunsford. His residence among them and a community of interests, must weigh with them, and, we have no doubt, will secure his triumphant return. Surely the late Postmaster-General, tired of his lordly seat, comes forward with a bad grace, craving a seat in the Lower House. He has established himself in Peterborough in his profession, and is wanted here. Possibly, he may not be doing all he would desire yet still he has an increasing business, and we trust the electors of Victoria will consider that we have the first claim on his services. With the leading men and the local press against him, his hopes of success must be weak. In our own good County we are all serene. Scarce a stir is made by any one. Mr. Conger has it all his own way—a mighty difference from days of yore, when writing and speaking were his chief employment for weeks and weeks. The more rigid Reformers seem disposed to allow the County to go by default—while the more lax ones seem satisfied that although Mr. Conger does not represent their political views in the House, he will make a good local member.

In Toronto the Reformers have gotten Mr. John McDonald to oppose Mr. Robinson, with every prospect of success—a requisition signed by over 800 electors asking him to be a candidate is published in the Globe. Mr. McDonald is an old resident of Toronto, a successful merchant who has risen with the city, and is now in a position to go to Parliament and be independent of the bribes so often offered and accepted for party purposes.

In Peel the Hon. J. Hillyard Cameron is likely to be defeated by a Reformer. His course on the School question gave umbrage to the Orange order, who passed resolutions condemnatory of his conduct. The prospects of a victory are bright for the Reform party.

Execution of Coulter.

On Monday morning last, at Toronto, Robert Coulter who was convicted for the murder of Kenny, suffered the extreme penalty of the law. He appears to have been a man of great muscular strength, possessed of a violent ungoverned temper, and a revengeful disposition. It a pears he has committed some two or three murders previously, besides nearly killing a constable and committed larceny, for which he served two terms in the Penitentiary.

There were four or five thousand persons present at the execution. The criminal professed contrition for his offences, and hope in Divine pardon for his sins.

His history affords another instance of the sad consequences of yielding to passion and temper, and another lesson to beware of indulging a vindictive revengeful spirit. Self-control is one of the most important lessons for parents to teach their children; it cannot be inculcated too early, nor enforced too earnestly.

The earnest, attentive parent has the Divine assurance of the success of his efforts: "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." The converse has been supplied by some one "Train up a child in the way he would, and when he gets old he will be hanged."

The American Agriculturist. Every farmer, indeed every person who has a garden ought to subscribe at once for the agriculturist.

The Quarter Sessions commmence Tuesday next the 9th inst.,

A communication received from Mr. Gilbert, is too late for this weeks issue.

The Budget.

The budget has been opened, and we are happy to learn that the estimates will be brought down in such a shape that the House will be asked to sanction the whole expenditure of the country, and not of a comparatively small part, as has been hitherto the case. The only exception to this will be in cases where specific amounts have been provided for by the statute.

A reduction of expenditure will be proposed, as compared with the outlay of last year, of the following amounts:

Victoria.

Mr. James Dunsford M. P. P. for Victoria in the last Parliament, has been nominated by a Convention. He is opposed by Ex-Postmaster General Sidney Smith, a man who conjointly with Mr. Spense, has much to answer for, for having betrayed the party they always acted with, and delivered the country into the hands of John A. McDonald and Cartier.—London

Duties of Electors.

CONSIDERATIONS FOR THE MEN OF SUBSTANCE IN THE COUNTRY.

(From the Montreal Gazette.)

Before a general election it is well for every man to think for a moment of his individual duties—to reflect upon the advantage of well performing them of the cost to him and the injury to the country which must arise from neglect of them. Men are often indifferent to their highest privileges because they are familiar, just as the light of the sun is not noticed because men see it every day. Indifference to the sun will not prevent the light, but indifference to the exercise of our political franchise may bring disaster to us and to our children—nay, it will surely do so, sooner or later. It is a true saying, but it cannot be too often repeated, that men who are careless to exercise the franchise ought not to possess it: they are not fit for freedom. It is true that it may be hard at this most inopportune time for farmers to leave their fields or commercial men their offices or stores; but unless they do so, they surrender their dearest political liberty, and punishment will follow, if not immediately, still as surely as night follows the day. The respectable and solid men among our neighbours have tried this experiment very thoroughly. They allowed the class of statesmen to decline, and left the class of riff-raff, in their stead, to occupy the public councils. Men of education with business of their own to mind, have stood aside, to make way for hungry adventurers. And what have they gained? It is true as individuals they did mind their business and thought they had grown rich, and heaped up possessions for themselves and their posterity; but their politicians plunged the country into a horrible war, the bones of their sons and brothers cover the land, having been fairly led to the slaughter like cattle to the shambles, by incompetent and braggart leaders, while the substance is eaten up by the tax-gatherer, less for the purpose of being honestly expended, than to satisfy the greedy and ever open maw of corruption of the most frightful kind. Are we made of different clay to other men that like causes will not produce like results, slightly different in their complexion it may be, but as bitter and destructive? Let every man who has anything to lose in this country, any man who has substance, or children whom he wishes to settle, ask himself in sober seriousness this question. His conscience may whisper to him that there may be something in it, but his immediate interest says "I cannot neglect my business, and I do not see that I am called upon in any particular way to interfere." Let such men remember the truism that "what is everybody's business is nobody's," and that it is they who pay and suffer for the rule of speculator, hungry sharpers and adventurers, who will eagerly push or buy themselves into places of trust, and, who, while they disgrace these will fatten themselves upon the substance of the country. We have had far too many persons of this stamp in the Parliament of Canada. They can be prevented from entering it and deas stalizing it and burrying the whole country on the road to ruin, jeopardizing the property of every man in it, by the energetic efforts of the respectable electors—but only by their energetic efforts, laying, at any sacrifice, their private business aside for awhile, to exercise the political franchise of freemen. This is the experimentum crucis. If the men of substance and business and education are not prepared to make these exertions, this sacrifice,—if, on the contrary they are prepared to abdicate their highest personal function—the function par excellence of last resort in a free state,—then let them not whine when the day of reckoning comes, let them spare useless remarks when they see themselves represented by men of whom they are ashamed, when they see the legislature disgraced. It is unnecessary to say anything to the intelligent electors of the country touching the kind or character of the men they should select.—All that is wanted is that they stir themselves and exercise the franchise in the interest of the country, and not remain quietly at home while sharpers settle them

The Orangemen of Peterborough.

To the Editor of the Toronto Mirror:

Dear Sir,—I feel happy in stating that since I have become a subscriber for your valuable paper, I have read it with much pleasure and profit. I am sorry that I did not take it before, but since that cannot be helped now I shall content myself with advising all my friends who would wish to have a positive luxury in the way of a good newspaper, to send for the Mirror at once. There is one matter in particular which has afforded me sincere satisfaction and that is the manner in which you have dealt with "the Peterboro' ruffians," as the perpetrators of the Orange outrage of the 17th of March are styled in the P t Hope Guide. Dose after dose and "pill" after "pill" you have administered to them, till you have so exhausted their bodily vigor that I fear they will never be able to bear the load of public obloquy cast upon them from all quarters.

I am satisfied that the Catholics of Peterboro' feel highly grateful to you for the manner in which you took up their cause and held to it, and I am sure that you will not loose sight of the matter whilst any chance of redress remains. For instance, if something could be effected by petition, as you lately suggested, I believe that you would not be behind hand in setting it on foot and putting it through. Certainly, the man who refuses to do all in his power in such a case cannot be considered as discharging his duty towards society.

It is proverbial that the report is always worse than the truth, but in the Peterboro' outrage there was something so monstrous that no report of the affair that I ever saw or heard could convey anything like an adequate idea of its atrociousness. To see this the scene would require to be represented theatrically—words alone are unequal to the task. Just imagine a crowd of some hundreds, armed to the teeth, dressed like men going to do some dirty work, and with the demon of murder depicted in each countenance, waiting the word to commence a cold-blooded massacre of their unoffending fellow-men. You will be indignant at the thought of such a sight, though the "ruffians" are at this stage in the mildest mood. They had not as yet their brutal ferocity aroused by the exhortations of Sparrow and Colwell, and consequently the crowd of women and children which had assembled to see the procession was permitted to disperse quietly. After the exhortations, they behaved themselves like perfect savages. Here you might see a little fellow come crying to his mother to tell her how an Orangeman had taken his green ribbon and trampled on it; there you might see a crowd of cowardly wretches armed with bayonets, bludgeons, &c., beset a single man to murder him because he wore a shamrock, and on his escaping from them pursued him with the fury of hell-hounds This is bad enough, but just think to see young women treated with the same brutality! It is scarcely credible, but too true. There you might have seen them stabbed and beaten, and bleeding profusely from many wounds.

On seeing such sights, you may, perhaps, feel inclined to look for the authorities, to see if they cannot do something towards protecting life. You start with this intention, and after a few rods walk meet with your old friend the Mayor, opposite Phelan's Hotel. He appears to be very busy amongst the rabble, who have now become quite exasperated at the escape of the man, and of course you expect that he is endeavoring to disperse them. You are soon enlightened on this point, however, by hearing him demand of the proprietor to turn out the man who had taken refuge in his house, although it was quite evident that if that person were produced he would have been not merely murdered, but torn to pieces, in a moment. There's a Mayor (mare) for you—a horse, perhaps—but, at all events, a beast. "Man-darin" Cottingham and our other law-makers who proved themselves law-breakers, I shall leave to your tender mercies.

When we consider the horror with which we would regard a man who would go coolly to commit murder, must we not feel shocked to see such a number of men led to so fearful an extreme by a foul and malignant party spirit; and must we not consider an organization which nurtures and engenders such a spirit and such demoralizing and brutal passions, as one most dangerously subversive of all religion, law and order, and which consequently strikes directly at the well being of society and the prosperity of the country. Yes; Orangeism is a pest, a fester, a canker, a worm eating at the core of the country's prosperity, and some effort should be made to crush the hydra. As the society is strictly secret, we cannot hope to learn much respecting it, even if we would wish to, after knowing too much already. Judging from its fruits, however, we would be led to infer that something of the cloven foot exists in its hidden workings, by which it corrupts the heart and degrades and demoralizes the man. till, on great occasions, the accumulated evil bursts forth in the most scandalous manner possible, as it did in Peterboro' on the 17th of March. Sometimes, however, we receive a little on this mysterious subject. N. C. Gowan, holding forth in a three hours' speech to his brethren of Lodge 1040, tells them, amongst other things, that the great aim and object of the Orange Society is "to keep down Popery;" he also assures his dupes that even in Ireland the people are beginning to see the difference and, through means of the revivals, were learning to despise the lazy priests, and to turn to Jesus Christ!!! Then, indeed he was "doing it fat." Our Sparrow, too, on the 17th, soared to near the same height.

It is not on great and public occasions alone that the pernicious evils of Orangeism appear: they show themselves in on thousand and one ways in every day life, and are the cause of innumerable quarrels and dissensions amongst all classes. It affects the common laborer, the mechanic, the farmer, the merchant, &c., as well as the constable, the magistrate, the jury, the judge, and others concerned in the administration and execution of the laws, and wherever it prevails it does not fail to produce its natural noxious fruits.

Miss Meany, after some difficulty, succeeded in obtaining a warrant for the apprehension of the ruffian who stabbed her twice with a bayonet. A day was appointed for the trial, but when the day came she was informed that no constable could be got to apprehend him, and was advised that the best way would be to wait till he would come to town some day. It is in vain that she urges the improbability of his coming, the unlikelihood of his being taken if he did, and the impossibility of her collecting her witnesses without having timely notice, &c., &c.: all is no use—the magistrates can see no other way of managing the matter. Of course, this is merely a wretched put off. We have two old white-headed magistrates, who exhibited so much chagrin when the warrant was wrung from them, that I am satisfied that if the villian Armstrong himself came to enquire of them about the matter they would take no steps to apprehend him. One of them began to

CHEAP FOR CASH.

THAN AT ANY OTHER HOUSE IN PETERBOROUGH.

THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

Cincinnati June 1.—The Commercial has full particulars of the operations of Gen. Grant up to the 1st of May. "When our army advanced upon the city of Vicksburg it was confident of an easy conquest, but the ground in rear of the city was so crooked and rugged and wild as to be almost impassable for artillery. The Confederate fortifications were discovered to be very formidable, being overgrown with grass, and showing that preparations had long since been made to stand a siege on the land side.

The main fortifications consist of a chain of forts about 800 yards apart, connected by deep entrenchments, and extending for seven miles. Our loss in the assault to-day (22nd) was about 2,000. It was the opinion that another general assault upon the Confederate works would not be ordered, but that the city would be taken by regular siege approaches.

The Gazette has advices up to the 27th of May, through a staff officer of Gen. Grant's Generals, who left for Washington last evening. Three assaults had been made upon the Confederate stronghold by our forces, in all of which we were repulsed. The last assault was made by General Sherman with 10,000 men in which we lost 600 killed and a large number wounded. Our outer line is within 130 yards of the Cofederate works. Our sharpshooters prevent the Confederates from working their guns. The Confederate works in the rear of the city are far more formidable than those in front Gen. Joe Johnson with about 15,000 men is in the neighborhood of Jackson short of provisions and ammunition. No serious apprehensions are felt of any attack in our rear.

The staff officers say that Gen. Grant has taken 8,400 prisoners and 84 pieces of cannon.

Louisville, June 1.—A special despatch to the Journal, from Murfreesboro on the 30th of May, says that Gen. Marmaduke is reported to have captured Helena, Arkansas and a regiment of negro soldiers, who, together with the the white officers commanding them, he hung.

Where shall we find a parallel in history for the exquisite Cartier? There is only one man in modern times worthy to be compared to him. Newcastle was the Cartier of his day; Cartier is the Canadian Newcastle. We do not, of course, mean the present noble Secretary for the Colonies, but the minister of the last century, Horace Walpole's Duke of Newcastle, as he may be called from the graphic description given of him by the writer. The Duke was not burthened with knowledge; neither is Cartier. The Duke was continually saying or doing something foolish or intemperate—either in or out of Parliament; so is Cartier. Both were, for many years, in office, and the wonder was and is how in so utterly destitute of every qualification deemed necessary for the management of public affairs, could be long tolerated at the head of the Government in countries possessing free institutions. So it was, however, and the secret in both cases was the same. Both Newcastle and Cartier ruled by means of bribery and corruption. Let who might be the leader of the House of Commons, or conduct the foreign policy of England, let it be Chatham or let it be Pelham, or any body else, the purse must be in the hands of the Duke of Newcastle, the secret service money at his disposal, and no other must interfere with the purchase of constituencies, boroughs, and members of Parliament. This was to his Grace, the alpha and omega, the beginning and the end, of statesmanship; and beyond it he had neither the capacity nor the wish to see or act. So was it also with our Newcastle: Mr. George Etienne Cartier, with a certainty that was instinct rather than reason, discovered at once the bribeable man in either House of the Provincial Parliament. One wanted a bridge to be built, which would aid greatly to the value of his property; he saw Mr. Cartier; the bridge was erected at the public expense, and the Government got a partisan, or at least a vote. Another member was anxious that a contemplated road should pass in a certain direction; he suddenly discovered that his old friends of the opposition were wrong and the ministry were right, on the question he had hit herto denounced; and the things were made pleasant in the small affair of the new road. It was strange, too, what an acquaintance Mr. Cartier had with the genealogy of members of parliament and other political personages, as well as all who were connected with them. Was there a son or a nephew, or any relative, of a person having an adverse or doubtful vote at his disposal, out of employment, or in want of a sinecure; Mr. Cartier ascertained the fact; the son, or nephew, or other relative found himself comfortably provided for by the country, and Mr. Cartier and the ministry received, in due course, the reward of their liberality exactly in the manner they expected. In short, Mr. Cartier's government in Canada, like the old Duke of Newcastle's government in England, lived, moved and had its being in corruption; and as the one is no longer possible in the mother country, it is to be hoped that, in future, the other is equally impossible here.

We intended to point out the resemblance between another of our statesmen and a celebrated historical character, but we must defer the task for another occasion. Mr. Galt and George Law, the famous founder of the Mississippi Company, ought not to be forgotten when "historical parallels" are to vogue.—Quebec Mercury.

A Mare's Nest!—Smart people are easily known by the facilities with which they detect all kinds of errors, and by the happy knack which they possess of making merry over what they deem the shortcomings of their neighbours; but these smart people, in their anxiety to appear knowing, occasionally get beyond their depth, as did one Elgin contemporary the other day by the following:—"In a churchyard, in a quiet country parish near Elgin, a gravestone is to be seen, the inscription on which says, it was erected by a widow 'in memory of her beloved spruse!'" Perhaps some kind friend will give our learned brother a look of dictionary, that he may make himself acquainted with the meaning of the word "scouse." "Certainly curious mis-

The Censorship.

One of the most curious chapters of the war when it comes to be written, will prove to be that which tells of the censorship over the news established at Washington, under the control of that most extraordinary of war ministers, Edwin M. Stanton. It will tell the whole story of the management of the war by the present administration; it will tell the blunders and corruptions. Lies have been invented and propagated without any apparent object, the sick, wounded and dying have been refused communication with their homes, corrections of falsehoods have not been permitted, important items have been suppressed, and good news withheld, all without motive or object so far as the newspapers interested can understand. That the news has been used for speculative purposes by high civil and military functionaries is believed by those most familiar with the facts. Bogus news sent from the army and Washington, and good news withheld, can only be accounted for on the theory that the stock list is tampered with by those in side the ring.

It is idle to complain of this matter at headquarters. Mr. Lincoln can, or will, do nothing. He is good-natured enough in furnishing what war news there is to the newspaper correspondents; but Stanton pays not the slightest regard to his wishes—nay, his express commands—and peremptorily stops despatches from going over the wires which have had the approval of the President.

There of course is no help for this state of things just yet. The newspapers and the public must bear it for a time. But we predict they will be even with Mr. Stanton in time they get through with him.—N. Y. World.

—Archbishop (R. C.) Cullen, of Dublin, has issued a pastoral letter to the clergy in his diocese condemning freemasonry, and instructing them to forbid their parishioners to countenance in any way meetings of the institution. The confessors are directed "to exact a distinct promise from the penitents that they will not repeat a similar transgression in future." Rebandmen are warned by the archbishop that they must share the fate of freemasons if they do not give up their secret societies. He says: "The members of riband lodges and dangerous and condemned brotherhoods, and those who encourage and promote them, incur a reservation in this diocese, and are to be treated in the same way as freemasons."—In defference to all religion, he affirms, after Pope Benedict XIV., is a necessary consequence of their meetings, and he suggests that the reason of their secrecy is that their deeds are those of darkness."—*N. Educational Column.

"Knowledge is Power."

☞ All Communications must be addressed, (post-paid) "Educational Column," box 329 Peterborough

Teachers should feel a deep interest in Educational matters. They obtain their livelihood by it; into their hands in a great degree its destinies are committed; and the blessings it imparts are very much under their control. They can aid the parents and friends of education, to carry out the provisions of the law in its favour, or thwart the best intentions of both. The Teacher, too, should be alive to its advantages, and zealously use every means to be tow them on every one in the land. To fit himself for doing so, no opportunity of improving himself should be lost, for thus only can he be prepared to discharge the duties of his profession. The drone who idles away the time he should be storing his mind with knowledge,—thus laying up daily stores of things new and old to supply the continual demands that are likely to be made upon him —is utterly unfit to be a Teacher, and should never be recognized as such, for he thus leaves himself unprepared to discharge the duties of teacher to the benefit of either his pupils, or of the Commonwealth. Is it not ominous of future evil when we see the guides of our youth lounging in the bar-room or groggery, swallowing the obscenity and oaths of the characters that meet at such places? But, is it not worse to see them indulge in the accursed howl itself and revel and riot with the drunken Bacchanals?—often glorying that they can get drunk or fat it alone. We are glad to say there are few, comparatively speaking, who thus disgrace the noble calling. Yet there are some who are better known at the tavern than at k rk, and we think the sooner they are removed from the situation of teaching the better; their example is not good, and we know no man can reprobate that which he patronises freely. The Teacher, therefore, for his own sake, if not on moral grounds, should be above frequenting those dens of moral corruption, that, like the maclarva, destroy all that breathe their polluted air. Trustees and parents should unite such; Ministers, Boards of Education and Superintendents should discountenance these traffics by not allowing any one who patronises them to engage in a profession that, above all others, should be in the hands of men that teach morality both by precept and example.

Teachers should attend Conventions or Assoc ns as when they are in their reach. How few know too much? May we not say, how few know enough? The Teacher can never know too much. How rarely is it that he knows enough. If any one however, has an over stock, a Convention gives him an opportunity of doing good by imparting of his fulness to others. But on other grounds the Teacher should attend Conventions. Ours is a new country; we are just entering on existence as it were; no system of education can yet be perfect; should not Teachers meet to discuss means for perfection. The system that may be prevailing amongst us? Is it not an evident token of want of interest in educational matters when those engaged in teaching never meet to consider or discuss existing evils, or make an effort to remove those evils, and we venture to assert that those Teachers who keep away from Teachers' Associations know so little that they are afraid of betraying their lack of knowledge and prefer remaining unknown rather than be found out. Trustees would do well to enquire whether their Teacher attends Conventions from time to time; if not they may rest assured there is some thing wrong.

Teachers should know more than they are required to teach. The one who does not will be poorly fitted to impart instruction to his pupils. It is often necessary in teaching to use varied examples to enforce the principles or exhibit the meaning of a Rule so as to render the Rule or principle plain to the youthful mind, now it is a simple axiom: that the greater produces most, and the less least. Is this not true with Teachers? Hence we justly infer that the Teacher who knows little will impart little. No man can tell what he never knew—how few can impart all they do know? None! If this is so may we not assert, when the Masters knows little the pupils know less. Because of this fact we have often found boys praised in one school, on being removed to another were not, the parents became dissatisfied and blame the new Teacher (for all blame is heaped on the Teacher,) and yet the only reason assignable is, that in the first school the standard was low, and the boy could easily arrive at it; in the second the standard was high, hence not so easily attainable; by the first Teacher the boy was praised for his attainments, by the second he was not praised his attainments being little above mediocrity. Thus the boy becomes a new character with the new Teacher often, for every Teacher measures a boy's attainments by his own, and if his bushel is small we may expect light weight.

We repeat it again, every Teacher should know more than he is required to teach. His measure should be pressed down, heaped up, flowing over.

Learning by Note.

The following passage from the Churchman's Family Magazine is an example of the effects of the system of teaching by loading the memory, without developing the mental faculties:

Being engaged one day in examing a parish school, I asked the teacher what part of the Scriptures had been read during the week, and found that the history of Samuel had been the subject of instruction. The children were admirably versed in the history. Apparently, they knew as much about it as I did—perhaps a little more, for they knew all the dates, a branch of knowledge which always has been beyond my grasp. After hearing the dates of the various events given with wonderful accuracy I happened to ask the girl at the head of the class how long ago it was since Samuel was alive. She could not tell, nor could any of them. Blank silence fell on all, and I was completely brought to a stand still. The children were evidently as much puzzled as myself, and it suddenly struck me that, though they had learned the dates so perfectly, they had not attached the least meaning to 'B. C.' A few more questions made this point certain; and wishing to give them some notion of the real meaning of dates I asked, by way of an absurdity, "Is Samuel alive now?"

"Yes, sir! yes, sir!" responded on every side, and the children looked quite pleased, abstractions. Still more taken aback, I asked how they knew he was alive and they one and all declared that they had seen him last year. I asked what his appearance was, but got very contradictory answers, but all agreeing that he wore a coat and a hat, and was a very nice gentleman.

It was a hopeless business, and I yielded the point.

However, the mystery was solved that afternoon. Waiting till the school was closed, I took the evening prayers and then came upon a clue to this extraordinary mase. After asking a blessing upon the school, the parish, and the clergy, especial mention was made of "SAMUEL, our Bishop." A light flashed across me; and on questioning the children afterwards, I found that they had actually identified the Samuel of the Bible with the respected prelate who now rules the diocese of Oxford.

To the Free and Independent
ELECTORS
OF THE
COUNTY OF PETERBOROUGH,

GENTLEMEN,

Once more in the course of events you are called upon to exercise one of the privileges due to you as freemen, that of choosing a person to represent you in the Legislative Assembly of this Province.

An invitation so general as the one I have received, is fitting me to accept the honoured post of your representative, coming as I observe it does from persons of all shades in politics, is a convincing proof in my mind that the electors of the County have a greater desire to see its resources developed than the time of the country taken up in the unprofitable discussion of political theories.

It is fitting, therefore, that I should say to you that the same principles, and the same course of action, which I laid down for my guide on former occasions are those by which I shall continue to be guided while I have the honor of a seat in the Legislature.

As a Canadian strongly imbued with feelings of loyalty and attachment to the British Crown and Government, my first great duty will be to insist upon immediate and ample provision being made for the defences of the country.

My views upon Representation by Population are patent to every elector, and it is unnecessary for me to do more than to say, they are unchanged.

I shall also insist upon Retrenchment in the Public Expenditure, and will oppose any such expenditure without the consent of Parliament.

I shall, if elected, use every proper means to encourage Imigration, and insist upon the construction of Roads, and the settlement of the country in rear of us.

I am in favour of such an adjustment of the Tariff between this Country and the United States of America, as will place the Manufacturer and Agriculturist, of this Province, upon a footing of equality with the same class of persons in that Country.

I am, more than ever impressed with the importance of our local position, and the great natural resources of our County which if properly developed, will serve to place Peterboro', foremost among Canadian Towns.

Respecting the course I may pursue in the Legislature; I have only to say that—I shall enter Parliament unpledged, independent of party, and at liberty to take such course thereafter, as in my judgement —tempered with moderation—the interest of the country demands.

I shall endeavor before the day of nomination to visit you in your respective localities, and address you upon the state of the country, at which time also I shall be able to give you more fully than could be done in a printed address, my views upon the leading questions now before the country.

I have the honor to be,
Gentlemen,
Very faithfully yours,
W. S. CONGER.

CONSULT
THE OLD ENGLISH PHYSICIANS
FOR
ASTHMA, INCIPIENT CONSUMPTION,
Infirmities of Youth and Old Age,
&c., &c.
NO MERCURY USED.

Dr. Amos & Son,
48 EAST GENESSEE STREET,
BUFFALO, N. Y.

ARE the only Physicians in the State who are members of the Royal College of Surgeons, London.

May be consulted from 8 o'clock in the morning, until 9 at night, in every stage and symptom of Disease.

The treatment they adopt is the result of upwards of thirty years' extensive and successful practice in London.

A most Scientific Invention

An instrument for the cure of general Debility, or Nocturnal Emissions, more properly known as Seminal Weakness, &c. These complaints can be permanently cured in from fifteen days to two months by the use of this Instrument, when used conjointly with medicines.

Dr. AMOS & SON, in order to satisfy the most skeptical as to the merits of this Instrument, pledge themselves that in any instance where it may prove unsatisfactory after a fair trial, the money will be refunded by returning the instrument in good order. Price Ten Dollars, by mail or express.

YOUNG MEN TAKE PARTICULAR NOTICE

Those who have injured themselves by a certain practice indulged in when alone—a habit frequently learned from evil companions, or at school, the effects of which are nightly felt even when asleep, and if not cured, renders marriage impossible and destroys both mind and body, should apply immediately. Self abuse is one of the most formidable enemies to health, for nothing else in the dire catalogue of human diseases causes so destructive a drain upon the human system, drawing its thousands of victims through a few years of suffering down to an untimely grave. It destroys the nervous system rapidly, wastes away the energies of life, causes mental derangement, prevents the proper development of the system, disqualifies for marriage, society, business, and all earthly happiness, and leaves the sufferer wrecked in body and mind, predisposed to consumption and a train of evils more to be dreaded than death itself.

PERSONS IN ANY PART OF THE WORLD may be successfully treated by forwarding a correct detail of their cases.

Address Dr. AMOS & SON, 48 East Genesee Street, three doors West of Ellicott Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

THE BRITISH AMERICAN

A MONTHLY MAGAZINE DEVOTED TO

Literature, Science and Art.

NOTWITHSTANDING the repeated attempts which have been made in Canada to establish a Monthly Magazine devoted to Literature and Science it is nevertheless apparent, that success has not been the reward of those who have engaged in the undertaking.

The Canadian Institute at Toronto, the Natural History Society of Montreal, the Literary and Historical Society of Quebec, aided by the Government grants they enjoy, regularly publish their proceedings, and thus occupy to a greater or less extent, the several fields which from the special objects of their incorporation. But the public at large are still unsupplied with a periodical Magazine devoted to general Literature of Canadian origin and growth, and to Science divested of unattractive technicalities and adapted to the requirements of those who do not profess familiarity with its sterner details.

It is the design of the originators of the British American Magazine to occupy this vacant field, and endeavor to satisfy a want which is so generally felt to exist.

In maturing the plan of a new periodical, it is desirable to supply the public with some guarantee of its character and prospects. It is therefore determined to request intending contributers to permit their names to be published in the prospectus, as among those who are willing, not only to give it countenance and support, but to add to its vitality by contributing to its pages. It is also thought advisable to publish the names of those who are willing and anxious to encourage the undertaking by a liberal subscription to the first number.

Many of the difficulties which have impeded the progress, and ultimately led to the abandonment of a Monthly periodical, of like in general design to the British American Magazine, have disappeared, with the advance of the country in population, wealth and civilization—hence the originators commence their labors with far brighter expectations than their predecessors could have enjoyed, and they anticipate, without doubt or distrust, the successful progress of the undertaking.

The aim of the British American Magazine is to encourage British American Literature, to offer an opportunity long desired by many for giving public and permanent expression to their thoughts, to foster a taste for literary pursuits, to prevent the marvels of Science in its plain language, easily understood by all, to supply a monthly abstract of whatever is interesting and valuable in the periodical literature of Great Britain, and a brief resume of the progress of Literature, Science, Industry and Art, throughout North British America.

It will be within the province of the Magazine to furnish critical notices of new publications, unfettered by prejudice, nationality, or religious bias: and while political discussion of a party character will be absolutely excluded from its pages, set descriptive articles relating to our home institutions, affecting the general interests of the country, will be freely admitted.

Each monthly issue will contain one hundred and twelve pages, of the same size as the English Monthlies, which will form at the close of the year two volumes containing 672 pages each.

The publishers hope to be able to commence their issue in April next, and from the success which has already attended their efforts to procure subscribers, they anticipate that they will be able to present the British American Magazine with a subscription list amounting to 10,000 copies for the first number.

Terms $3 per annum, in advance.

EMPLOYMENT.

THE Undersigned has, for several years past, been engaged in a business, which has yielded him at the rate of three thousand dollars per annum, and is now willing to teach it to others. The business is of a highly useful and general character, adapted both to cities and villages, and one that any person of ordinary capacity, young or old, male or female, can acquire with a few hours' practice, and by which they can secure a very handsome income. Several young ladies who have received instructions from me, both in New York State and Pennsylvania, are earning upwards of $15 per week by it, and there is no reason why any one else cannot do the same. Invalids, even, can do well by it, as it is no peddling affair, but a business that is perfectly respectable. Gentleman and ladies of leisure who would like to learn the business for their own amusement or pleasure, will find the practice of it a pleasant pastime, and one that they will take great interest in. On receipt of $1, I will send printed instructions by which any person can readily acquire the art, and these instructions will also contain every particular relative to the carrying it on so that it will be highly profitable. The purchaser of the "printed instructions" will also be authorized to teach it to others, and I have sometimes received as high as $200, for teaching it personally to a single individual. I would state further that $7.50 or $3 will buy everything that is necessary to commence the business with, and the articles can be got almost anywhere, in city or country, or if preferred, I can furnish them. Address ALVORD T. PARSONS, No. 36 Liberty St., New York.

THE WORLD.

AN INDEPENDENT

Daily, Weekly and Semi-Weekly

NEWSPAPER.

IN soliciting for another year a continuance and increase of the favor which in so short a period has given to the World its present rank among American journals—a circulation, business patronage, and influence equalled by other journals only after the effort of many years—we renew to our old and new subscribers the promise that no labor nor expense will be spared to make the World what it aims to be,

The Best Newspaper in America.

In politics, now as ever, the World is independent but never neutral. Its only creed is a national one—of which are the corner stones.

The Union, the Constitution, and the Laws, and Freedom of Speech, of the Press, of Political Discussion and Action

The political events of the past year have notably demonstrated the need of an able, fearless outspoken, first-class

Conservative Journal,

in the commercial metropolis of the country, which shall give constant, bold and vigorous utterance to the conservative sentiments of the best men and the honest masses of the nation Opposing every enemy to

The Union,

whether armed in rebellion at the South, or insidiously planting the seeds of disunion at the North.

Opposing every violation of the Constitution,

the only bond and hope of union, the only ground upon which we can exhort and compel the allegiance of the South:

Opposing every infraction of

The Laws,

in high places or in low, believing that obedience to Law is service to God:

Opposing every violation of the

Freedom of Speech, of the Press, of Political Discussion and Action,

by whomsoever those violations are committed, whether by the executive in its

Arbitrary, Illegal, and Unjust Arrests.

its refusal of the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus, its denial of the rights and liberties of citizens, its arrest without warrant, its imprisonments without trial, its abrogation of state and federal laws, its illegal proclamation of an empty emancipation, or whether those violations are committed by the party in power, its orators and its presses, advocating measures which must sunder the Union for the sake of destroying slavery, and denouncing treason against all their political opponents.

Loyal to the government always, it will give to the administration a hearty and vigorous support whenever and wherever the administration itself is loyal to the bond, the principles, and the purity of the government.

The World will oppose all compromises which would barter away or divide the Union, for which alone the North is waging war; it will oppose peace itself, till the success of the war secures the permanence of peace, and will urge the prosecution of the war with an economy which has not hitherto governed its expenditures, and a vigor which the nation during a year has prayed for in vain.

The same care will be exercised over the columns of the World to exclude everything which could offend a pure, Christian morality, and recourse will always be had to the same high principles as well to guard its columns as to guide its judgments of men and events.

All the News

will be found in the columns of the World from the various departments of human activity,

Political, Agricultural, and Commercial, as well as in Literature, Science and Art.

New Publications, Inventions, Discoveries, and Works of Art will receive the same careful and thorough attention.

The latest and most important news from London, Paris, Turin, Rome, Syria, China, California, Japan, Egypt, and South America, our correspondents will send to us.

Our correspondents are attached to the various divisions of the army; will accompany them wherever they go, and by the free use of the telegraph and the mails, present in the columns of the World

A Complete History of the War,

from day to day, and from month to month.

In the Weekly and Semi-Weekly editions of the World, especially, large space will be given to

Agriculture,

and to all departments of

Manufacturing and Mechanical Industry.

The Weekly World will contain an admirable serial story during the current year

THE DAILY WORLD.

The Daily World is the most complete Commercial and News Paper published in America. Besides as full telegraph news, war correspondence, and foreign news, &c, as any two cent daily, it contains also much fuller commercial news. Its Ship News, Produce, and Cattle Market reports, Foreign and Domestic Importations, Stock Lists, and Commercial news, no business man can do without.

TERMS (INVARIABLE IN ADVANCE):

One copy for one year, $8.

Four copies for one year, $30.

For a club of ten copies an extra copy will be sent for one year.

THE SEMI-WEEKLY WORLD.

The Semi-Weekly World is a large quarto sheet, same size as the daily, containing all its news, correspondence, miscellany and editorials, its commercial and market news, and entertaining selections and miscellaneous reading. Its cattle market and provision reports make it highly valuable to every farmer.

FINKLE & LYON

SEWING MACHINE COMPANY,

538 Broadway, New York.

TWO particulars acquainted with the Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machines the careful perusal of the Company's Circular is specially commended. This circular can be had on application. Its very specific, and will be found highly instructive, having been prepared with much care and we will abide by all statements therein made.

The following brief quotation is characteristic of the entire Circular:

"This Machine is better adapted than any other Sewing Machine in market to the frequent changes and almost endless variety of sewing required in a family: for it will sew from one to twenty thicknesses of Marseilles without stopping, and make every stitch perfect. Will sew from the finest gauze to the heaviest cloth, and even the stoutest harness leather, without changing the feed needle or tension, or making any adjustment of machine whatever."

Thus have we successfully overcome the most difficult point in the Sewing Machine art. It was no ordinary triumph. Distantly can we now say, "No other Machine compares with it in this respect." Hence, have we uniformly—almost without exception—taken the highest premium, wherever the Machine has been properly exhibited in competition with other first class Sewing Machines. Hence it is that we are able to offer the following guarantee, viz.:

"We warrant every Machine we sell to give BETTER satisfaction than any other Sewing Machine in the market, or money refunded." We never sell a Machine on any other terms. The guarantee is so reliable as the note of any business man in the land. For more than five years have we relied upon such facts for the reputation of our Machine; and without a single travelling agent in the field, there is scarcely a neighbor

Poetry.

A Mother waiting for the News.

BY DAVID M. MENABIN.

How wearily the hours pass
Since through the ambient air,
The lightnings flashed the startling fact,
A battle had been there—
There, where my noble honest boy
The path of fame pursues;
But ah! my aching heart will burst,
While waiting for the news.

Wounded upon that gory field,
Forsaken he may die:
No mother there to wet his lips,
Nor raise his hopes on high:
Disfigured, stained, his features marred
By many a scar and bruise;
Ah! who can tell what mothers feel
While waiting for the news.

Ye wise men who have made this war
To make all mankind free,
Oh! know ye not this boy of mine
Was all the world to me?
If he is gone, what have I left—
What comfort can I choose?
A mother's heart condemns your deeds,
While waiting for the news.

If I am wrong, oh God! forgive
This throbbing heart and brain,
But who can justify their aims
If my poor boy is slain?
Yet those whose sons are safe at home,
May take far different views,
And cry aloud "more blood, more blood!"
O God! send me good news.

Miscellaneous.

Some details of the Vicksburg Siege.

New York, June 5.—A special despatch to the Herald says:—Despatches have been received directly from Gen. Grant's army dated the 28th, 29th, 30th and 31st ult. They mention the progress of the siege, but say nothing of any assault since the 22nd, nor of any battle since the 25th, which was not very heavy. The troops are represented as being in fine health and spirits. There was no immediate pressure on Gen. Grant's rear.

A Fairfax Court House despatch of the 4th states that Gen. Mosby's men made a small attack on our relief pickets in the morning, wounding one man. Col. Gray with four squadrons of cavalry, started in pursuit, capturing a Confederate surgeon.

The Urbana correspondent of the Herald, writing on the 3rd inst., says that Col. Kilpatrick, with two regiments of cavalry, reached Urbana on the 1st from their late raid. At Saluda they captured the colors of the 12th Virginia infantry, and scoured the country around that place for ten miles, capturing horses, mules, carriages and slaves. Occasional skirmishes were had with the Confederate guerrillas on the route, but there was no fighting of magnitude.

A letter from Stuart was intercepted, stating that he would be in Middlesex county on Sunday, to stop the Yankee raids.

Among the prisoners captured at Kilpatrick were Captain Brown, 5th Virginia cavalry and guerilla Colonel E. P. Jones. Only one of our men was wounded. Urbana wharf was found to have been burned.—Transports, under convoy of gunboats, conveyed them across. A small force of infantry on the transports gobbled about 1000 contrabands between Yorktown and the Rappahannock, also 300 horses and mules, and depleted the Confederate granaries. The house of John Currie, blockade runner, about four miles from the river, was searched by an expedition from the gunboats, and four men, two Confederate flags, $10,000 in North and South Carolina bank notes, and Pacific railroad bonds were captured. Another house was also searched below Urbana, where large quantities of shovels, crockery, &c., destined for Richmond, were captured These expeditions were made by Acting Master Stred of the gunboat Primrose.

All the out-buildings connected with Stevens' battery machine shop were destroyed by fire last night, during which there were five explosions of powder and shells. A clerk named Arnold had the top of his head blown off by one of the shells, instantly killing him.

A letter from near Vicksburg, dated the 24th ult, to the Herald says that our situation was then unchanged. Gen. Carr had captured and held an important work on the left of the railroad during the whole day, but was completely overpowered and compelled to retire. The 23rd Iowa planted its colors on the Confederate ramparts, Col. Stone all day requesting aid, when, after keeping their colors there all that day, and after every man of the regiment who entered the fort in the morning had been killed or wounded, except the Lieutenant Colonel and fifteen men, they were captured and taken into Vicksburg. The storming of the works cost us 2,000 in killed and wounded. The place is now besieged. Our skirmishers are so efficient that the enemy has no chance to work his guns, and our batteries pour in a murderous fire night and day. The Confederates, during the night, manage to place cotton bales around the embrasures which are destroyed during the day. The Confederates are constructing a new line of works between the outer line now opposed to us and the city. In the recent charge the 22nd Iowa lost 250 men. Stevenson's brigade 260. Ransom's 358, Carr's 500, Blair's division 550, Street's 600, Osterhaus' 200, and Smith's 350.—To-day (24th) there has been a vigorous cannonading along the right and left.

The Times' despatch states that a party of contrabands from Culpepper arrived at Union Mills yesterday, and report that three Confederate brigades had arrived at Culpepper a few days since from the Rappahannock, saying they were going to Richmond. The bridge over the Rapidan has been rebuilt and trains pass over the road from Culpepper to Richmond via Gordonsville.

Surgeon Wood telegraphs that the wounded at Vicksburg are being removed rapidly to hospitals at Memphis.

Large quantities of ice and other comforts are forwarded from St. Louis.

The Times' correspondent with Colonel Especial pains to capture this command, and while Confederate citizens had destroyed the bridges over the Dragon river, Stuart with a large force was waiting at a ford some six miles further up, to force them to cross at a narrow place, but our pioneers built a bridge, over which our forces crossed without difficulty, and then destroyed it. A letter from Stuart, captured in a Confederate mail, was directed to a guerrilla Colonel, who was superseded by Colonel Davis, and captured in his own house. The citizens of the country through which Kilpatrick went expressed themselves pleased with the conduct of our men.

The result of the raid is that a complete circuit was made of the Confederate army, the destruction of millions of dollars worth of Confederate property and material, the capture of hundreds of horses and mules, 40 wagon loads of provisions, 1,000 contrabands, and the demoralization of the blacks throughout the whole country.

Nashville, June 5.—The news from Franklin up to two o'clock to-day is that Colonel Bairel, commanding the garrison, was attacked by 1,200 Confederate cavalry yesterday, and drove his forces back into their entrenchments; they rallied, however, and repulsed the enemy with heavy loss to the latter.

Simultaneously an attack was made upon the forces at Triune. They were repulsed with a loss of 200 men, 400 horses and a lot of camp and garrison equipage.

Cairo, June 5th.—The despatch boat General Lyon, from Vicksburg on Monday night has arrived. Firing was kept up all Monday. Sherman's troops on the right wing could be seen in motion when the Lyon left. At midnight a conflagration was going on in the city, which some supposed our shells had set, others the Confederates were destroying their supplies preparatory to surrendering. General Grant's numbers and position will be absolutely impregnable in a few days. We cannot give particulars, but they are of a most cheering character. The steamers Chancellor and Atlantic, loaded with troops, when near Island No. 62, on Wednesday, were fired on by guerillas from the Mississipi shore, and one captain and two privates killed, and several were wounded.

Too good to be Lost.

"Old Abe," who presides at the National White House, is very fond of a good joke, and is in the habit of telling them greatly to the amusement, and not unfrequently at the expense of his most particular friends. We have heard one, lately, which we think will turn the tables upon the President. The conversation is said to have occurred between an old Illinois farmer and a member of Congress from this State, at Willard's hotel, in Washington City.

Mr R., the member, was in one of the sitting rooms of the hotel, quietly puffing his cigar and reading the New York Herald, when he was approached by a rough, burley, middle-aged man and the following dialogue is said to have occurred between them:

I. F. Sir, to make free, I understand you are a member of Congress from the great State of Missouri.

Mr. R.—You are correctly informed, sir; I represent the ——Congressional District in that State.

I. F.—I am from Illinois sir; am in Washington City on no particular business—just looking round a little, to see how the "cat jumps"

M. R.—I am glad to know you, sir; Illinois and Missouri ought to be good friends, and I shall be most happy to serve you in any way that I can.

I. F.—Well, sir, I don't want anything, except just to see this d—d infernal rebellion put downerly nearly ruined us out West; I have already lost one son and I would not be surprised if I lost them all before the war is over, for they are all in it; several of them with that brave fellow, John Logan.

Mr. R.—Sir, you have my earnest sympathies, both in your desire to see the rebellion crushed and in the severe loss you have met in the death of your son. I hope the Government will finally triumph in the wicked war which has been forced upon it.

I. F.—Are you much acquainted in Illinois? Do you know Browning, and if so what do you think of him?

M. R.—I know Mr. Browning very well, sir, I think very highly of him. He is a good man, sir, and one of the first Statesmen of the country.

I. F.—Well, sir, are you acquainted with "old Dick" he's been the representative in Congress for a long while.

Mr. R.—You allude I suppose, sir, to Col. Dick Richardson, of Quincy.

I. F.—He's the b'hoy, sir, what do you think of him?

Mr. R.—Well, sir, I think Col. R. is a patriotic and good man, a little too much steeped in Democracy.

I. F.—Never mind his Democracy, that will never hurt him, not half so much as the mean whiskey he drinks. I tell you Dick's a glorious fellow; I like to hear him after that miraculous genius, Trumbull, who I 'spose wears as small a gizzard as any man who ever entered the Senate. After all tho' my friend Stephen A. was the man, he could take the "starch" out of any of them, and if he had lived, sir, I belive this infernal rebellion would have been over.

Mr. R.—Very likely, sir; Mr. Douglas was a noble man, he would have exerted a vast influence if he had lived, over the fate of our unhappy country.

I. F.—Well, sir, do you know "old Abe?"

Mr. R.—I have that honor, sir.

I. F.—Well, I don't consider there is much honor about it, but I'd just like to know what you think of him?

Mr. R.—Well, sir, I am inclined to think well of the President, I believe he loves his country, sir. He is surrounded by great difficulties and is doing the best he can to surmount them. He is frequently persuaded to do things which I think his better judgment does not approve. I believe he

I. F.—Well my friend, I see "Abe" has rather taken you in. I know him a derlish sight better than most men, I have known him "like a book" for nearly thirty-five years. I knew him when he was a rail splitter, and I tell you he never did an honest day's work at the business in his life. If he had a hundred rails to hew he always got them from somebody else's pile! I knew him when he was a grocery keeper and he always kept bad whiskey, cut a fellow's dram short, and charged too prices. With some folks Lincoln has the reputatation of being very honest and not very smart; but I tell you, sir, he's d——n smart and none too honest? (Somewhat excited and the crowd gathering round). I tell you, sir, I know "Abe" like a book, sir, and, by the eternal what I say is true!

Mr. R.—(Somewhat confused)—Sir, I was just about taking a mint julip, will you have the kindness to join me?

I. F.—If you are tired of talking, with all my heart, sir. Missouri and Illinois must stand together, sir. I tell you by the shades of old Hickory and Benton, they must work and fight for the old Union. Missouri and Illinois are the greatest States in the Union, sir. If they'll stand together breast to breast, they can knock h-ll out of South Carolina and the whole south, and then, if need be, turn round and shovel New England into the ocean.

Sounding Niagara River.

The gentleman who has been trying the experiment of Sounding the river below Niagara Falls, writes as follows:—"Another attempt was made with a similar iron about 10 pounds weight, attached to a number 11 wire, all freely suspended so as not to impede the fall of the weight. I then let the weight fall from the bridge, a height of 225 feet. It struck the surface fairly, with the point down—must have sunk to some depth, but was not longer out of sight than one second, when it made its appearance again on the surface, about 100 feet down the stream, and skipped along like a chip until it was checked by the wire. We then commenced hauling in slowly, which made the iron bounce like a ball, when a cake of ice struck it and ended the sport. I am satisfied that no metal has sufficient specific gravity to pierce that current at a momentum acquired by a fall of 225 feet. The velocity of the iron, when striking, must have been equal 124 feet per second, and consequently its momentum near 5,000 pounds. Its surface opposed to the current was about fifty superficial inches. This will give an idea of the strength of that current, and at the same time hint at the Titan forces that have been at work to scoop out the bed of Niagara river."

Six Reasons for Supporting the Present Government.

Parliament is dissolved, and the writs are issued for another election, returnable by the first of July. This will be the means of bringing the whole question before the people at once, as to the claims of the two parties now going to the polls. The Cartier-Macdonald party are in favor of expending $800,000 a year on the Militia. The present Reform Government are in favor of expending only $200,000 a year.

This is one reason why we support the Reform Government.

The Cartier-Macdonald party, when in power, were guilty of gross jobbing and wasteful expenditure in the Ottawa contracts, involving the Province in the expenditure of millions of dollars more than should be inverted in the Parliament buildings. All this the Reform party opposed, and the present Reform Government is now engaged in investigating the gross jobs in order to lessen, so far as possible, the expense of completing the buildings, and exposing the speculations of their predecessors.

This is another reason why we support the Reform Government.

Galt, Cartier, and John A. Mcdonald, smuggled $100,000 out of the Provincial chest, and gave it to the city of Montreal. The money is now lost to the Province and can never be recovered. The Cartier Government kept it concealed for three years. The present Reform Government brought it to light.

This is a third reason why we support the present Government.

John A. Macdonald declares himself in favor of retaining useless officials in office, at high salaries. The present Reform Government have dismissed useless officers, which, with other retrenchments, have saved to the country six hundred thousand dollars in one year.

This is the fourth reason why we support the Reform Government.

Cartier, John A. Macdonald, and their party in the House, by a Lower Canadian majority, refused to grant the supplies to carry on the ordinary affairs of the country, a step treasonable in its character, and unheard in the practice of the British House of Commons.

This is the fifth reason why we support the Reform Government.

Cartier, John A. Macdonald and Galt hope, by this treasonable conduct, to force themselves into power, where they might stop the investigations going on into their gross jobs, speculations and extravagance of their eight years of corruption rule.

This makes six very good reasons why we are opposed to the corruptionist party, in favor of the Reform Government now in power.—Markham Economist.

THE GOOD TIMES HAVE COME AT LAST.—And so has that which has hitherto been longed for in vain, namely, a medicine that could be relied upon for curing rheumatism, colds, coughs, neuralgia, the doulloureux, burns and frost bites, bowel complaints, &c. It is called the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," and every one should really possess a bottle of it without delay. It gives relief the moment you apply it, and will effectually cure your disease; in fact it is the most wonderful medicine ever

Sensible Advice

Some people are forever sighing over glorious dreams forever fled, grandeur and happiness passed away; pining for the return of hours gone by. If they would but spend the hours time wasted, in some useful occupation for mind and body, they would be far happier, and would not have little time to think of those scenes long since passed away, and numbered with the "used to be." They then look hopefully to the future, and life would then be a pleasant journey.

This life is in a great measure, what we make it. If we are hopeful and cheerful, cares and disappointments fail to annoy us; for we are ever looking to the future for brighter days. If we are despanding and gloomy, every little ripple upon the stream of life seems to us a mighty wave, and we look, expect, and are really disappointed if we fail to see dark clouds fill life's blue sky and a heavy storm arise.

Cheerfulness, hopefulness, charity, and contentment are safeguards against all the petty annoyances of this life. Let us ever cherish then—and when the death summons comes, we can meet our Heavenly Father with the consciousness of a well-spent life on earth.

Courtship of a Bashful Clergyman.

The Rev. John Brown of Haddington, the well known author of the "Self-interpreting Bible," was a man of bashfulness. In token of the truth of this statement, it need only be stated that his courtship lasted seven years. Six years and a half had passed away, and the reverend gentleman had got no further than he had been the first six days. This state of things was intolerable. A step in advance must be made, and Mr. Brown summoned all his courage for the deed. "Janet," said he, as they sat down in solemn silence, "we've been acquainted now for six years an' mair, and ne'er gotten a kiss yet. D'ye think I might take one, my bonny girl?" "Just as you like John, only be becoming and proper wi' it." "Surely, Janet we'll ask a blessing." The blessing was asked, the kiss taken, and the worthy divine, perfectly overpowered with the blissful sensation, most raptuously exclaimed: "Oh, woman, but it is guid! We'll return thanks." Six months made the pious couple man and wife, and added his descendant, who humorously told the tale, a happier couple never spent a long and useful life together.

THE ISSUES.

As the time draws near for the votes to be given for the representatives in Parliament, the excitement increases—and the friends of the various candidates become active in their efforts to secure the return of the men of their choice. The issues of the present struggle consist in simply this, shall the present Administration be maintained in power, or shall they be driven from it. All other questions are side issues, and may be entertained by the present or any other set of men. The former distinctions which divide parties are well nigh obliterated; and although we have Conservatives and Reformers, our chief aim is either to sustain our respective leaders in ruling the country. The all important questions now to be solved by the people is, or should be, which party will manage most economically and honestly the finances of the country? To whom shall we trust the custody and expenditure of the public moneys? The present Government when founded, gave a distinct pledge of economy and retrenchment. We believe they have manifested as strict a regard to fulfil this, as they could have done. We are well aware that they have been denounced and traduced as failing in redeeming this pledge. The upholders of the former extravagant and corrupt Administration have been incessant in denouncing their retrenchment and economy a sham But the charge is easier made than proved—and we are satisfied it cannot be successfully sustained. One thing is certain, the Coalition, during their 8 years of rule, increased our public debt most fearfully—raised taxation 100 per cent., and never once during their whole term, that we remember, advocated economy. So prodigal have they been of the revenue of the country that for years there has been yearly a large deficiency, which has gone on increasing from year to year. They have inflicted alarming burdens upon the people without any adequate return—and yet they are desirous to get back to power, and their friends are anxious to reinstate them there again. May Heaven avert such a calamity.

WEST BRANT.

The contest here is between Rev. Mr. Ryerson, Conservative, and a Mr. Wood, Reformer, the latter being likely to allow the superannuated Clergyman to remain at home to look after his farming.

The Brantford Courier, a thorough tory Journal advocates the return of Mr. Ryerson, and thus alludes to him in a defence of certain charges made in the Brant Expositor.

"When his failing health and strength compelled him to resign the active duties of nearly forty years continuance, he retired to spend the evening of his day in the quiet pursuit of agriculture, where he was found and solicited by successive deputations of his neighbors and acquaintances, without distinction of party, to represent the West Riding of Brant in Parliament."

We never yet came across a parallel case to this—a man for 40 years a preacher—when his failing health and strength compel him to resign his active duties "as a clergyman"—he retires to spend the evening of life in the quiet pursuit of agriculture"—yet quite competent to endure the wear and tear of a legislator. Either Mr. Ryerson's retiring or remaining free from the active duties of his calling as a minister was wrong or in entering political life in the "evening" of his life a pretty clear proof that he has parted with his first love of the great work of preaching the gospel. Alas poor man may be he will see his error before he dies. A christian education is better than a British education—and to teach men how to become "fellow citizens of the saints and of the household of God,' of far more importance than all the fus about "British connection." A humiliating picture surely to see an old man, so far astray from first principles in preferring to be a politician, to an ambassador of Christ.

VALLANDIGHAM.

A short time ago we noticed the arrest and banishment of this individual, after a sort of court martial trial. It appears that a large body of the Northern people denounce the conduct of the Federal Government in the manner in which it has disposed of this case. A large meeting was held in Philadelphia last week, at which speeches were made and resolutions passed condemnatory of the arrest, trial, and banishment of Mr. Vallandigham. It is said that nearly ten thousand persons were present, and the most cordial unanimity prevailed. A meeting of a similar nature was held in Buffalo at which 5000 persons were present.

As we do not remember to have come across the precise charges preferred against this individual we are not in a position to give an opinion as to whether he is a martyr to free speech and liberty, which the above gatherings emphatically say that he is; at the same time the fact of such large bodies of men—and among them men of standing and influence—denouncing the government for unconstitutional procedure in this case, incline us to think that there is ground for the complaint. Then again Mr. Vallandigham is a candidate for Governor for the State of Ohio at the fall elections, and one would suppose that a thorough loyal State like Ohio would never tolerate a Governor tainted with disloyalty. The true state of the case may possibly be that Mr. Vallandigham and his sympathisers are Democrats, or, as they are designated, "Copperheads," and as such opposed to the Lincoln Administration, and so party feeling finds vent sometimes in improper denunciations and improper arrests. It is easy to raise the cry of disloyalty, but it is sometimes difficult to prove it. For want of something

VICTORIA NOMINATION.

SHOW OF HANDS 6 TO 1 IN FAVOR OF DUNSFORD.

The nomination of Candidates to represent the County of Victoria, took place in front of the Court House, on Monday last, at noon.

The Sheriff having invited the Candidates, movers and seconders, magistrates and members of the Press to the Hustings, he read the Writ and then requested the people to nominate the candidates.

The following candidates were then nominated:—J. W. Dunsford, Esq., Hon S. Smith, P. McHugh, Esq, H. Cameron, Esq., T. Paxton, Esq., Mr. Best of Emily, and the Hon. Wm. McDougall, Mr. Cottingham then nominated one Mr. Reynolds but finding no seconder his proposal was withdrawn.

Mr. Dunsford gave a resume of his career in Parliament, and delivered an able speech, occupying an hours duration.

Mr. Smith addressed the meeting for an hour, his speech had no favorable effect on his audience, as they doubted his random statements.

Mr. McHugh spoke at some length in favor of Mr. Dunsford, showing clearly that the Electors of Victoria would find it their duty to choose him in preference to Mr. Smith.

Mr. H. Cameron opposed both Administrations, and tried to show that a Government of his creation would be just the thing for Canada.

Mr. Best spoke strongly in support of Mr. Dunsford and the present administration.

The Hon. Wm. McDougall attacked Mr. Smith with great vigor and telling effect, exposing the conduct of the Cartier-McDonald administration, and successfully defending the McDonald-Sicotte ministry.

The Sheriff then called for a show of hands, when a majority was declared for Mr. Dunsford, which declaration was received with much cheering. There were about 1500 persons present, and only about 100 hands could be counted in favor of Mr. Smith. The best conduct was maintained by the people throughout the days proceedings, which lasted for over five hours.

The show of hands may or may not be a presage of victory or defeat, but such odds in favour of the local candidate may well cause the late Post Master General to quake. That desperate efforts will be made to secure his return we verily believe. This is with him the last cast of the political die. If he gains he hopes to be something again; if he loses this election his political prospects are blasted. Yet we are of opinion that the electors of Victoria would do himself the greatest good by sending him home to Peterborough. He does better at home in his business than he does in Parliament, and we trust the good people of Victoria will think with us that in electing Mr. Dunsford as their representative in Parliament their interests and the interests of the country are in safer hands than in Mr. Smith's.

Three cheers being given for the Queen, the Hon. Wm. McDougall and Mr. Dunsford, the meeting quietly dispersed.

EAST DURHAM NOMINATION.

On Tuesday last, the nomination of Candidates for the Representation of the County of East Durham took place at the Village of Milbrook.

The Returning officer having read the Writ, John Shutter Smith and Francis Henry Burton, Esquires were then nominated.

Mr. Smith first addressed the audience in a lengthy and able speech, shouring up the late John A. McDonald ministry to perfection, and at the same time using up Mr. Barton so that he had nothing to say in his defence, but commenced with a tirade of abuse on his opponent.

At the close of the speeches a division of the assemblage was called for by the returning officer, but he was unable to decide as the crowd was equally divided; each candidate demanded a poll.

There were about 2000 persons present. The best of good feeling prevailed thrughout.

Three cheers were called for the Queen by Mr. Smith, three times three were then given for Mr. Smith, which ended the proceedings of the day.

The Untruthfulness of the "Review."

The Editor of the Review, either anxious to vent against the present Administration all the vituperation possible to be pent up in so small a man, or anxious, like the "quack doctor" in Merryatt's celebrated tale of "Japhet in search of a Father," to show off his great knowledge of the Latin Grammar, in noticing passing events in the untruthful manner so peculiar to the organ, makes some very grave and some very amusing mistakes; for instance we find him in an article headed "Volunteers Disbanding," telling the public on Friday morning that Capt. Smith's Company had adjourned their drill sine die. They have done no such thing, nor was the meeting, at which the resolution to meet on the first Friday of every month was carried, held until that (Friday) evening—the evening after the publication of their paper. Where did the Review get its bogus information?

The Editor is strongly condemning the Government for throwing a damper on the Volunteer movement, at the same time, by artfully pretending to sympathize with the Company, takes the opportunity to give as hopeless an aspect to the case as possible, and eagerly hastening to publish the bad news, then does all in his power to break up at least one of the Companies. We must have a more convincing proof before we can believe a "bombastic" profession of loyalty.

THE SHIP CANAL CONVENTION.

We publish to-day an account of the gathering at Chicago, for discussing the propriety of connecting the great Lakes with the Mississippi, and of enlarging the canals already in existence so as to admit of the passage of gun-boats, and a larger class of vessels for the transport of produce and merchandise. The project is indeed a grand one, and if completed will revolutionise the traffic of the great West. The cost is enormous, $17,000,000, but in view of the immense benefits it is probable it will be undertaken, and completed at no very distant day. There is every reason to suppose that Canada will be a gainer by this great work. The great object in the transportation of produce is the reduction of the cost in transit. Vessels loaded at the ports of the Mississippi or Ohio will find their way to the St. Lawrence, and from there to Europe or elsewhere, in which case our canals will become very profitable Whilst large quantities of western produce will be forwarded by the Erie and Oswego Canals to New York, we may look for a larger quantity descending by the St. Lawrence to the Ocean.

We inserted last week, a letter written from Peterborough to the Toronto Mirror, on the affair of the 47th March last. Our object was to correct the statement relative to the conduct of our worthy Mayor upon that memorable day. In the first place, this writer states a positive untruth, when he says that the Mayor "demanded the proprietor of the hotel to turn out the man who had taken refuge in his house." The men outside—the Orangemen—said that one of their party was in the house, and that he forgot it, for there it is staring him in the face in black and white,—and it was not possible for him to copy the resolution from the minute book and not see it.—It was left out, no doubt, because Mr. Haggart at the special meeting very candidly told them that he would have nothing to do with a committee that could be so mean as to go on working, in the face of a resolution brought in by Mr. Wrighton, —in the voting for which the committee had the majority of 12 or 16 against them, —and Mr. McNaughton, afraid lest in giving Mr. Haggart's name such a pleasing circumstance should come to light, left it out. This is the man that would "babble" about truth, common decency, and call another's veracity into question, thus to show himself so blissfully ignorant even of the nature of truth as to be totally incapable of copying a simple resolution truthfully, word for word, although they stare him in the face. Mr. McNaughton should be ashamed of himself; a man of his size, age, and appearance, living under the immediate influence of Gospel light and liberty, living in such an enlightened age as the nineteenth century, mixing with the respectable people of our good Town, thus to disgrace it and himself for the sake of venting his petty jealousy, by such a mean, nasty, dirty lie.

So is his statement false in regard to my apologizing for language used at a meeting; I apologized only for using one word "sneaking," as applied to all the Committee. Even supposing I did apologise for all I had said, can that justify Mr. McNaughton's act of savage ignorance in ridiculing me for doing so?

The statement that I was without a "single follower" is so audaciously untrue as to become actually ridiculous, for how could I be alone when I was standing among his own party at the time the vote was taken, or how could I vote for the amendment if I was not among his party, from whom it emanated?—if Mr McNaughton considers his party as nobodies, as he certainly says, surely I am not to blame.

I appeal to the public, if Mr. McNaughton can in one case so tamper with the resolutions, so often equivocate, is he not capable of doing so again? Most certainly. Such is the man we have had to deal with, and such are instances of the nonsensical, untruthful, dirty, quibbling conduct we have had to put up with. And yet Mr. McNaughton would talk about Fools and Liars, when we have him such a fool as to call another "fool," when he is himself, so arrogantly foolish that he presumingly penetrates the almost sacred future, and impertinently defines what would be the position of an institution! If Mr. McNaughton is a Prophet, or has any claim to one, then I will say no more, but surely if Mr. McNaughton is a good Prophet, or under any inspiration, he could not equivocate; if a Prophet is it not a sin for him to hide his light behind a counter, and empty tea chests? Surely he cannot be one and yet so ignorant of the fact that "no Prophet is without honour except in his own country," as to remain in Town and feel hurt: if we do not appreciate him. He cannot surely be one of the kind that is to come to us in sheep's clothing, for he would be more likely to come in a garb peculiar to an animal with long ears! But that he is a Prophet of one kind or other there is no getting over, for he tells us so himself when he prophesies. Alas! I am afraid we must class him as a false one, for I suppose we judge Prophets like other beings by their actions, and our Prophet has prevericated so often already that there is no course left but to set him down as a false one. But supposing you say that he is not a Prophet but an ordinary mortal, what are we to think when he begins to Prophesy? Just that he is a crazy, good-natured, simple little fellow, as we all know him to be, and that because he had the felicity to take a prominent part in the management of an institution in Montreal, which came tumbling down about his ears in such a manner that he has never got over it since, consequently imagines such is to be the case with every other institution.

But really, Mr. Editor, I have encroached too much upon your valuable space already. If Mr. McNaughton will take advice from one so little and so young, in comparison with himself, I would tell him to have a greater regard for truth, copy the resolution more carefully, give up childishly behaving, and I shall be spared the painful necessity of again exposing his failings to the public of our good little city.

Communications.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—Should I, in answering Mr. D. McNaughton's communication, choose to imitate the low and scurrilous style he has adopted, and ridicule his noble form, great stature, refined tastes, elegant manners, personal appearance and great social position, no one could but say I would then have a splendid field for operation; and I feel confident that I could work upon a soil —altho' so very "uncultivated"—in such a manner that the seeds of civilization I would now there would be followed by many good results, but I find that the soil is not only void of any good qualification but actually so worthless that it would be a waste of time to try and make it bring forth what it is utterly incapable of producing. The very fact that Mr. McNaughton had to resort to personal abuse, instead of refuting any of the statements I made, shows that he could not face the music and in an ordinary manner argue the matter out

I do not care one straw how many letters Mr. McNaughton may write, he cannot do away with the fact that he and his party were wrong. My intention is now to lay before the public one or two more facts, but before doing so I must convict Mr. McNaughton of being guilty of a gross equivocation, a studied falsehood, in deliberately leaving out the name of Mr. D. Haggart in the resolution he gives as

"Moved by J. J. Lundy, seconded by A. Stewart,—That the Captain, J O'Donnell, W. H. Ward, T. Campbell, Captain Bradbeer and J. J. Lundy, be a committee to arrange a style of summer uniform, whose decision shall be final, and report the same to the next meeting.—Carried unanimously"

This he gives as the resolution copied from the books, but it is not the one, for the original distinctly contains the name of Mr. D Haggart. The books can prove what I say to be true. Mr. McNaughton can offer no excuse, or palliate the misdemeanor in any way, by arguing that he did not know that Mr. H. was a committeeman, or that it was because he resigned afterwards, or that he forgot it, for there it is staring him in the face in black and white,—and it was not possible for him to copy the resolution from the minute book and not see it.—It was left out, no doubt, because Mr. Haggart at the special meeting very candidly told them that he would have nothing to do with a committee that could be so mean as to go on working, in the face of a resolution brought in by Mr. Wrighton, —in the voting for which the committee had the majority of 12 or 16 against them, —and Mr. McNaughton, afraid lest in giving Mr. Haggart's name such a pleasing circumstance should come to light, left it out. So is his statement false in regard to my apologizing for language used at a meeting; I apologized only for using one word "sneaking," as applied to all the Committee. Even supposing I did apologise for all I had said, can that justify Mr. McNaughton's act of savage ignorance in ridiculing me for doing so?

THE WEATHER AND CROPS.—Since the rain of last week the weather has been cool up to Tuesday, but there was no frost. Since then we have had warm fine weather, and the crops under the influence of moisture and heat have made rapid progress.—The Fall Wheat around this is superb; not a solitary murmur have we heard, the universal answer to the query "how is the fall wheat" is "never was better." The only drawback we hear of is the grub; in gardens and in some fields the damage done by it is great,—nevertheless the general prospect of an abundant crop is good.

The River is falling, and lumbermen are hurrying on with their cribs. A large quantity of timber will be got to market this season, notwithstanding a good deal is left behind in small streams. The bulk of that for market this year has left this.—Nearly all the Saw Mill men have got out some logs, but not their usual quantity.

We inserted a communication some time ago, over the signature of "Truth," which we regret having done, as it was too personal and scurrilous. Its admission in our columns was an oversight. It has brought upon us the condign rebuke of Mr. Dickson, whose reply to "Truth" we were in duty bound to insert. Having thus eaten "humble pie," we trust, in future, to avoid such strictly private and personal recriminations, as both communications we are sorry to say contained.

☞ For want of space the questions on Military matters are crowded out.

Owing to want of space Mr. Gilbert's Communication, we regret to say, had to be considerably curtailed.

The Quarter Sessions for the month of June are now sitting; we will give a full report next week.

A great principle. The principle of electricity lay locked beyond the reach of science for long centuries. Indeed at this day it is but indefinitely comprehended; and it is even doubtful whether it is condonable to pursue a research in occult science which may never be attained by any beneficial results to mankind; but the principle which actuates a man to purchase a bottle of Dewar' Elixir and Henry's Liniment and present them to his wife and family, is one which should excite our warmest admiration. The Armies on the Rappahannock.

The Falmouth correspondent of the N. Y. Tribune, writing on the 28th, says:—

"Your correspondent has just returned from the front picket line along the Rappahannock, opposite Fredericksburg. Quietness prevailed. There is nothing now to disturb the monotony of Picket life, or to ruffle the turgid waters of the Rappahannock. The rebels were manœuvring a few battalions of infantry on the plains of Fredericksburg, and their pickets were treading quietly along the wharf of that deserted city. The seven miles of fortifications were deserted, and quietness, like the silence in the valley and shadow of death, reigned supreme. I called to the rebel sentinel and asked him for the last paper. He mumbled over an unintelligent answer, and again paced up and down the deserted wharf—The pickers of both armies are now only separted by the river, and conversation frequently occur. Yesterday a rebel swam over with a Richmond paper and returned with several of our newspapers."

BALLOON UP FROM THE LACY HOUSE.

"The balloon went up from the vicinity of the Lacy House yesterday, and remained most of the forenoon. A thorough view was had of the rebel lines beyond Fredericksburg. Several camps of the enemy had disappeared, and there were indications that the rebels had removed some of their forces, either up the river or sent them West.—The fact that the rebels in the West have been reinforced by a portion of the Army of Virginia is discussed and believed by many here. I gave this opinion in my letter of Tuesday."

STRENGTH OF THE CONFEDERATE ARMY.

The following editorial from the Richmond Whig, of May 21, confirms the reports that an invasion of the North is contemplated by the Confederates, and that Lee has been reinforced since the Chancellorsville battle:

"A cotemporary informs us that there are now in the Confederate service from 600,000 to 650,000 effective men. This intelligence is equally startling and agreeable. It would have added to the stunning effect of this pleasant surprise if a tabular statement of the present locality of these 650,000 effective men had been given. A third of them is, doubtless, with Lee, having reached him just after the late battles.—Another third is with Johnston and Pemberton, who appear, however, to have hidden them away for strategic purposes. The rest are in Louisiana, reposing after their easy victory over the handful of men under Banks. On all sides the greatest paucity of Yankees is seen. Why, then, do not our armies carry the war into the Northern States, and why is not the Conscription Bureau, which has completed its work so handsomely, closed, and its clerks and officers returned to the field.

"In reply to these interrogatories a skeptic would say that it is doubtful whether the Confederacy could boast the half of 650,000 effective men in the field. He would add that the Conscription Bureau, so far from having completed its work, had scarcely begun it. The skeptic might go further and declare that there were now in the Confederacy at least 100,000 men who have escaped conscription by the merest pretext.

"The chief of the Conscription Bureau, has done all perhaps that his limited means enable him to do. But every member of Congress, every influential citizen, every surgeon and every weak-hearted and soft-headed enrolling officer have been in conspiracy against him Any man who wants to keep out of the army, or to get out after he is in, can get certificates and recommendations without and from the best and highest men in the land. How can a poor conscript general war against these? The only cure for this state of things is a public opinion which will drive men, especially young men—hospital rats and skulkers in the country—into the field. But nothing but this or the fall of Vicksburg and Richmond will arouse this public opinion."

The Future of Our Cotton Mills.

There are in the cotton factories of the Northern States 4,745,730 spindles. Of these 3,252,040 were stopped June 1st, 1862, and 1,463,750 were in operation. In the following month the number of spindles in operation was reduced to 1,200,000—about twenty-five per cent of the total.

The consumption of cotton in the last named month was only 426 bales of 460 pounds each per day, against a total capacity of 2,666 of such bales per day.

Mr. Edward Atkinson, from whose report to the Boston Board of Trade on the Cotton Manufacture of 1862 we quoted yester ay, remarks: "But the large decrease in the operations of the cotton mills has not caused distress among the operatives; enlistments in the army and the demand for mechanics in the government workshops having given employment of men, while the activity of the manufacture of woollen goods, shoes and clothing has occupied the women; so that in Lowell, where the proportional stoppage has been the least, from the Mills being nearly all on heavy goods, the deposits in the savings banks have largely increased during the year."

This is a most gratifying fact; not only because we rejoice in the well-doing of our fellows, but because we see, in this readiness with which a free people help themselves and turn from one employment to another, additional proofs of the great benefits of a thoroughly free condition of society.

Mr. Atkinson shows that the capitalists whose mills have stopped lose heavily. He gives an account of a corporation with a capital of $600,000) which, owning two mills of 15,000 spindles each, not in operation, is at an expense, aside from the depreciation on machinery lying idle, of over $49,00 a year

In the spring of 1861 we had in the United States about five million spindles, and all were needed—there was no surplus. Population was increasing at the rate of one million a year, and it is estimated that each million requires about 225,000 spindles. It is not probable that there will be any material increase in the number of spindles during the four years following January, 1861; whereas in eight ten will replace a part of the loss of the war, and our population will increase at least three millions in four years. Thus it would appear that the cotton manufacturers of this country will have their hands full for some years after 1865.

Dear cotton will affect our manufacturers less than the English, because their peculiar market in the East demands chiefly light, fine goods; while the wages of labor in the East are so low (not more than from four to ten cents per day), that it makes a great difference to the people whether the price of cotton cloth is six pence or twelve pence per yard. Our manufacturers have for customers, on the contrary, the American people—a great population, receiving high wages—to whom an increase of from two to RETURNED SOLDIERS PUNISHING A COPPERHEAD.—The Syracuse (N. Y.) Journal says an exciting affair took place on Tuesday evening at Shumpike a small station on the Central road, a short distance West of Auburn. When the train coming the Twenty-sixth regiment reached there the station keeper in the performance of his duties appeared wearing a copperhead badge on his coat, in plain sight.

This display of treasonable sentiment in the midst of a loyal community was more than human nature could endure to outdo his discretion got very small, and starting for his house, declared that he would get his pistol and shoot his assailants. Upon this some two hundred of the soldiers surrounded the house, smashed in the windows and doors and nearly demolished the structure. They would have severely handled the misguided copperhead had not he made haste to escape by a back door. The conductor of the train on hearing of the occurrence, hurried up the departure of the train.

GREAT INCREASE OF EMIGRATION.—The number of emigrants arriving here weekly says the New York Journal of Commerce, from Europe are far surpassing all expectations. Every emigrant ship brings from 300 to 600 passengers. Castle Garden begins to wear the business air of better days. What becomes of the sturdy fellows who are thus pouring in upon us may readily be seen by reference to the recruit of the Garden. The small agriculturists and farm laborers are all bound for the West—that mine of exhaustless wealth to the European mind—and the mechanics and artisans are settling down in the city or vicinity, or distributing themselves in manufacturing towns along the railways A few—and but a few apparently—have come here with the intention of enlisting. The reports that American officers have been drumming on recruits in Ireland or Germany are quite as much news to the emigrants as to the American Government and people.

It is noticeable and amusing that many of our cotemporaries, on the other side of the line 45, announce that Vicksburg has not been taken, under the heading "The Capture of Vicksburg."

Competition in Education.

Competition is like camomile, the more you tread it, the more you spread it; and like camomile, its appetite-creating qualities are acknowledged even by those to whose taste it is most disagreeable.

Competition is no new element in civilization. It is coeval with the fall of man, or to use a colloquial phrase, it is "as old as Adam." The great Serpent proved the subtlety of his knowledge of human nature when he alluringly said, "Ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil." The principle of competition, whether recognized as emulation or rivalry, or any other cognate influence, appears to be inherent to man. It develops itself in every age, in every clime, in every place of human existence. In proportion to its development is the rapidity of the march of intellect. Our children's children will probably date a new period in arts and science from the era of the great Exhibition of 1851. We are but climbing circuitously and slowly the lofty mountain, from the summit of which their surely will be taken. On nothing has competition had greater and more decided influence than on education, in the conventional sense of the term, because we attribute every advance in civilization primarily to education.

Educationists in all ages have recognized the advantage of competition, and the more they have evoked it, the more successful been their efforts. But never, perhaps, has competition been more vigorously encouraged as an auxiliary to education than at the present time. It is a primary element in all our educational institutions. Its practical utility is demonstrated in our Universities, and in our ragged Schools. Its influence in the education of the masses has been incalculable.—English Journal of Education.

Moral Education of Children.

At present, mothers and fathers are mostly considered by their offspring as friend-enemies. Determined as their impressions are by the treatment they receive; and oscillating, as that treatment does, between brute force and thwarting, between petting and scolding, between gentleness and the big stick, children necessarily acquire conflicting beliefs respecting the parental character. A mother commonly thinks it quite sufficient to tell her little boy she is his best friend; and assuming that he is in duty bound to believe her concludes that he will forthwith do so. "It is all for your good;" "I know what is proper for you better than you do yourself;" "you are not old enough to understand it now, but when you grow up you will thank me for doing what I do;"—these and like assertions are daily suffering parents pendulous; and it is hourly forbidden to do this, that and the other, which he was anxious to do. By words he hears that his happiness is the end in view; but from accompanying deeds, he habitually receives more or less pain. Utterly incompetent as he is to understand that future which his mother has in view, or how this treatment conduces to the happiness of that future, he judges by results as he feels; and finding these results anything but pleasurable, he becomes sceptical respecting those professions of friendship. And is it not folly to expect any other issue? Must not the child judge by such evidence as he has got? and does not this evidence seem to warrant his conclusion? The mother's motive is just the same way it unfortunately placed. If, in the circle of her acquaintances, she found some one who was constantly thwarting her wishes, uttering sharp reproaches, and occasionally inflicting actual pain it on her, she would pay but little attention to any professions of anxiety for her welfare which accompanied these acts. Why then does she suppose that her boy will conclude otherwise? But how different will be the result if the system we contend for be consistently pursued [illegible] the mother not only avoids becoming the instrument of punishment; but plays the part of a friend, by warning her boy of the punishments which nature will inflict.

In brief, the truth is that unexpensive begets savageness, and gentleness begets gentleness. Children who are unsympathetically treated become relatively unsympathetic; whereas treating them with due fellow-feeling is a means of cultivating their fellowfeeling. With family governments as with political ones, a harsh despotism itself generates a great part of the crimes it has to repress; while conversely a mild and liberal rule not only avoids many causes of dissension, but so ameliorates the tone of feeling as to diminish the tendency to transgression.

St. Catharines Nurseries.

NOTICE.

THE undersigned, JAMES GARDNER, agent for the above nurseries, in returning his sincere thanks to the gentlemen who so liberally patronized him with their orders during his late canvass, begs to inform them and the public generally, that he has resumed canvassing for another delivery and will fill all orders entrusted to him with care and attention.

Having been trained to the Nursery business to all its branches, in the most extensive establishment in Canada, he is enabled to select the most vigorous and healthy which is the great desideratum in filling orders for the public. Being a resident of the county he will, personally, show those who have and may favor him with their orders, how to protect their trees from injury during the Winter and Spring.

TREES, SHRUBS AND PLANTS,

He will also devote the months of February and March to pruning the Trees disposed of by him, and will do his utmost to give every satisfaction to his patrons, and assist in rearing Orchards in the County of Peterborough that will be second to none in the Province.

The following are a few of a number of Certificates which have been sent to me:—

"NORTH DORO, 10th May, 1863.

"I hereby certify that I am well acquainted with Mr James Gardiner, and have known him for some years; and I think he is a person well qualified in his profession, and in every way to be relied on. As agent for Dr. Beadle of St Catherines, his selection of Fruit Trees has given much satisfaction; and I trust he will, as he richly deserves, be well supported I have great satisfaction in bearing testimony to his worth and ability.

"SAMUEL STRICKLAND."

"TO THE PUBLIC.—Having purchased Fruit Trees, Shrubs and Vines this Spring of Mr Jas. Gardner, Agent for Dr Beadle's Nursery, St. Catherines, I have much pleasure in recommending the diff rent productions for which he is solicitin orders—as those sold in this neighborhood gave general satisfaction. Mr. Gardner I have known for some years, and consider him a most trustworthy man; and those who may favor him with orders may have every confidence that they will be filled to their entire satisfaction.

"H. T. STRICKLAND."

"I full concur in the above.

"JAMES HALL, Sheriff."

I have no connection whatever, or acquaintance with either Messrs. Hamilton or Evans. Dr. Beadle, Esq., sole proprietor of the St. Catharines Nurseries repudiates them as his agents. I would caution the public against patronizing men who may or are canvassing the County under false pretences.

The Bank of Montreal.

ANNUAL MEETING.

THE Annual Meeting of the Shareholders of the Bank of Montreal was held at the Banking House in this city yesterday.

Mr. T. B. Anderson, President, in the Chair, Upon the motion of Frederick Griffin, Esq. seconded by Peter Mowat, Esq., the following gentlemen were appointed to act as Scrutineers:

John Greenshields, Esq.,
John Smith, Esq.

After some introductory remarks by the Chairman, the General Manager read the following

REPORT
OF THE DIRECTORS TO THE SHAREHOLDERS AT THEIR FORTY-FIFTH ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING HELD 1st JUNE 1863:

The Directors in again meeting the Shareholders and presenting their forty-fifth annual report accompanied by the usual statement of Assets and Liabilities of the Bank at the close of its financial year regret to announce that the profits of the Bank during the past year have been considerably diminished, and that it has been necessary to encroach upon the rest in order to maintain the customary dividend.

The balance of profit and loss at the last annual meeting amounted to	£56,336 16 11	$33,356 78
Profits of the year, after deducting charges of management and providing for bad and doubtful debts	£71,127 15 0	$319,611 11
	£86,486 14 0	$351,966 89
Amount taken from the rest and added to Profit and Loss Account	£25,000 0 0	$100,000 00
	£120,486 14 0	$451,966 39
Dividend of 4 per cent. paid Dec., 1862	£60,000	$240,000
Dividend of 4 percent. payable 1st June 1863	£60,000	$240,000
Balance remaining at credit of Profit and Loss account	£486 14 0	$1,966 37

The heavy loss sustained in the conversion of the Bank's funds in the United States into gold, the almost entire cessation of business with that country, and the further depreciation in the value of real estate held as security for old debts, have, together with the ordinary business of the year, combined to render the present return unsatisfactory.

The deficient harvest of 1862, and the low prices for agricultural produce, have also had a depressing influence upon the business of the country.

The Directors felt much hesitation in deciding to reduce the Rest, rather than the customary dividend upon the present occasion. They believe that in so deciding they have met the views of the general body of Shareholders.

The Directors recognize the exceptional character of some of the difficulties that have attended the business of banking during the past year. Apart from this, however, the increasing competition for the banking business of the country, has rendered it very difficult to maintain banking profits during the past few years, and the Shareholders will observe that the rest remains where it was in 1856, viz: $700,000 (£175,000 stg.)

The Directors do not think it would be prudent to encroach further upon this fund in order to maintain a dividend of 8 per cent. per annum, and trust that the Shareholders will concur in this opinion.

It was proposed during the last Session of the Legislature to impose a tax of ½ of one per cent per annum on the banking capital employed in the Province, and if this should be adopted hereafter it will have the effect of diminishing to that extent the return to the Shareholders. The concurrent abolition of the present tax upon the amount of notes in circulation in excess of the specie and Government securities held by each Bank, would afford no compensation to this Bank, or others similarly situated, whose reserves have been so large as to exempt them altogether from a tax upon circulation. It would, on the other hand, offer a direct encouragement to an expanded circulation upon limited capital without reference to the maintenance of proper reserves. The measure would also, have the effect of presenting an obstacle to the introduction of banking capital into the Province.

The Directors are unwilling to believe that the proposal would have received the sanction of Parliament, when the effects it was calculated to produce were properly understood.

The Directors have received encouraging reports of the present appearance of the crops throughout the Province, and they are hopeful that with an abundant harvest and the continuance of peaceful relations with the United States, a year of average prosperity may be realised.

T. B. ANDERSON,
President.

To the Free and Independent

ELECTORS

OF THE

COUNTY OF PETERBOROUGH,

GENTLEMEN,

Once more in the course of events you are called upon to exercise one of the privileges due to you as freemen, that of choosing a person to represent you in the Legislative Assembly of this Province.

An invitation so general as the one I have received, inviting me to accept the honoured post of your representative coming as I observe it does from persons of all shades in politics, is a convincing proof to my mind that the electors of the County have a greater desire to see its resources developed than the time of the country taken up in the unprofitable discussion of political theories.

It is fitting, therefore, that I should say to you that the same principles, and the same course of action, which I laid down for my guide on former occasions are those by which I shall continue to be guided while I have the honor of a seat in the Legislature.

As a Canadian strongly imbued with feelings of loyalty and attachment to the British Crown and Government, my first great duty will be to insist upon immediate and ample provision being made for the defences of the country.

My views upon Representation by Population are patent to every elector, and it is unnecessary for me to do more than to say, they are unchanged.

I shall also insist upon Retrenchment in the Public Expenditure, and will oppose any such expenditure without the consent of Parliament.

I shall, if elected, use every proper means to encourage Imigration, and insist upon the construction of Roads, and the settlement of the country in rear of us.

I am in favour of such an adjustment of the Tariff between this Country and the United States of America, as will place the Manufacturer and Agriculturist, of this Province, upon a footing of equality with the same class of persons in that Country.

I am, more than ever impressed with the importance of our local position, and the great natural resources of our County which if properly developed, will serve to place Peterboro', foremost among Canadian Towns.

Respecting the course I may pursue in the Legislature; I have only to say that—I shall enter Parliament unpledged, independent of party, and at liberty to take such course hereafter, as in my judgement—tempered with moderation—the interest of the country demands.

I shall endeavor before the day of nomination to visit you in your respective localities, and address you upon the state of the country, at which time also I shall be able to give you more fully than could be done in a printed address, my views upon the leading questions now before the country.

I have the honor to be,
Gentlemen,
Your faithful servant,
D. E. KENNEDY.

CONSULT THE OLD ENGLISH PHYSICIANS

FOR

ASTHMA, INCIPIENT CONSUMPTION,
Infirmities of Youth and Old Age,
&c, &c.
NO MERCURY USED.

Dr. Amos & Son,

48 EAST GENESSEE STREET,
BUFFALO, N. Y.

ARE the only Physicians in the State who are members of the Royal College of Surgeons, London.

May be consulted from 8 o'clock in the morning, until 9 at night, in every stage and symptom of Disease.

The treatment they adopt is the result of upwards of thirty years' extensive and successful practice in London.

A most Scientific Invention

An instrument for the cure of general Debility, or Nocturnal Emissions, more properly known as Seminal Weakness, &c. These complaints can be permanently cured in from 48 hours to two months by the use of this Instrument, when used conjointly with medicines.

DR. AMOS & SON, in order to satisfy the most skeptical as to the merits of this Instrument, pledge themselves that in any instance where it may prove unsatisfactory after a fair trial, the money will be refunded by returning the instrument in good order. Price Ten Dollars, by mail or express.

YOUNG MEN TAKE PARTICULAR NOTICE

Those who have injured themselves by a certain practice indulged in when alone—a habit frequently learned from evil companions, or at school, the effects of which are nightly felt even when asleep, and, if not cured, renders marriage impossible and destroys both mind and body, should apply immediately. Self abuse by one of the most formidable enemies to health, for nothing else in the [illegible] dire catalogue of human diseases causes so destructive a drain upon the human system, dra[illegible] its thousands of victims through a few [illegible] sufferings down to an untimely grave [illegible]estroys the nervous system rapidly, wastes away the energies of life, causes mental derangement, prevents the proper development of the system, disqualifies for marriage, society, business, and all earthly happiness, and leaves the sufferer wrecked in body and mind, predisposed to consumption and a train of evils more to be dreaded than death itself.

PERSONS IN ANY PART OF THE WORLD may be successfully treated by forwarding a copper detail of their cases.

THE BRITISH AMERICAN

A MONTHLY MAGAZINE DEVOTED TO

Literature, Science and Art.

NOTWITHSTANDING the repeated attempts which have been made in Canada to establish a Monthly Magazine devoted to Literature and Science it is nevertheless apparent, that success has not been the reward of those who have engaged in the undertaking.

The Canadian Institute at Toronto, the Natural History Society of Montreal, the Literary and Historical Society of Quebec, aided by the Government grants they enjoy, regularly publish their proceedings, and thus occupy to a greater or less extent, the several fields which from the special objects of their incorporation. But the public at large are still unsupplied with a periodical Magazine devoted to general Literature of Canadian origin and growth, and to Science divested of unattractive technicalities and adapted to the requirements of those who do not profess familiarity with its sterner details.

It is the design of the originators of the British American Magazine to occupy this vacant field, and endeavor to satisfy a want which is so generally felt to exist.

In maturing the plan of a new periodical, it is desirable to supply the public with some guarantee of its character and prospects. It is therefore determined to request intending contributors to permit their names to be published in the prospectus, as among those who are willing, but not only to give it countenance and support, but to add to its vitality by contributing to its pages. It is also thought advisable to publish the names of those who are willing and anxious to encourage the undertaking by a liberal subscription to the first number.

Many of the difficulties which have impeded the progress, and ultimately led to the abandonment of a Monthly Periodical, at first in general design to the British American Magazine, have disappeared, with the advance of the country in population, wealth and civilization; hence the originators commence their labours with far brighter expectations than their predecessors could have enjoyed, and they anticipate, without doubt or distrust, the successful progress of the undertaking.

The aim of the British American Magazine is to encourage British American Literature, to offer an opportunity long desired by many for giving public and permanent expression to their thoughts, to foster a taste for literary pursuits, to prevent the marvels of Science in fabulous language, easily understood by all, to supply a monthly abstract of whatever is interesting and valuable in the periodical literature of Great Britain, and a brief resume of the progress of Literature, Science, Industry and Art, throughout North British America.

It will be within the province of the Magazine to furnish critical notices of new publications, unfettered by prejudices, nationality, or religious bias; and while political discussion of a party character will be absolutely excluded from its pages, set descriptive articles relating to our home institutions, affecting the general interests of the country, will be freely admitted.

Each monthly issue will contain one hundred and twelve pages, of the same size as the English Monthlies, which will form at the close of the year two volumes containing 672 pages each.

The publishers hope to be able to commence their issue in April next, and from the success which has already attended their efforts to procure subscribers, they anticipate that they will be able to present the British American Magazine with a subscription list amounting to 10,000 copies for the first number.

Terms $3 per annum, in advance.

EMPLOYMENT.

THE Undersigned has, for several years past, been engaged in a business, which has yielded him at the rate of three thousand dollars per annum, and is now willing to teach it to others. The business is of a highly useful and general character, adapted both to cities and villages, and one that any person of ordinary capacity, young or old, male or female, can acquire with a few hours' practice, and by which they can secure a very handsome income in rural or young ladies who have received instructions from me, both in New York State and Pennsylvania, are earning upwards of $16 per week by it, and there is no reason why any one else cannot do the same. Invalids, even, can do well by it, as it is no peddling affair, but a business that is perfectly respectable. Gentlemen and ladies of leisure who would like to learn the business for their own amusement or pleasure, will find the practice of it a pleasant pastime, and one that they will take great interest in. On receipt of $1, I will send printed instructions by which any person can readily acquire the art, and these instructions will also contain every particular relative to the carrying it on so that it will be highly profitable. The purchasers of the "printed instructions" will also be authorized to teach it to others; and I have sometimes received as high as $200, for teaching it personally to a single individual. I would state further that $2.50 or $3 will buy everything that is necessary to commence the business with, and the articles can be got almost anywhere, in city or country, or if preferred, I can furnish them. THE ORIGINAL HOWE SEWING MACHINES.

ESTABLISHED 1865—PERFECTED 63.

RECENT and important improvements having been put to this Machine, renders it now the most perfect before the public, and persons at a distance can order a Machine with a guarantee of its prompt and safe delivery, and that they will be able to manage it to their entire satisfaction. No more breaking needles. No more missing stitches! No trouble in making any garment, however delicate or heavy, on the same Machine, either in cambric, cloth or leather; and for dress makers, shirt makers, tailors, hat binders, shoe binders, or gaiter fitting, as well as every variety of family sewing, they have no superiors, and will be sold at a much less price than any other machine capable of doing the same range of work.

THE WORLD.

AN INDEPENDENT

Daily, Weekly and Semi-Weekly NEWSPAPER.

IN soliciting for another year a continuance and increase of the favor which in so short a period has given to the World its present rank among American journals—a circulation, business patronage and influence equalled by other journals only after the effort of many years—we renew to our old and new subscribers the promise that no labor nor expense will be spared to make the World what it aims to be,

The Best Newspaper in America.

In politics, now as ever, the World is independent but never neutral. Its only creed is a national one—of which are the corner stones.

The Union, the Constitution, and the Laws, and Freedom of Speech, of the Press, of Political Discussion and Action

The political events of the past year have notably demonstrated the need of enable, fearless outspoken, first-class

Conservative Journal,

in the commercial metropolis of the country, which shall give constant, bold and vigorous utterance to the conservative sentiments of the best men and the honest masses of the nation. Opposing every enemy to

The Union,

whether armed in rebellion at the South, or insidiously planting the seeds of disunion at the North.

Opposing every violation of the Constitution,

the only bond and hope of union, the only ground upon which we can exhort and compel the allegiance of the South.

Opposing every infraction of

The Laws,

in high places or in low, believing that obedience to Law is service to God:

Opposing every violation of the

Freedom of Speech, of the Press, of Political Discussion and Action,

by whomsoever those violations are committed, whether by the executive in its

Arbitrary, Illegal, and Unjust Acts

its refusal of the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus, its denial of the rights and liberties of citizens, its arrest without warrant, its imprisonments without trial, its abrogation of state and federal laws, its illegal proclamation of an empty emancipation, or whether those violations are committed by the party in power, its orators and its presses, advocating measures which must sunder the Union for the sake of destroying slavery, and denouncing treason against all their political opponents.

Loyal to the government always, it will give to the administration a hearty and vigorous support whenever and wherever the administration itself is loyal to the bond, the principles, and the purity of the government.

The World will oppose all compromises which would barter away or divide the Union, for which alone the North is waging war; it will oppose peace itself, till the success of the war assures the permanence of peace, and will urge the prosecution of the war with an economy which has not hitherto governed its expenditures, and a vigor which the nation during a year has prayed for in vain.

The same care will be exercised over the columns of the World to exclude everything which could offend a pure, Christian morality, and recourse will always be had to the same high principles as well to guard its columns as to guide its judgment of men and events.

All the News

will be found in the columns of the World from the various departments of human activity,

Political, Agricultural, and Commercial, as well as in Literature, Science and Art.

New Publications, Inventions, Discoveries, and Works of Art will receive the same careful and thorough attention.

The latest and most important news from London, Paris, Turin, Rome, Syria, China, California, Japan, Egypt, and South America, our correspondents will send to us.

Our correspondents are attached to the various divisions of the Army; will accompany them wherever they go, and by the free use of the telegraph and the mails, present in the columns of the World

A Complete History of the War,

from day to day, and from month to month.

In the Weekly and Semi-Weekly editions of the World a specially large space will be given to

Agriculture,

and to all departments of

Manufacturing and Mechanical Industry.

The Weekly World will contain an additional serial story during the current year

THE DAILY WORLD

The Daily World is the most complete Commercial and News Paper published in America. Besides as full telegraph news, war correspondence, and foreign news, &c., as any two cent daily, it contains also much fuller commercial news. Its Ship News, Produce, and Cattle Market reports, Foreign and Domestic Importations, Stock Lists, and Commercial news, no business man can do without.

TERMS (INVARIABLE IN ADVANCE):

One copy for one year, $8.
Four copies for one year, $30.

For a club of ten copies an extra copy will be sent for one year.

THE SEMI-WEEKLY WORLD.

The Semi-Weekly World is a large quarto sheet, same size as the daily, containing all its news, correspondence, miscellany and editorials, its commercial and market news, and its entertaining selections and miscellaneous reading. Its cattle market and provision reports make it highly valuable to every farmer.

FINKLE & LYON SEWING MACHINE COMPANY,

538 Broadway, New York.

TWO parties little acquainted with the Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machines the correct personal of the Company's Circular is specially commended. This circular can be had on application. It is very specific, and will be found highly instructive, having been prepared with much care and we will abide by all statements therein made.

The following brief quotation is characteristic of the entire Circular:

"This Machine is better adapted than any other Sewing Machine in market to the frequent changes and almost endless variety of sewing required in a family; for it will sew from one to twenty thicknesses of Marseilles without stopping, and make every stitch perfect. It will sew from the finest gauze to the harshest cloth, and even the stoutest harness leather, without changing the feed needle or tension, or making any adjustment of machine whatever."

Thus have we successfully overcome the most difficult point in the Sewing Machine art. It was no ordinary triumph. Distinctly can we now say, "No other machine commands with it in the race." It has, we submit by [illegible] without exception—taken the highest premium wherever the Machine has been [illegible] exhibited in competition with other first [illegible] Machines. Hence it is that we [illegible] satisfaction [illegible] other sewing Machine in the market, to whom offered. [illegible] all Machines sold to be [illegible] terms. The guarantee is as reliable as the note of any business man in the land. For more than five years we have relied upon such facts for the reputation of our Machine; not without a single travelling agent in the field, there is scarcely a neighborhood on the continent where the Machine is not favourably known. We prefer such a reputation to one based on mere "talking points," as they are technically called in the trade. Hence we make but one kind of stitch, viz. the lock-stitch, alike on both sides, requiring only one-third the thread of other kinds of stitches.

N. B.—Local Agents wanted in every county throughout the West. ☞ Special inducements offered.

THIS remarkable American remedy is carrying the world by storm. Over five million cases are annually Compounded entirely of Flowers Roots Balsams and Extracts their effect on the human system is a pleasant, effective, and successful Acting directly on the blood, stimulating and fluids of the body, their use is attended with the happiest effects. In sudden attacks of diseases one or two doses almost always cures. In all standing cases of sickness, small doses repeated frequently—as change the system that good health is the result. No change in employment or diet is necessary. They never cause nor require confinement, nothing inside etc. as do many other kinds. They are warranted to give satisfaction, or the money will be refunded. They are considered cheaper, safer, prettier, and in all respects superior to any purgative pill in the world.

☞ The discovery of coating a pill with sugar originated with Dr. Herrick. All others are counterfeits and if used will do harm, and disappointment the sick. Herrick's pills are elegantly put up 50 in a box with a large sheet of directions, and sell for 25 cents a box; 6 boxes for $1.

The Ship Canal Convention.

Chicago, May 30.

The long talked of convention to take into consideration the propriety of uniting the Upper Mississippi with the great Lakes of the Northwest by a ship canal, describe the whole a tention of the Northwest, and as the time for the convention is very near it may interest your readers to know what is being done and what merits are claimed for the proposed work.

PREVIOUS ACTION OF CONGRESS.

As you are aware, a bill was introduced into the last Congress for the purpose of constructing the Ship Canal, appropriating the bonds of the government to the extent of about $13,500,000, redeemable in twenty years, and bearing a four per centum interest per annum, with the pledge of the tolls for the payment of interest accruing, and the ultimate payment of the principal. It was claimed by the friends of the measure that "the issuing of these bonds thus secured, would subserve all the purposes of a direct appropriation, and would command the confidence of capitalists at a time when more than ever there was a redundant capital seeking investment, and that it would not involve the necessity of raising a single dollar by taxation." This proposition failed in Congress by a few votes. The committee on statistics have made an elaborate report upon the trade of the Northwest, and the importance of pushing forward the work as a national, commercial and military necessity. I have availed myself of this comprehensive report to furnish some statistics that have an important bearing upon the question. The report says:

"Two schemes for the accomplishment of this have been brought prominently before the country, and failed only by a few votes to receive the sanction of the thirty-seventh Congress.

1. To make a slack-water navigation of the Illinois and Des Plaines rivers, and to enlarge the present Illinois and Michigan canal to such dimensions as shall admit the passage of gunboats, and of the largest classes of Mississippi steamers, to the lakes.

2. To enlarge the locks of the Erie and Oswego canals of New-York to such dimensions as shall pass an iron-clad gunboat twenty-five feet wide and 200 feet long, and drawing not less than six feet six inches of water.

The cost of construction of the first will be about $13,500,000, and that of the second $3,500,000, detailed estimates of which will be presented to the convention.

THE MISSISSIPPI VALLEY.

The valley of the Mississippi is bounded on the one side by the Alleghanies, and on the other by the Rocky Mountains, embracing a drainage area of the United States. The report divides the Mississippi valley as follows:

The Ohio basin	214,000 square miles
The Upper Mississippi	169,000 square miles
The Missouri	518,000 square miles
Making a total of	901,000 square miles.

The navigable rivers, which are as follows:

Missouri, to near the Great Falls	3,150 miles.
Missouri, above Great Falls to
Three Forks	150 miles.
Osage, to Osceola	200 miles.
Kansas	100 miles.
Big Sioux	75 miles.
Yellowstone	800 miles.
Upper Mississippi, to St. Paul	658 miles.
St. Anthony, to Rank Rapids	80 miles.
Above little falls, to Pokegima Falls	250 miles.
Minnesota, to Patterson's rapids	205 miles.
St. Croix, to St. Croix Falls	60 miles.
Illinois, to La Salle	220 miles.
Ohio, to Pittsburg	975 miles.
Monongahela, to Geneva (slack-water, 4 locks)	91 miles.
Muskingum, to Dresden (slack-water, 8 locks)	100 miles.
Green River, to Bowling Green (slack-water, 5 locks)	186 miles.
Kentucky to Brooklyn (slack-water, 5 locks)	117 miles.
Kanawaha, to Cooley Bridge	100 miles.
Wabash, to Lafayette	335 miles.
Salt, to Shepherdsville	30 miles.
Sandy, to Louisa	25 miles.
Tennessee, to Muscle Shoals	600 miles.
Cumberland, to Burkesville	378 miles.
Total navigation	8,967 miles.

STATISTICS OF THE GREAT LAKES.

The five great lakes, whose commerce will be so materially increased by the proposed work, furnish the following comprehensive table:

	Greatest length Miles.	Greatest breadth Miles.	Area in square miles. Feet.
Superior	355	160	627	32,000
Michigan	320	100	575	22,000
Huron	260	160	578	20,400
Erie	240	80	565	9,600
Ontario	180	35	232	6,300
Total square miles				90,300

COMMERCE OF THE LAKES.

The commerce of these lakes, whose annual value reaches $450,000,000—more than twice the external commerce of the whole country—is carried on by a fleet of 1,043 vessels, of the following classes:

	No.	Tonnage.	Value.
Steamers	143	53,522	$2,190,300
Propellers	234	69,253	3,573,300
Barks	74	33,203	982,900
Brigs	85	24,851	836,200
Schooners	1,068	227,834	8,955,550
Sloops	16	667	14,770
Barges	3	3,719	17,000
Totals	1,643	432,026	$13,237,020

PRODUCTS OF THE NORTHWEST.

I have compiled from reliable sources the following figures, from which the products of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, and Missouri, from 1850 to 1860, will be seen. The resources of those eight states in corn, wheat, oats, rye, and barley was as follows:

	1850.	1860	Increase.
Wheat	44,843,038	80,293,893	48,451,855
Corn	322,208,501	393,289,631	170,081,130
Oats	42,128,731	62,738,901	20,410,170
Rye	7,29,597	3,997,001	3,267,404
Barley	831,507	4,865,741	4,034,244
Totals	369,130,385	539,184,897	244,244,804

In this table I have not included cattle and swine, of which these states produced in 1850.	1860.	Increase.

Swine	8,836,183	11,039,332.	2,503,150
Cattle	4,837,712	7,264,810	2,831,098
Total	13,008,895	18,244,142	5,334,248

To convey, says the report, an adequate idea of the motive power required to distribute this prodigious mass, in its crude state it may be stated that it would employ more than 64,400 locomotives, each hauling 8,500 bushels: and if required to deposit freight at a given depot, a train must arrive oftener than once in seven minutes, by day and by night, throughout every working day of the year. After feeding the existing population, 90 these United States remains a surplus of more than 500,000,000 of bushels to be used as seed for future crops, as food for the domestic animals, and for exportation, either in its bulk state or in a concentrated form, as beef, pork, lard, oil, whiskey, etc. etc. As an evidence of the increase of agricultural products since 1850, consequent on improved crops and an enlarged area of cultivation, your committee would direct attention to the prodigious trade of Chicago for the last four years.

TABLE, SHOWING THE RECEIPTS AT CHICAGO OF THE ARTICLES NAMED FOR THE YEARS 1850-63.

Articles.	1860.	1861.	1862.
Flour, bbls.	716,389	1,070,864	1,060,291
Wheat, bus.	5,020,186	14,471,833	17,875,099
Corn, bush.	5,491,976	12,[illegible]	18,[illegible]

Hogs	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Cattle	114,824	177,101	304,[illegible]

Thus the increase in cereals has been 100-per cent.; in hogs, 400 per cent., and in cattle, 67 per cent.

Results equally marked are shown by the returns of the other lake ports.

The amount of cereals which, in 1862, flowed out of the Upper Mississippi Valley and the region of the lakes en route for the seaboard, was, according to the Buffalo Trade Report, 135,92[illegible]

THE BUFFALO TRADE.

The following figures are taken from the Cincinnati Price Current, showing the number of hogs slaughtered and forwarded:

MINERAL RESOURCES.

The trade of the Lake Superior region alone is estimated at $32,000,000, requiring about two hundred vessels in its transit. The following statistics will be of interest:

AGGREGATE SHIPMENTS OF COPPER FROM LAKE SUPERIOR FROM 1852 TO 1862:

	Tons, lbs	Value
1852	887	$300,450
1853	1,452	500,200
1854	2,300	808,000
1855	2,191	1,437,000
1856	5,120	2,400,100
1857	8,750	3,015,658
1858	5,[illegible]	1,810,000
1859	6,041	1,93[illegible],000
1860	8,814	2,520,000
1861	10,337	3,180,000
1862	16,000	8,000,000

I have thus briefly given you all the more interesting statistics furnished by the committee, as well as some from other sources. They will give the public a comprehensive idea of the vastness of resources of the Northwest, and the necessity of some action being taken not only for the development of the trade of those estates, by opening up easy transportation to the Atlantic seaboard, but its importance as a military movement in enabling the government to use the canal for the passage of vessels of war from the Mississippi and other great rivers of the Southwest to the lakes. Our relations with Great Britain are of such an intricate character that it behoves the government to look well to the protection of her frontier cities along the lakes. Great Britain has complete control of the St. Lawrence, and, by the aid of the canals, can transport her gunboats and iron-clads from the Atlantic to the upper lakes with little or no inconvenience. She is strengthening her forts on the lakes and rivers, and a proposition is seriously urged for constructing an inland canal to connect Lakes Michigan, Superior, and Huron with the Ottawa river; while the Rideau canal, at Kingston, will afford easy transit for vessels to Ontario with a small outlay. She would thus have complete control of the whole chain of lakes in the event of an international war.

THE BRITISH POSSESSIONS.

In discussing the trade of the Northwest and the large increase in its products likely to accrue from a more thorough system of inland navigation, the committee, undoubtedly the press of the country, forget that to the northwest of our territory is a vast fertile territory yet to be developed—a territory capable of producing large supplies of grain and mineral wealth. I refer to the British possessions in the valleys of the Red river and the Saskatchewan, which are known to be very productive. As this vast country is developed an outlet for its products must be had; and it is so situated geographically that that outlet must be through federal territory. Indeed, the British residents there, shut in nearly all the year from any water communication with other British possessions, see where interests point to, and a very large majority of the population have asked the home government to be allowed to throw themselves into the arms of the United States. A few years more will conceive the residents of that vast territory that their interests are so closely allied with the Northwest that they must form a part, and the persistent refusal of the mother country to settle the territory and connect it by rail with Canada, seems to indicate a perfect unconcern as to what may become of their possessions to the northwest of us. I can assure you that this territory is worth looking after, and its trade will add no inconsiderable item to our commerce in the course of time.

AS A NATIONAL WORK.

The committee discuss the reported enlargement of the Illinois canal as a material work, tending to bind together different parts of the Union, and uniting the people by the ties of mutual interests and social connections; and as developing the resources of distant regions, and thereby contributing to the national greatness. As a in the defence of the country, using such a communication as a means of transferring gunboats from one system of waters to another, and of rapidly concentrating them at points widely asunder, thus making a small armament as efficient as a large one, and concludes their report as follows:

In conclusion, your committee would state, that this is an enterprise which, in whatever light it is viewed, ought to command itself to favorable consideration of the country. In its lowest sense, as a mere pecuniary investment, the bonds of the United States, based on the tolls of the canal, would command the confidence of capitalists. As a commercial scheme, it would enhance the value of the public lands, and communicate a stimulous to agriculture cheapen the price of our daily food, and swell to a vast extent our foreign commerce. As a national measure it would establish, between the East and the West, closer commercial and political affiliations, and forge a chain which no convulsion could sever, while as a military system, it would prove the cheapest mode of fortifying a long line of frontier, and of controlling an immense inland navigation. In no other way, in the opinion of the committee, can Congress so effectually, in the language of the Constitution, "provide for the common defence," or "promote the general welfare."

THE PREPARATIONS

for the convention are of the most complete kind. A large tent, secured from Price & Baker at Boston, capable of accomodating 6,000 persons, has been erected on Michigan avenue, at a point easy to access by the Illinois Central and the State street cars. Ample accomodations have been provided at hotels and private houses for the entertainment of guests from a distance, and over $7,700 have been collected by private subscription to defray the expenses of the convention.

The committee anticipate a gathering of 15,000 or 20,000 persons; but I think to this they will be disappointed, as the question does not rest with the delegates at the hands of commercial men which many suspected it would. There is one feature connected with the convention that will be productive of serious trouble. I refer to the manner in which delegates are appointed. The call does not limit the delegates to any particular branch of business men, or to those having a stake in the country. Under it every man in the Union can have a voice even if he is a self-constituted delegate, and has not a cent's interest in the country, or the trade and commerce of the United States; the result will be that if the schemes of the promoters of the convention are likely to be frustrated, Chicago can send in all her citizens and by their votes carry their point in opposition to the wishes of all other parts of the country. Much lukewarmness has been manifested in the details of assembling the convention, and many believe that it will be powerless for good. Let us hope however, that the object of the convention will be carried out in good faith, and due courtesy be paid to the wishes of the eastern cities. Milwaukee sends one hundred delegates to oppose the movement, and report says that St. Louis will throw in her fortunes with that city, and, if possible defeat the measure.

About five delegates from all points have arrived up to the time of writing, and every train brings in additions. The New York state delegates have nearly all arrived. Among those from your city new here are General Wadsworth, Hon. Mr. Ruggles, Hon. Mr. Depew, Hon. J. A. King, William S. Rice, S. E. Brown, and Collector Barney.

Vice-President Hamlin and Governor Washington are in the city.

OTHER CONVENTIONS.

Three other national conventions also meet this week, viz: the National Medical Convention, the Young Men's Christian Association, and Manufacturers' Convention. The object of the latter is to induce Congress to abolish the income tax on manufacturers in addition to the tax on manufactures. They claim that it was not the intention of Congress to impose an income tax on the manufacturer in addition to the excise tax on his manufacture.—N. Y. World.

THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

Washington, June 10.—A special despatch to the Post says the fight between Hooker's cavalry and Stuart's force yesterday was a very brilliant exploit. Our men crossed the Rappahannock and made the attack, driving the Confederates from their entrenchments, and took a great body of prisoners, numbers unknown.

From an officer who participated in the fight it is ascertained that yesterday morning two brigades of Gen. Pleasanton's cavalry under command of Gen. Buford, made an important reconnoisance towards Culpepper and had one of the most obstinate cavalry fights that has occurred during the war. The force was composed of Gen. Buford's brigade, and another cavalry brigade under command of Col. B. F. Davis, supported by two batteries of artillery and two regiments of infantry as a reserve.

Nearly all the fighting was done by the cavalry, and it was of the bloodiest character, mostly hand, sabre and pistol, and in the woods.

By this sudden and brilliant dash of cavalry into the enemy's lines their plans have been frustrated, and the intended raid of General Stuart's forces prevented.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—A Richmond paper of the 6th inst., report all quiet at Vicksburg, and gives a Mobile telegraph of the 4th instant that we have been repulsed at Port Hudson with the loss of an arm to Gen. Banks. Our loss in the late Vicksburg fight is given at 40,000, the Confederate loss 4,000.

CINCINNATI, June 13.—A spirited engagement took place at Monticello, Ky, on the 10th inst. Our troops, under Col Kantz had driven the Confederates from Monticello and were falling back toward the Cumberland river, when the Confederates rallied in force and attacked our rear guard. Our forces retreated slowly. Reinforcements subsequently came to their relief, when a desperate hand to hand conflict ensued, which lasted two hours, resulting in the defeat of the Confederates. Our loss was 30 killed and wounded. The Confederate loss is not stated.

The Ohio Democratic state convention met at Columbus yesterday, and was very largely attended. Ex-Governor Medill presided. Hon. Clement L. Vallandigham was nominated for Governor on the first ballot, received 448 out of 461 votes. This nomination was then made unanimous. The Hon. George E. Pugh was nominated for Lieut. Governor by acclamation. Resolutions were unanimously adopted; protesting against President Lincoln's emancipation proclamation; condemning martial law in loyal States, where war does not exist; denouncing the suppression of the writ of habeas corpus; protesting in the most earnest terms against the banishment of Vallandigham, and calling on the President to recall him and to restore to him all his rights as a citizen of the United States; declaring that the party will hail with delight a desire by the seceded States to return to their allegiance, and that we will co-operate with the citizens of those States to restore peace, and insist upon the freedom of speech, the freedom of the press and the right of trial by jury.

BALTIMORE, June 12.—On Wednesday the steamer Maple Leaf left Fort Monroe for Fort Delaware, with 90 Confederate officers on board. When near Cape Henry light-house, the Confederates took possession of the Maple Leaf and sent her Capt. and crew below. She then steamed to sixty-five miles below the light house, 65 miles from Fortress Monroe and landed on the Virginia shore in the boats of the steamer. 26 of the Confederate officers refused to go with the others and the Captain of the Maple Leaf then turned his boat back to Fort Monroe and reported to Gen Dix. Among the Confederate officers was a Capt. Semmes, a son of the Capt. of the Alabama. The Confederates did no injury to the boat.

A great principle. The principle of electricity lay locked beyond the reach of science for long centuries. Indeed at this day it is but indefinitely comprehended; and it is even doubtful whether it is commendable to pursue a research in occult science which may never be attained by any beneficial results to mankind; but the principle which actuates a man to purchase a bottle of Downs' Elixir and Henry's Liniment and present them to his wife and family, is one which should excite our warmest admiration. For Coughs, Colds, &c. the Elixir is the most excellent remedy that can be given, and as a Pain-Killer the Ver[illegible] Liniment is unequalled.

The amount of postal currency now in circulation in the United States is about five fifteen million dollars. This issue is to be called in, and its place supplied by a new one.

There was a wedding on the battle field, near Murfreesboro, Tennessee, recently. The ceremony of "kissing the bride," was performed by Gens. Crittenden and McCook.

Gen. Burnside's grammar is not much better than his principles or logic. He speaks of certain persons who, he says, "have never underwent" certain privations.

The New York correspondent of the London Times says the government censor in New York refused to allow him to send the news from Hooker's army.

THURSDAY, JUNE 18TH 1863.

THE NOMINATION.

The nomination of a candidate for the representation of the County of Peterboro' in the Provincial Parliament took place on Tuesday, the 16th instant, in front of the Court House, agreeable to public notice. There were 3 or 400 persons present.

At noon Sheriff Hall mounted the hustings, and after the reading of the writ he called upon the electors to select a representative, when John Harvey, Esq., (the pioneer settler of the Township of Smith, having settled on his present farm in 1818) stepped forward and proposed Wilson Seycorger, Esq., as a fit and proper person to represent the County in Parliament. He referred to Mr. Conger's giving up a good situation for the purpose of opening up the country in the rear of us for the purposes of settlement; that he explored the country at his own cost, and that his efforts had always been for the public good. He was satisfied that he was the best man that could be elected to open up the back country, and he hoped that Whig and Tory would for once all agree to put him in.

Capt. Sutherland had pleasure in seconding the nomination of Mr. Conger as our representative as he, Mr. C., was the nominee of both parties, and he hoped that Grits and Conservatives would all agree in the general good. If they did not in politics they could agree in advancing the good of the country, and in electing Mr. Conger they would subserve that end. Mr. Conger had been tried in the political crucible, and on two occasions had come out of it with some dross attached. This is now the third time he has essayed to enter Parliament, and he was glad that he entered it unopposed. But as he (Capt. S.) did not intend to make a political speech—but rather follow the example of Mr. Harvey,—he concluded by expressing the pleasure it afforded him to second the nomination of Mr. Conger.

The Sheriff then enquired if the electors had any other candidate to propose, and not receiving any reply, he said if the electors approved of the nomination to signify it by a show of hands, when every hand in the crowd seemed to be raised. He then declared W. S. Conger, Esq., duly elected.

Mr. Conger then came forward and said that he felt truly thankful to the electors for the handsome manner in which they had elected him to look after their interests in Parliament. It was such a relief from the usual turmoil and strife attendant upon a contest that it might be taken as an index that the differences existing amongst us are being made up. His object when in Parliament or out of it, as was well known, has always been the opening up of the back country, and that he now went into Parliament again not to make or break administrations but to carry out his original scheme. When in Parliament he had attached himself to the then party in power, which most of the electors did not agree in politics with. Having the one great object in view he made friends of the administration in order to forward his original plan in opening up a country capable of maintaining a large population, and nearly as large as Ireland. This was the great idea which he had all along cherished, and which he now entered Parliament with. He was in favor of representation by population, and considered that yearly we were getting nearer this desirable measure. It was a fact not to be denied that Lower Canada had managed to exert too much influence, but Upper Canada would gradually obtain her rights.—He did not intend to deliver a long speech, but he would briefly refer to the great question of Retrenchment. This he considered did not consist of merely cutting down the salaries of a few Clerks, and leaving the Principal's salary untouched. He thought it should begin with Ministers and Members of Parliament first. Real retrenchment he considered was bringing in settlers to the country, then we would have three individuals to pay what one has to pay now. He must repeat if there ever was a source of pleasure to him, it was in the handsome manner they had elected him. It had made amends for years of disappointment and toil, and he should endeavour to carry out the chief object for which he first entered Parliament, that of advancing the interests of this Country. He trusted that at the end of the term he should meet them with confidence.

A Voice—Remember the Volunteers.

Mr. Conger—Yes. He considered that the young men who volunteered their services for the defence of their country deserved special attention, and he should not forget them. He concluded by assuring the electors that this day was one of the proudest of his life, and he should always look back upon it with pleasure.

Col. Strickland then came forward and paid a compliment to the tact, energy and zeal of Mr. Conger in exploring and opening up the back country. It has been said that there is nothing behind us but a rocky barren country. He denied this. He had been over a large portion of it, and he was satisfied it possessed elements of wealth. It had a field for the miner, there being minerals that required being dug out. It had a field for lumbermen, and it also had a large fields for the agriculturist. Mr. Conger was at once the pioneer and the advocate of these vast fields being brought into successful working. Another object that Mr. Conger has always advocated was the Ship Canal from Lake Huron to Ontario. He (Mr. S.) expected yet to see the white sails of vessels from Lakes Superior and Huron pass through Peterborough on their way down to the Trent. He had advocated the seat of Government to be in Peterboro, and we might now have had the Parliament here. He paid a high compliment to Col. Haultain for his upright and consistent conduct in Parliament, and concluded by proposing three cheers for our late representative, three for our present member, three for the Queen and three for the Returning Officer.

The proceedings then terminated, and so for the second time in the history of the County of Peterborough a member of Parliament has been returned by acclamation. The day was fine, and everything passed off very agreeably.

AMERICAN AFFAIRS.

It is now over two years since hostilities commenced between our American cousins, and at present the hope of a cessation seems as far off as ever. Indeed there seems an almost universal belief that the struggle is more likely to last two years more, than there was at the outbreak a conviction that it would last a year. Ninety days was the period asked by the sanguine Secretary of State, to close the business which now appears more difficult to settle than ever. This civil war "drags its slow length along" steadily and fearfully consuming the industry and resources of the country as well as its best blood, and its treasure, without any reasonable hope of succeeding in bringing back the disaffected to their allegiance. The financial drain of the finances of the country vast as it is, is not so much dreaded as the drain of men.

The fearful loss of human life, the number of men relieved from military service—their term of service having expired, and the failure to procure volunteers, even with a unprecedented large bounty, have led the government to have recourse to the hated system of conscription. In several places attempts have been made to resist it, and perhaps nothing that has yet transpired will tend so powerfully to cut short the war as this very unpopular measure.

Since the Spring opened very little has been attempted or effected. With the exception of the battle at Fredericksburg no encounters of consequence have been undertaken. At present the all absorbing object of interest both North and South is the capture of Vicksburg. General Grant is besieging it and hopes soon to starve out the beleaguered. The unsuccessful attempt to storm the place has led to the adoption of the more tedious way of starvation. Gen. Grant who has the command is quite sanguine of reducing this chief Southern stronghold. He is not afraid of foes in front or rear. It is on this point that all eyes are turned. The grand army of the Potomac, is doing next to nothing—and matters seem almost at rest for the present. Meantime rumours of foreign intervention come across the waters. The Press in both England and France speaks out, and for some time past events would indicate that European interference and recognition may be looked for.

A somewhat ominous sign of something to happen, appears in Wall Street, in the "tumbling down" of gold without any apparent sufficient cause, and the consequent excitement thereupon among the stock jobbers and speculators. A large portion of the community are opposed to the arbitrary conduct of the Government and whilst opposed to the rebellion and desirous of putting it down, would do so without the tyranny employed by the powers in Washington.

At a Convention recently held in Columbus, Ohio, Vallandingham was unanimously elected as Candidate for Governor of Ohio. It is stated that 40 or 50,000 people assembled. The excitement was tremendous, and resolutions and speeches made on the occasion.

A considerable deal of embarrassment will be experienced by the administration from the several demonstrations recently got up, which may tend to bring matters to a issue. We shall not any thing that may tend to put an end to this fratricidal war.

Cap't. Sutherland and the Nomination.

We are informed that many of Mr. Sutherland's most ultra Clear Grit friends, are "riled" with him, on account of the position he took in Mr. Conger's election, and more particularly in his having seconded Mr. C's nomination at the Hustings. Those who thoroughly know the merits of the case are perfectly aware, that throughout the whole proceedings, Capt. S. acted a most consistent part; but to those who are not so well acquainted with the circumstances, we can inform them, that at the late meeting of Col. Haultain's political friends, held over the Bank of Toronto, no one urged the Colonel more strongly than Capt. Sutherland, to again stand as our representative in Parliament, and only when Col. Haultain gave the meeting distinctly to understand, that he declined the honour, did Capt. S. state that he should support Mr. Conger, considering him a preferable man as a politician to Mr. Dennistoun, who was then also in the field, as a Candidate for political honours. At the meeting referred to, it was not agreed upon to bring any candidate forward in the Reform interest, therefore as Capt. S. espoused it at the meeting, out of two evils chooses the least; the contest then being between Mr. Dennistoun and Mr. Conger; however, as the former gentleman retired from the contest, we cannot see that there was any inconsistency on the part of Capt. S. in retaining the position he at first took town in Mr. Conger.

The List of Convictions will found on the first page.

TOWN COUNCIL.

MONDAY, June 8, 1863.

The Council met; present: His Worship the Mayor, and Messrs. Lundy, Carlile, Dixon, Ormond, Burnham, Nichols, Dickson, Ryan, Clinton, Fry and Toole.

The minutes of former meeting read and confirmed.

A communication from Mrs. Haultain calling the attention of the Mayor to the destitute condition of Fanny Dougherty, as the Ladies' Relief Society had suspended their operations for the present.

His Worship stated that a colored woman, named Ryan, was also in destitute circumstances, and was applying for relief.

A petition from Wm. Eastland and others, asking the Council to lay on a coat of gravel or broken stone on George Street, was read and referred to the Streets and Bridge Committee.

Several accounts were referred to the Finance Committee.

Moved by Mr. Lundy, seconded by Mr. Burnham,—That the Committee on Public Property do procure a suitable Plan and specification of a building to contain a Lock-up, Engine House, Hook and Ladder Room, a room for the use of the Fire Company, and a dwelling for the Chief Constable, to be two stories high exclusive of the underground apartment, to be 50 feet by 36, and built of brick, and that they do submit said plan and specification to this Council at its next meeting thereof; the specification to give an estimate of the probable cost of the said building, assuming the same to be plain and economical.—Carried.

Moved by Mr Burnham, and seconded by Mr. Lundy,—That the Mayor inquire of the Commissioners of the Town Fund, whether any and what applications have been made to purchase or lease the lands at the south side of the Town, and whether anything is required to be done by this Council to facilitate the sale and lease of the said lands, and that he report to this Council at its next meeting the result of such inquiry.—Carried.

Mr. Burnham was appointed a member of the Finance Committee.

On motion of Mr. Ormond, an allowance of six dollars per month was granted to Mrs Divine, for the maintenance of Fanny Dougherty.

The Mayor read and laid on the table a return by the Clerk of the parties fined for selling liquors without license since the 1st March last, the following is the return:—Messrs. Robert Crone, M. Kiley, W. B Ward, S. W. Hastings, Alex. Niblock, Thos. Collins, Jas. Dineg, D. Cadotte, Wm. O'Donell, Richard Trenwith, Beatty & Benson and David Roche.

The Treasurer was ordered to pay one half year's rent to Widow Warren, amounting to six dollars. Also, two dollars per month to Widow Ryan.

Mr. Clinton read and handed in a letter he had received from the Manager of the British American Assurance Company, which was referred to the Fire Committee.

A petition from E. Poole and others, asking the Council to remove an old building on George Street near King Street, was read and referred to the Committee on Public Property.

The Mayor was authorised to take steps to have the balance of the fines collected due from parties fined for selling liquor without license.

Moved by Mr. Lundy and seconded by Mr. Fry,—That the Clerk of this Council do give notice to the Inspectors of Licenses, that this Council wish them to have such parties as have not taken out License brought up and dealt with according to law.—Carried.

On motion of Mr. Ormond, the Trunk on George Street was ordered to be repaired according to the plan of Mr. Carlile, the same not to exceed fifteen pounds.

The Council adjourned for two weeks.

Company Drill,---Section 3.

FORMATION OF A COMPANY IN LINE.

(Communicated.)

Question 29th—What is the caution necessary in this formation?

30th—On the caution where will the Captain place himself?

31st—Where will the Lieutenant and Covering Sergeant place themselves?

32nd—Where will be the places of the remaining supernumeraries, and at what distance from the rear rank?

33rd—When manœuvring where will the drummers be?

34th—State what is meant by a column being right in front.

35th—Which will be the pivot flank of a company when right is in front, and also when left is in front?

36th—When a company is in column, either halted or on the move, and the Captain is required to change his flank, how will he pass?

37th—Is there any exception to this rule?

38th—How will the Covering Sergeant and supernumeraries pass?

SECTION 3RD—MARCHING TO THE FRONT AND REAR.

39th—The Instructor having stated the supposed order of the battalion and given the word of command, "the line (or column) will advance," what is the first object of the Captain?

40th—When the Company is to retire, and the caution having been given "The Line (or Column) will retire," and the men faced about, how will the flank files act?

41st—State where the Captain should be when a Company retires in column, and also in line?

SECTION 4—OPEN ORDER ON THE MARCH.

42nd—When a company in column right in front is ordered to take open order, where will the Captain go?

43rd—By which flank will the company then march?

44th—Do the Lieutenant and Covering Sergeant move? and if so, where do they go?

45th—On the command being given "Rear Rank take open order" where do the Officers move to, and how do they hold their swords?

46th—When do they take up the slow time, and how do they hold their swords?

47th—State opposite which files the officers will march, and at what distance from the men?

48th—who will lead the Company?

49th—At what distance does the Supernumerary rank march, and how does it gain that distance.

50th—In resuming "close order" where will the Officers move to?

Answers next week.

THE ELECTIONS.

The present week will witness the return of the majority of the members who are to compose the New Parliament. From the returns which have been made we are glad to perceive that the majority of them are elected as ministerialists.

The Globe gives 38 for the Ministry and 12 against. The Leader disputes some of these figures, nevertheless there is a large majority on the side of the Government. We are sorry to learn that the Hon. Commissioner of Public Works, Mr. Drummond, has been defeated in Rouville by the a crow majority of 39. The political ex-parson for West Brant, as we guessed has been beaten by Wood with 571 majority. "In the result of this election, Mr. Ryerson may see the effect of his 'independence'" Leade.. e would rather say he may see the effect of his recreancy to his principles, and the folly of allowing himself to be made a cats-paw for his brother and kindred unprincipled politicians. Served him right we say. As we go to Press, we are unable to learn the precise state of the poll in Victoria, but we hear it admitted on all hands that Mr. Dunsford is elected by a small majority.

Dr. T. K. Ross, whose advertisement appears in our columns, comes here, highly recommended by the Rector of Bath. He is a graduate of Queen's College, Kingston, at all events he has his diploma from that sterling institution.

We wish Dr. Ross every success.

The body of Henry Trenouth, who was drowned on Monday the 8th inst., was found floating in the Little Lake on Sunday last.

The County Council is in Session, report of proceedings will be given next week, the Wardens address will be found in another column.

We are requested to state that the semi-annual examination of the Peterboro Grammar and Union School, will take place on Thursday and Friday of next week.

We understand a picked eleven of the Peterboro Cricket Club, play at Kingston to-day, with the club of that city.

A Barbarous Abolition War.

From the N. Y. World.

The government is entering on a system of warfare, which, if persisted in will lead to results shocking to humanity. We refer to the wanton destruction of private property, and the arming of the negroes to cut the throats of their masters. As an example of what we mean, take the following which is the most recent case of the kind that has come to our knowledge. It is well known that General Hunter is engaged in raising negro regiments. By the last advices from Hilton Head we learn that he has just caused a raid into the rice swamps near Beaufort, for the purpose of getting negroes for a new regiment. The expedition, under the command of Col. Montgomery, of the Second South Carolina, proceeded up the Combee river with several steamers, effected a landing with little difficulty, and made a successful haul of a thousand able-bodied negroes—enough to fill a whole regiment. So far, all might be considered regular by those who justify the arming of slaves against their masters. But what can the most thorough-going abolitionist say to the accompanying vandalism? Colonel Montgomery brought back with him on his steamers, with his cargo of negroes, "any amount of household furniture." This vast amount of furniture was the trophy of the making and burning of fifty dwelling houses belonging to private owners. "After sacking house" says the narrator, an admiring abolitionist, "known "to belong to some notorious rebel, Colonel "Montgomery set fire to it, and under its "light fell back to his boats, embarking his "men and property. By daylight this "morning (June 4) he lay anchored off "Beaufort, having been absent not quite "twenty-four hours."

This be it noted, is not an isolated instance of barbarous atrocity; it is an example of what the administration is beginning to do of set purpose and on reflection. One of the abolition organs, in extolling the system last evening boasted that there are already thirty thousand blacks under arms, and said: "Their very presence appeals to the slaves on rebel plantation, "and their perfect familiarity with Southern ways makes them of infinite service "in the work of destruction, which is a "part of the duty of such expeditions." By the usages of civilized war private property on land is never destroyed in wantonness or for the mere infliction of mischief. Commanders sometimes subsist their forces on the enemy: but even this is of such doubtful expedience that Gen. Scott, when in Mexico, drew no supplies from the enemy except such as he paid for. But "the work of destruction," over which demoniacal abolitionists gloat: the sacking and burning of all private dwellings belonging to the enemy, is the very wantonness of barbarism, and a stigma upon the character of the government that tolerates it. When the British, in the last war, burnt the national Capitol the whole country cried out against it as an outrage on civilization. Every part and feature of the system now introduced by Mr. Lincoln has formerly been protested against and denounced by our government as violating the laws of war. In the last war, the British stirred up the Indians on our frontier to fight against us, as Mr. Lincoln is stirring up the negroes to fight against the South. Mr. Madison's messages at the period show in what light this atrocity was regarded, and the measures he was compelled to adopt in relation. Private property was in some few cases destroyed; see in what terms that wise, enlightened President spoke of this class of outrages: "Our enemy," he said, "has avowed his purpose of trampling on "the usages of civilized warfare, and given "earnest of it in the plunder and destruction "of private property." Have the laws of nations changed within the last fifty years? Has the world been relapsing into the old barbarism and ferocity, that the American government now practices, upon system, what it half a century ago protested against as fragrant violations of the rules of civilized warfare?

For us to violate the laws of war as interpreted and insisted upon our own government is more impolitic in this war than it could possibly be in any other. If a foreign war be so managed that the enemy continues to harbor resentment after its close, the mischief is comparatively small. But the civil war in which we are engaged falls entirely, unless in results in the restoration of amicable relations between the parties to it. It is a war for the restoration of the Union. Subjugation is not union. Extermination is not union. To make a desert and call it peace is not to restore the Union. To convert the South into a Poland or a Hungary would not restore the Union, but would necessarily transform our government into a despotism to make it strong enough to govern discontented and recalcitrant provinces, inhabited by a numerous people of extraordinary political and military talents. The tendency of the present system is not at all to cow the South, but only to sting it into rage. Under the stimulous of exasperation men will sacrifice more, endure longer, and fight with more desperate determination, than when they feel that nothing has been done against them but what the laws of war allow. Mr. Lincoln, by such measures is strengthening the rebels morally a great deal more than he is weakening them physically.

Quarterly Convention.

On the last Saturday of the present month will be held the Quarterly Meeting of the County Convention of Teachers.—This meeting will be open to all. Teachers, other friends of Education and the public generally are invited to be present. We think that the first class particularly should think it their duty to attend. The objects the Convention contemplates, it is true, affect all classes of community, but especially that of Teachers. That this is so has already been discussed and we think shown in this column. We do not wish to judge any one harshly, or to say a word which may hurt any one's feelings, but we cannot refrain from giving it as our candid opinion that those Teachers who refuse to take part in those instrumentalities that are calculated to advance the interests of Education are not doing their duty, are not true to their country, their profession, or themselves.

The Convention is an important instrumentality, and one that will be efficient just in proportion as those interested do their duty. This we opine will not be denied—at least by those who have given any serious consideration to the matter. We will not enlarge at present. We hope therefore that all Teachers who can at all make it convenient will attend the County Convention. Some very important matters will be taken up, upon which it is wished to get the opinion and views of as many teachers and other friends of Education as possible.

The Teacher's Office.

ITS IMPORTANCE.

How undeniably great is the influence which a teacher possesses over the mind and hearts of the young ones committed to his care. The formation of their moral character, and the development of their latent intellect are principally (second only to the mother) entrusted to his care. Let us reason out fully our duty in this respect. By your patient and persevering endeavours, you may lead into the right channels those true and living principles which shall be a blessing to their future existence. You may inspire them with that love of truth that is great and great—which shall preserve them amidst evil influences and associations. You may awaken in them general impulses and noble resolves, which shall stimulate them to heroic deeds, and make them a blessing to their country and their kind. What we collect it readily see well. The age we live in is one of earnest investigation—enlightened views and practical sympathy. Substance, not shadows; truth not tradition; and right, not might, are the objects of anxious and general pursuit—and the school-master must adapt himself to the wants and feelings of the people. He must seek to work out those great principles which lie at the root of all social and national prosperity.

But in order to do his part properly, the teacher must add to his stock of knowledge. He must not content himself with a mere knowledge of reading, writing and accounts. He ought to be well read in books, &c., as well as intimately acquainted with the best methods of teaching "the young idea how to shoot." Experience is also necessary. Surely he who has "borne the burden and heat of the day" in training the youthful mind, is likely to be more successful than the youth just fresh from school. In other professions, experience is a passport to favour. But not so of late as regards teaching. In choosing teachers in many sections, cheapness and not talent and experience being the commodity mostly looked after.

Onwards! onwards! should be the teachers motto. He has no time for idle wishes or dreaming reveries. A vast future lies before him. He must be up and doing. This is not the time for indolence and indifference. Great mental struggles are going on; and much, very much, of coming consequences will depend upon the position and the part which he takes in the contest for truth, virtue and liberty. His mission, it is true, has its difficulties; but they are not perpetual; it has its griefs, but they are not enduring. Besides,

"Not enjorment, and not sorrow
Is his destined end or way;
But to act that each to-morrow
Finds him further than to-day."

"By Hook or By Crook."

ORIGIN OF THE PHRASE.—The destruction caused by the Fire of London, A.D. 1666, during which some 13,200 houses, etc., were burnt down, in very many cases obliterated all the boundary marks requisite to determine the extent of land, and even the very sites occupied by buildings, previously to this terrible visitation. When the rubbish was removed, and the land cleared, the disputes and entanglled claims of those whose houses had been destroyed, both as to the position and extent of their property, promised not only interminable occupation to the courts of law, but made the far more serious evil of delaying the rebuilding of the city, until these disputes were settled, inevitable. Impelled by the necessity of a speedy to a more speedy settlement of their respective claims than could be hoped for from legal process, it was determined that the claims and interests of all persons concerned should be referred to the judgment and decision of two of the most eminent land surveyors of that day—men who had been thoroughly acquainted with London previous to the fire; and in order to escape from the numerous and vexatious which never delay must occasion that the decision of these two arbitrators should be final and binding. The surveyors appointed to determine the rights of the various claimants were Mr. Hogk and Mr. Crook, who by the justice of their decisions, gave general satisfaction to the interested parties, and by their speedy determination of the different claims, permitted the rebuilding of the city to proceed without the least delay. Hence arose the saying above quoted, usually applied to the extraction of persons or things from a difficulty.

THE DOCTOR KNOWS.—An amusing thing occurred on the 24th Ohio. A few days since a soldier, in passing to the lower part of the encampment, saw two others from his company making a rude coffin. He inquired who it was for,

"John Bunce," said the others.

"Why," replied he, "John is not dead yet. It is too bad to make a man's coffin while you don't know if he is going to die or not."

"Don't trouble yourself," replied the others. "Dr. Coe told us to make his coffin and I guess he knows what he gave him."

It appears from a Parliamentary return that 415 applications for increases for a change of name have been made in England since 1850, and 398 licenses have been granted.

A late item is to the effect that Burnside's Court-martial in Cincinnati, was holding daily sessions, trying political prisoners, of whom there were two hundred and twenty in jail.

A "Coal Exchange" has been organized in Philadelphia, "with the view of securing unanimity of purpose and action in all matters appertaining to the interests of the coal trade."

Miss Faithful, of the Victoria Printing Press, has adopted as emblem, a lion alert with the motto, "Fidelis et Formus." A waggish journalist suggests that this means "Faithfull & Co."

London extends at present over more than 120 square miles, contains 2600 miles of streets flanked with 360,000 houses, a population of 3,000,000, and an assessed annual retail of £13,000,000.

RELIEF IN TEN MINUTES.
BRYAN'S
PULMONIC WAFERS.

The most certain and speedy remedy ever discovered for all Diseases of the Chest and Lungs, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Consumption, Bronchitis, Influenza, Hoarseness, Difficult breathing, Sore throat &c., &c., &c.

THESE WAFERS give the most instantaneous and perfect relief and when persevered with according to direction, never fail to effect a rapid and lasting cure. Thousands have been restored to perfect health who have tried other means in vain. To all classes and all constitutions they are equally a blessing and a cure—none need despair, no matter how long the disease may have existed, or however severe it may be, provided the organic structure of the vital organs is not hopelessly deranged. Every one afflicted should give them an impartial trial.

To Vocalists and Public Speakers, these Wafers are peculiarly valuable; they will in one day remove the most severe occasional hoarseness; and their regular use for a few days will, at all times, increase the power and flexibility of the voice, greatly improving its tone, compass and clearness, for which purpose they are regularly used by many professional vocalists

NIAGARA NURSERIES, AT ST. CATHARINES.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—We have just noticed an advertisement in your paper, sent in by a certain James Gardiner of this town, who, we believe, previous to the death of the late Dr. Beadle, proprietor of the St. Catharines Nurseries, acted in the capacity of an agent, under the superintendency of Mr. Francis Stoddart, agent for said Nurseries in this place; in which he informs the public, seriously, and in very emphatic and flowing language, that "he has no connection or acquaintance with either Messrs Hamilton or Evans,"—who are soliciting orders for the NIAGARA NURSERIES, at St. CATHARINES—and that "Dr. Beadle, Esquire, Sole Proprietor of the St. Catharines Nurseries, appointed them as his agents;" and cautions the public in the language of an anxious and doting parent to have nothing to do with said Hamilton or Evans and earnestly entreats them for their (the public's) benefit to give no orders to any agents from any other Nurseries until they have first consulted him, their friend and public benefactor.

In answer to the above, we have to say, that Mr. Gardner is at least right in saying that he has no connection with us; and we take this opportunity of assuring his Lordship that he need have no fears of us exposing him by claiming any relationship.

With reference to his impertinent insinuations, for he does not come out and state plainly and manly what he would fain have the public believe, namely: that Messrs. Hamilton and Evans are obtaining orders in this vicinity under false pretences, by representing themselves as Mr. D. W. Beadle's agents—and that Messrs. Moody & Hamilton, Proprietors of the NIAGARA NURSERIES have no Nurseries at all.

And we do hereby offer a Reward of $20 to any respectable person who will give satisfactory evidence in Court, that said James Gardner did say in plain words that Messrs. Moody & Hamilton have no Nursery, and that Mr. A. Hamilton and Mr. J. H. Evans have and are obtaining orders in this vicinity by representing themselves as Mr. D. W. Beadle's agents who we might here add for the benefit of Mr. Gardner if he should wish to write again, is and has been proprietor of the Nursery he [Mr. Gardner] is said to represent for the last nearly three months.

In conclusion, we would just say to those gentlemen who have or may favor us with their orders, that no pains will be spared by us in filling them orders with an article, at least equal if not superior to any heretofore introduced in this county; and that we are not accustomed to fill an order for a King of Tompkin County, or Alexander Apple tree, with a Yellow Belle flower Man, or President Apple tree, but purchasers may rely upon getting their orders filled with just the article they order.

Not that we wish to infer that Mr. Beadle's stuff is not first-class on the contrary we would rather recommend than speak lightly of his Nursery. We might also add, that by referring to any number of the Toronto weekly Globe or Leader since the 20th of May, 1863; or the daily Globe of the 20th, or Leader of the 21st of May, the public may find the following advertisement signed by Mr. Beadle and ourselves:—

"ST. CATHARINE'S AND NIAGARA NURSERIES.

☞ THE public are requested to take notice, that the above-named Nurseries have no connection. The one being known as the St. Catharines Nurseries, D. W. Beadle, Proprietor; the other, the Niagara Nurseries, Moody & Hamilton, Proprietors; and that A. Hamilton & Brothers have closed their agency for the St. Catharines Nurseries and are now selling exclusively for the Niagara Nurseries.

"Signed,
"D. W. BEADLE.
"MOODY & HAMILTON."

Our agents are all furnished with a certificate of Agency, and we think Mr. Beadle's duly authorised agents are furnished with the same.

Yours truly,
For MOODY & HAMILTON,
HAMILTON & EVANS.

ST. CATHARINES NURSERIES.

THIS may certify that James H. Evans and Alexander Hamilton are not agents for these Nurseries, and that any representations made by either of them that they are selling trees from these Nurseries is false. All of my agents can show a certificate signed by me not over one month old.

D. W. BEADLE,
Proprietor of the St. Catharines Nurseries.
June 13, 1863. 25

St. Catharines Nurseries.

NIAGARA NURSERIES.

THE public are hereby requested to take notice that the above-named Nurseries have no connection. The one being known as the St. Catharines Nurseries, D. W. Beadle, Proprietor; and the other as the Niagara Nurseries, Moody & Hamilton, Proprietors and that A. Hamilton & Brothers have closed their agency for the St. Catharines Nurseries, and are now selling exclusively for the Niagara Nurseries.

D. W. BEADLE.
MOODY & HAMILTON.
Niagara, May 20th

IN connection with the above, the Niagara Nurseries for which A. Hamilton and J. T. Evans are canvassing the county, is at Lockport, in the United States, Moody, Proprietor. This Spring, Mr. Moody formed a partnership with Mr. A. Hamilton in a branch Nursery, renting about three acres of ground in St. Catharines, brought over a few trees from the States, and set them out. This is the "Niagara Nurseries" of Moody & Hamilton. The public can judge for themselves what confidence such men are worthy of, who have been trying to palm off their States trees on the public as if grown in Canada, as Evans, to various parties, strongly condemned States grown trees.

JAMES GARDNER.

The following are a few of the certificates handed to me:—

"I hereby certify that James H. Evans, was at my house soliciting an order for fr it grees representing himself as agent for the St. Catharines Nurseries, and that Beadle's Nursery was not the St. Catharines Nurseries at all.

JOSEPH BOWIE.
"ANGALINE BOWIE.

"Otonabee, June 17th, 1863."

"This is to certify that James H. Evans told me Mr. Beadle's Nurseries was a poor affair, and that the Nursery he represented was far better and was known as the St. Catharine's Nurseries. Also guarded me against buying States trees.

"JOHN HAZLITT.

"Otonabee, June 17th, 1863."

"This is to certify that James H. Evans was at my house soliciting orders for the St. Catharines Nurseries; representing himself as the agent for those Nurseries, and that he was brought up from boyhood in that Nursery, and it was the best Nursery in the Province. He warned me against buying States trees.

"WILLIAM MORGAN.

"Otonabee, June 17th, 1863.

☞ I hear Messrs. Hamilton & Evans have put an advertisement in this issue. It will be answered in the Review on Friday first, and the Examiner next week.

$10,000 WORTH OF GROCERIES.

FOR SALE.

THE subscriber has opened a new store in the building lately occupied by R. P. McDougall, where he offers for sale a large and well selected assortment of GROCERIES, consisting in part of

SUGARS OF ALL KINDS,

Teas, Coffee, Spice, Rice, Tobacco,

COAL OIL LAMPS,

OF THE MOST IMPROVED KINDS,

COAL OIL, AMERICAN STONE WARE

OF EVERY VARIETY,

And other articles too numerous to mention.

Well knowing [after an experience of twenty years in the trade] that the "nimble sixpence is better than the slow shilling," he will sell for small profits, having bought his stock with CASH he is confident that he can sell goods for readily pay cheaper than any other merchant in Peterboro'. As the goods offered for sale by the undersigned are all paid for, he does not confine himself to selling them "cheap for cash only," but will cheerfully exchange them for all kinds of country produce, at cash prices. The subscriber does not attempt to enumerate all the articles which he offers for sale.

☞ Call and examine the goods and see how cheap the "yankee" can sell them.

☞ REMEMBER THE OLD, McDOUGALL, STAND.

NO MERCURY USED.

Dr. Amos & Son,

48 EAST GENESSEE STREET,
BUFFALO, N. Y.

ARE the only Physicians in the State who are members of the Royal College of Surgeons, London.

May be consulted from 8 o'clock in the morning, until 9 at night, in every stage and symptom of Disease.

The treatment they adopt is the result of upwards of thirty years' extensive and successful practice in London.

A most Scientific Invention

An instrument for the cure of general Debility, or Nocturnal Emissions, more properly known as Seminal Weakness, &c. Those complaints can be permanently cured in from fifteen days to two months by the use of this instrument, when used conjointly with medicines.

Dr AMOS & SON, in order to satisfy the most skeptical as to the merits of this instrument, pledge themselves that in any instance where it may prove unsatisfactory after a fair trial, the money will be refunded by returning the instrument in good order. Price Ten Dollars, by mail or express.

YOUNG MEN TAKE PARTICULAR NOTICE

Those who have injured themselves by a certain practice indulged in when alone—a habit frequently learned from evil companions, or at school, the effects of which are nightly felt even when asleep, and if not cured, renders marriage impossible and destroys both mind and body, should apply immediately. Per abuse is one of the most formidable enemies to health, for nothing else has the catalogue of human ills through a few indiscretions, shadowing down to an untimely grave. It destroys the nervous system rapidly, wastes away the energies of life, causes mental derangement, prevents the proper development of the system, disqualifies for marriage, society, business, and all earthly happiness, and leaves the sufferer wrecked in body and mind, predisposed to consumption and a train of evils more to be dreaded than death itself.

PERSONS IN ANY PART OF THE WORLD may be successfully treated by forwarding a correct detail of their cases.

THE BRITISH AMERICAN

A MONTHLY MAGAZINE DEVOTED TO

Literature, Science and Art.

NOTWITHSTANDING the repeated attempts which have been made in Canada to establish a Monthly Magazine devoted to Literature and Science it is nevertheless apparent, that success has not been the reward of those who have engaged in the undertaking.

The Canadian Institute at Toronto, the Natural History Society of Montreal, the Literary and Historical Society of Quebec, aided by the Government grants they enjoy, regularly publish their proceedings, and thus occupy to a greater or less extent, the several fields which from the special objects of their incorporation, but the public at large are still unsupplied with a periodical Magazine devoted to general Literature of Canadian origin and growth, and to Science divested of unattractive technicalities and adapted to the requirements of those who do not profess familiarity with its sterner details.

It is the design of the originators of the British American Magazine to occupy this vacant field, and endeavor to satisfy a want which is so generally felt to exist.

In maturing the plan of a new periodical, it is desirable to supply the public with some guarantee of its character and prospects. It is therefore determined to request intending contributors to furnish their names to be published in the prospectus, as among those who are willing, not only to give it countenance and support, but to add to its critical by contribution to its pages. It is also thought advisable to publish the names of those who are willing and anxious to encourage the undertaking by a liberal subscription to the first number.

Many of the difficulties which have impeded the progress and ultimately led to the abandonment of a Monthly periodical, similar in general design to the British American Magazine, have doubtless arisen from the advance of the country in population, wealth and civilization: hence the originators commence their labours with far brighter expectations than their predecessors could have enjoyed, and they anticipate without doubt or distrust, the successful progress of the undertaking.

The aim of the British American Magazine is to encourage British American Literature, to offer an opportunity long desired by many for giving public and permanent expression to their thoughts, to foster a taste for literary pursuits, to prevent the marvels of Science in familiar language, easily understood by all, to supply a monthly abstract of whatever is interesting and valuable in the periodical literature of Great Britain, and a brief resume of the progress of Literature, Science, Industry and Art, throughout North British America.

It will be within the province of the Magazine to furnish critical notices of new publications, unfettered by prejudices, nationality, or religious bias: and while political discussion of a party character will be absolutely excluded from its pages, set descriptive articles relating to our home institutions, affecting the general interests of the country, will be freely admitted.

Each monthly issue will contain one hundred and twelve pages, of the same size as the English Ventilites, which will form at the close of the year two volumes containing 672 pages each.

The publishers hope to be able to commence their issue in April next, and from the success which has already attended their efforts to procure subscribers, they anticipate that they will be able to print the British American Magazine with a subscription list amounting to 10,000 copies for the first number.

Terms $3 per annum, in advance.

EMPLOYMENT.

THE Undersigned has, for several years past, been engaged in a business, which has yielded him at the rate of three thousand dollars per annum, and is now willing to teach it to others. The business is of a highly useful and general character, suited both to cities and villages, and one that any person of ordinary capacity, young or old, male or female, can acquire with a few hours practice, and by which they can secure a very handsome income. Several young ladies who have received instructions from me, both in New York State and Pennsylvania, are earning upwards of $15 per week by it, and there is no reason why any one else cannot do the same. Invalids, even, can do well by it, as it is no peddling affair, but a lucrious that is perfectly respectable. Gentlemen and ladies of leisure who would like to learn the business for their own amusement or pleasure, will find the practice of it a pleasant pastime, and one that they will take great interest in. On receipt of $1, I will send printed instructions by which any person can readily acquire the art, and these instructions will also contain every particular relative to the carrying it on so that it will be highly profitable. The purchaser of the "printed instructions" will also be authorized to teach it to others; and I have sometimes received as high as $200, for teaching it personally to a single individual. I would state further that $4.50 or $3 will buy everything that is necessary to commence the business with, and the article can be got almost anywhere, in city or country, or if preferred, I can furnish them. THE WORLD.

AN INDEPENDENT

Daily, Weekly and Semi-Weekly NEWSPAPER.

IN soliciting for another year a continuance and increase of the favor which in so short a period has given to the World its present rank among American journals—a circulation, business patronage and influence equalled by other journals only after the effort of many years—we renew to our old and new subscribers the promise that no labor nor expense will be spared to make the World what it aims to be,

The Best Newspaper in America.

In politics, now as ever, the World is independent but never neutral. Its only creed is a national one—of which

The Union, the Constitution, and the Laws, and Free Speech, of the Press, of Political Discussion and Action are the corner stones.

The political events of the past year have notably demonstrated the need of an able, fearless outspoken, high-class

Conservative Journal,

in the commercial metropolis of the country, which shall give constant, bold and vigorous utterance to the conservative sentiments of the best men and the honest masses of the nation Opposing every enemy to

The Union,

whether armed in rebellion at the South, or insidiously planting the seeds of disunion at the North.

Opposing every violation of the Constitution,

the only bond and hope of union, the only ground upon which we can exhort and compel the allegiance of the South.

Opposing every infraction of

The Laws,

in high places or in low, believing that obedience to Law is service to God:

Opposing every violation of the

Freedom of Speech, of the Press, of Political Discussion and Action, by whomsoever those violations are committed, whether by the executive in the

Arbitrary, Illegal, and Unjust Arrests

in its refusal of the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus, its denial of the rights and liberties of citizens, its arrest without warrant, its imprisonments without trial, its abrogation of state and federal laws, its illegal proclamation of an empty emancipation, or whether those violations are committed by the party in power, its orators and its presses, advocating measures which must sunder the Union for the sake of destroying slavery, and denouncing treason gainst all their political opponents.

Loyal to the government always, it will give to the administration a hearty and vigorous support wherever and whenever the administration itself is loyal to the bond, the principles, and the purity of the government

The World will oppose all compromises which would barter away or divide the Union, for which alone the North is waging war; it will oppose peace itself, till the success of the armies ress the permanence of peace, and will urge the prosecution of the war with an economy which has not hitherto governed its expenditures, and a vigor which the nation during a year has prayed for in vain.

The same care will be exercised over the columns of the World to exclude everything which could offend a pure, Christian morality, and recourse will always be had to the same high principles as well to guard its columns as to guide its judgment of men and events.

All the News

will be found in the columns of the World from the various departments of human activity,

Political, Agricultural, and Commercial, as well as in Literature, Science and Art.

New Publications, Inventions, Discoveries, and Works of Art will receive the same careful and thorough attention.

The latest and most important news from London, Paris, Turin, Rome, Syria, China, California, Japan, Egypt, and South America, our correspondents will send to us.

Our correspondents are attached to the various divisions of the army; will accompany them wherever they go, and by the free use of the telegraph and the mails, present to the columns of the World

A Complete History of the War,

from day to day, and from month to month

In the Weekly and Semi-Weekly editions of the World a specially large space will be given to

Agriculture,

and to all departments of

Manufacturing and Mechanical Industry.

The Weekly World will contain an admirable serial story during the current year

THE DAILY WORLD.

The Daily World is the most complete Commercial and News Paper published in America. Besides all telegraph news, market reports, commerce and foreign news, &c., as any two contain daily, it contains also much fuller commercial news. Its Ship News, Produce, and Cattle Market reports, Foreign and Domestic Importations, Stock Lists, and Commercial news, no business man can do without.

TERMS (INVARIABLE IN ADVANCE):

FINKLE & LYON SEWING MACHINE COMPANY,

538 Broadway, New York.

NO party is little acquainted with the Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machines the careful pursuit of the Company's Circulars is specially commended. The extensive can be had on application. It is very special, and will be found highly instructive, having been prepared with much care and we will abide by all statements therein made.

The following brief quotation is characteristic of the entire Circular:

"The Machine is better adapted than any other Sewing Machine in market to the frequent changes and almost endless variety of Sewing required in a family: for it will sew from one to twenty thicknesses of Muslin without stopping, and make every stitch perfect. Will sew from the finest gauze to the heaviest cloth, and even the stoutest harness leather, without changing the feed needles, tension, or making any adjustment of machine whatever.

"It is to have no success with to overcome the most difficult parts in the Sewing Machine art. It was to ordinary triumph. It hardly can we now say, "No other Machine compares with it in this respect." Hence, have we uniformly—almost without exception—taken the highest premium, whenever the Machine has been in competition with any other first class Sewing Machines. Hence it is that we are able to offer the following guarantee, viz:—We warrant every Machine we sell to give more satisfaction than any other Sewing Machine in the market, or money refunded." We never sell a Machine on any other terms. The guarantee is as reliable as the note of any business man in the land. For more than five years we have refused upon such facts for the reputation of our Machine, and without a single well-filling agent in the field, there is scarcely a neighborhood on the continent where the Machine is not favourably known. We prefer such a reputation to one based on mere "puffing system," as they are technically called in the trade. Hence we make but one kind of stitch, viz the lock-stitch, alike on both sides, requiring only one-third the thread of other kinds of stitches.

Herrick's Sugar Coated Pills.

CHILDREN CRY FOR THEM!

THIS remarkable American remedy is carrying the world by storm. Over four million boxes are sold annually. Composed entirely of Roots, Herbs, Gums, Balsams and Extracts—their effects on the human system is prodigious, surprising and successful. Acting directly on the blood, glands, solids and fluids of the body, they remove from the system all impurities, and restore perfect health. Being sugar coated, they are pleasant to take, and are mild in their operations. They never cause pain or sickness, and in all cases of sickness, are far preferable to any other pills. They are warranted to give satisfaction or the money will be refunded. They are considered a safe, speedy, positive and infallible remedy for any and every derangement of the human system, and a single trial will prove their superiority over any other pill in the world.

☞ The discovery of coating a pill with sugar was reserved for modern times. Antidotes are combined

Poetry.

Beyond the Town.

BY W. BLACK.

There she comes a little girl,
Laughing, bright, and free—
Forehead fair as sea-born pearl
Eyes that dance in glee:
Curls that tremble forth in light,
And twinkingly fall down
Her little neck so stately white,
In ringlets golden-brown.
Sweet Helen! my Helen! little Helen Lee!
I would that all the flowers of spring were beautiful as thee!

Then her voice so sweetly rings
Through the shaded wood,
Where the crested linnet sings
Oe'r her chirping brood;
All the leaves in joy repeat
What she has begun.
Till again her tripping feet
Bear her to the sun,
Sweet Helen! my Helen! little Helen Lee!
I would that all the flowers of spring were beautiful as thee!

What! a woman—fully grown,
Beautiful and fair!—
Azure eyes and ringlets brown,
Laughing curls of hair;
Pearly teeth, that, when they smile,
Two bright dimples fill;
Woman grave yet free from guile,
So I think her still.
Sweet Helen! my Helen! little Helen Lee!
Not a flower of all the flowers is beautiful as thee!

Cottage leafy-clad and small,
Whitens in the sun;
Roses up the garden wall
Clusteringly run.
There she dwells beyond the town,
A very little way:
But just so far that when sun goes down,
That I can with her stay.
Sweet Helen! my Helen! here's a kiss for thee,
The prettiest wife in all the world is little Helen Lee!

Miscellaneous.

Affecting Scene.

At the recent meeting of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church New School in Philadelphia the event of most absorbing interest was the reception and adoption of a proposal from the Old-School General Assembley to establish a friendly correspondence by an annual interchange of delegates. Twenty-six years had elapsed since the New School Synods were expelled from the Presbyterian Church, and the two portions became as Jews and Samaritans to each other; and now the exscinding body, of its own motion, invited the condemned and exscinded body to come into fraternal relations. The invitation was most cordially accepted, many of the members hailing the movement as the first step toward a speedy reunion of the Presbyterian Church, and sharing in the hope which Dr. Skinner expressed with deep emotion, that this reunion might be accomplished before his death. The action of the Assembly was telegraphed to the Old-School Assembly now sitting at Peoria, Ill.; delegates to the Assembly were appointed through the same agency; on Monday a telegraphic reply was received, and interest culminated on Tuesday, when Dr. Tustin of Washington appeared as the delegate of the Old-School, and before the crowded and hushed congregation said, in tones that trembled with age and emotion, "I am authorised to declare to you that so far as we are concerned, the strife is at an end." To these words were added acknowledgments of mutual bitterness and prejudice for which there had been no justification; and earnest aspirations for a perfect reunion. The opinion was expressed that the divisions of the Church had borne a part in producing the present division of the nation, in which connection the satisfaction of the late John C. Calhoun at the progress of ecclesiastical divisions and quarrels was alluded to; and the hope was uttered that, while the Church was now seeking to repair the damage it had done, statesmen and politicians would imitate its example, and that the Lord of Hosts would bestow a spirit of Christian unity upon all the churches and all the people of the land.

The reply of Prof. Smith the moderator, was most apt and eloquent, filling many eyes with tears, and interrupted with frequent and uncontrollable applause. He reciprocated, on the part of the New-School Church, the warm expressions of fraternal sympathy; alluded to the real unity of the two bodies, which was deeper far than separation—a unity in standards of doctrine and government, a unity in loyalty to the cause of our beloved country, and in sympathies and prayers for that down-trodden race, whose oppression lies so deep among our nation's sins. The whole assembly then united in singing the hymn, "Blest be the tie that binds," and in an eloquent prayer of thanksgiving by Rev. Dr. Cox.

It has been often said that the real cause that divided the Presbyterian Church was not the strife of theological differences, but the contest of slavery and freedom; and the events above narrated would seem to confirm this view. Now that the slave-power, with its corrupting, anti-Christian influence, has ceased to be supreme in the Old-School Church the tremendous differences concerning Atonement and Imputation have become nearly visible to the naked eye; the old controversies are being quietly laid on the shelf as having no practical importance, the laity having long ago ceased to take the slightest interest in them, and the free Church longs to be one. It is not prophetic of the resistless instinct of unity that shall bind this land together when slavery is dead?—N. Y. Independent.

Jeddo, the capital of Japan, is, without exception, the largest and most populous city in the world. It contains the vast number of 1,000,000 dwellings and 5,000,000 of human souls. Many of the streets are nineteen Japan serls in length, which is equivalent to twenty-two English miles.

Miss Laura Keene proposes visiting Europe this summer, to procure theatrical novelties for another season. We hear nothing more about her rumored scheme for building a new theatre.

Reading Character.

The world often forms a false estimate of a man's character, which will sometimes go for years in disguise, until detected by the light of some accidental circumstance brought to bear upon it. Under the guise of a bully, for instance, how often struts the dastardly craven. The fop will sometimes turn out, when you know him thoroughly, to be a man of talent and information, hiding himself under a bushel of fine clothes for some inscrutable purpose. Gruff old gentlemen are often remarked to be charitable to the poor, and bland old gentlemen are sometimes the reverse. Reading character is an art in itself. There are nice shades and touches only to be discerned by the practiced eye; and by such apparently insignificant points character may frequtly be determined. Lafitte, the eminent French Banker, owed his first start in life to the circumstance of his being seen to pick up a pin in the court yard, as he was going to call upon a wealthy person for the purpose of seeking employment. The man who would pick up a pin, thought the wealthy person, must have some thrift about him, and so he gave him employment, and found that he had not mistaken his character.

Lord Lonsdale, Keeper of the Seal to William III. of England, was extremely dissipated in youth, to the great trouble of his grand-uncle, old Sir John Lowther, who was very wealthy, and meant to make him his heir. So annoyed was the old gentleman, however, at the stories continually circulated respecting the extravagances of his nephew, that he took a journey up to London, for the purpose of altering his will in favor of other relatives. While there, Lonsdale used to call upon him every day, to pay his respects. Sir John always smoked of an evening, and on one occasion having asked his nephew for a piece of paper to light his pipe, the latter drew from his pocket a letter, and, tearing off the blank half of it, rolled it up to make a lighter, carefully extinguishing it and putting it away upon the mantelpiece when his uncle had got his pipe alight. This little touch of economy was not lost upon Sir John, who saw that his nephew possessed a natural inclination for order and "making the most of things," from which a good crop might be expected after the harvest of wild oats. And so the old gentleman did not alter his will; nor as it turned out, could his fortune have fallen into better hands than those of the once disputed nephew.

The 'maddening cup" is said to be the greatest test of real character. "When the wine is in the truth comes out." One of the kings of England—an Edward, if we remember rightly—was so convinced of this fact, that he never appointed any person to an office about the court until he had first put him through the ordeal of intoxication. Once he had a new chaplain to initiate in this way, and the reverend gentleman, when well over his third bottle, talked so well and enthusiastically about horses and hunting, that the king proposed to him the position of stud groom instead of chaplain. The offer was accepted, and, as the old chronicler of the occasion tells us, "Although ye pulpitte might have suffered no loss, yet ye king's mews (stables) had for certain a great gayne."

A Man who could Die as often as he pleased.

Dr. Cheyne narrates the case of a man who could die, to all appearance, at any time he chose, and, after having lain a considerable period exactly as a corpse, was able, it would seem, by a voluntary struggle, to restore to himself the appearance and all the various functions of animation and intellect. It is to be inferred, from the latter part of the story, that the unnatural and painful exertions by which this person assumed the semblance of decease produced at length a really fatal result. Death would no longer be mocked with impunity. The counterfeit corpse, a few hours after its last revival, relapsed into a state which was capable of no subsequent resuscitation. But the case is so interesting and remarkable as to deserve our giving it in all the detail with which Dr. Cheyne presents it.

"The man," says the doctor, "could die or expire when he pleased, and yet by an effort, or by some unknown power, he could come to life again. He insisted so much upon myself and my friends seeing the trial made, that we were at last forced to comply. We felt his pulse first; it was distinct, though small and thready, and his heart had its usual beating. He composed himself on his back, and lay in a still posture for some time; while I held his right hand, Dr. B——, one of my friends present, laid his hands on his heart, and Mr. S——, another friend, held a clear looking-glass to his mouth. I found his pulse sink gradually, till at last I could not feel any by the most exact and nice touch. Dr. B—— could not feel the least motion in his heart, nor Mr. S—— perceive the slightest sign of breath on the bright mirror he held to his mouth. Then each of us, by turns, examined his arm, heart and breath, but could not, by the nicest scrutiny, discover the least symptom of life in him. We reasoned a long time about this odd appearance, as well as we could, and finding he still continued in that condition, we began to conclude that he had indeed carried the experiment too far, and at last we were satisfied that he was actually dead, and were just ready to leave him. This continued about half an hour. By nine o'clock in the morning, as we were going away, we observed some motion about the body, and, upon examination, found his pulse and the motion of his heart gradually returning; he began to breathe gently and to speak softly. We were all astonished to the last degree at this unexpected change, and after some conversation with him and with ourselves we left, fully satisfied as to all the particulars of this fact, but not able to form any rational scheme how to account for this extraordinary act. The man afterwards called for his attorney, added a codicil to his will, and then calmly and composedly died about five or six o'clock on that evening."

Thine.

It is the language of the believer to his God, I am thine. Not my own, to live for the mere indulgence of selfish feelings, nor the world's, to be devoted to its empty pursuits and pleasures, but thine. Not only so, but thine altogether, with no divided heart, no two masters, no double allegiance, part earthly and part heavenly, but supremely, exclusively thine. Thine, too, at all times, whether flattered by the world, or frowned on by it, engaged in business, or employed in worship. Thine in affliction and prosperity, in sickness or health, life and death. Thine, too, in all places; not only when surrounded by congenial Christian friends, but amidst the hostile elements of the world; whether in thy holy temple, or in the solitude of the desert; whether in the quietude of the family, or in the fierce conflict of the battle-field. Thou art the ever-present God in all places; and in all places I find Thee, even in the most unlikely and improbable. Thine, also, forerever. I have given myself to the beyond recall, not for a season, but for all seasons. The bond is indissoluble; earth cannot wear from it; Satan cannot break the tie; death cannot dissolve it. Now thine by a willing surrender, eternity will perpetuate the union. Glorious distinction! Thine altogether, thine at all times, thine in all places, thine forever.—Presbyterian.

Extraordinary Clockwork.

Amongst the most extraordinary pieces of modern clock work are those at Strasburg and Lyons, which are very eminent for the richness of their furniture, and the variety of their motions and figures. In the former a cock claps his wings and proclaims the hour, whilst an angel opens a door and salutes the Virgin, and the Holy Spirit descends on her. In the latter, two horsemen encounter and beat the hour on each other; a door opens, and there appears on the theatre a Virgin with the child Jesus in her arms; the Magi, marching in order, present their gifts—two trumpeters sounding all the time to proclaim the procession.

These, however, were excelled by two which were made by English artists, about a quarter of a century ago, and sent as a present from the East India Company to the Emperor of China. These clocks were in the form of chariots, in which a lady in fine attitude was placed, leaning her right hand upon a part of the chariot. Underneath, a clock of curious workmanship, little larger than a shilling, struck, repeated, and went eight days. Upon the lady's finger sat a bird, finely modelled, and set with diamonds and rubies, with its wings expanded in a flying posture, and which actually fluttered for a considerable time on touching a diamond button below it. The body of the bird (which contained part of the wheels, which in a manner gave life to it) was not the size of the sixteenth part of an inch. The lady held in her hand a gold tube, not much thicker than a large pin, on the top of which was a small round box, to which a circular ornament, set with diamonds, not larger than a sixpence, was fixed which went round nearly three hours in a constant regular motion. Over the lady's head, supported by a small fluted pillar, no bigger than a quill, were two umbrellas.—Under the larger a bell was fixed at considerable distance from the clock, and seemed to have no connection with it; but from it a communication was secretly conveyed to a hammer, which regularly struck the hour, and repeated the same at pleasure, by touching a diamond button fixed to the clock below. At the feet of the lady was a gold dog, before which, from the point of the chariot, were two birds fixed on spiral wings. The wings and feathers were set with stones of various colors, and appeared as if flying away with the chariot, which from another secret motion, was contrived to run in a straight, circular, or any other direction. A boy that laid hold of chariot behind, seemed also to push it forward.—Above the umbrella were flowers and ornaments of precious stones, and it terminated with a flying dragon, set in the same manner. The whole was of gold most curiously executed, and embellished with rubies and pearls.

CHURCH PATRONAGE.—The Lord Chancellor of England holds the presentation of 720 Church livings. On an average he has to provide a minister for a parish once a fortnight. Finding the task an onerous one, his Lordship has introduced a Bill into Parliament to enable him to sell these livings, and thus place the presentation of them in the hads of landed proprietors or other wealthy individuals.

THE POLES AT PARIS.—The Poles residing at Paris have presented the following address to Prince Napoleon. Among the signatures we observe those of Prince Czartoryski, General Zamoyski, M. Galenzowski, Colonel Camienski, Bohdan Zaleski, and others:—"Monseigneur,—We have been long aware of the sympathy which your Imperial Highness entertains for a country who so long sufferings and patriotic constancy have a claim to your liberal and generous heart. You have just given us a new and striking proof of those sentiments. With a feeling of grateful emotion we have heard the warm-hearted and eloquent words which you have recently spoken in the Senate in favour of Poland, tracing in indelible characters the pictures of the oppression which weighs upon our country, denouncing and stigmatizing iniquity and apostacy, speaking of Poland as a sister of France who has suffered and still suffering, while she is waiting for justice. We are happy, Monseigneur, to express to you the gratitude with which your words and your acts have inspired us, feeling convinced that we may always rely upon your support. Your sympathy for a just cause can only increase from attacks which confer honour when they emanate from accomplices of a foreign denomination, from men who are justly branded by you as history also will brand them."

An Editorial Consultation.

At a consultation of Editors of New York journals, held on Tuesday at the Astor House, representing many daily and weekly journals, secular and religious, of different political parties, the following resolutions, after considerable discussion, were passed:

Whereas, The Liberty and Rights of the Press, as affected by the exigencies and necessities of a state of war, and especially civil war, are topics of the highest public concern; and

Whereas, Recent events indicate the existence of grave misapprehensions and lamentable confusion of ideas with regard to this vital question: therefore,

Resolved, That our conceptions of the Rights and duties of the Press, in a season of convulsion and public peril like the present, are briefly summed up in the following propositions:

1. We recognize and affirm the duty of fidelity and Constitution, Government, and laws of our country as a high moral as well as political obligation resting on every citizen, and neither claim for ourselves nor concede to others any exemption from its requirements or privilege to evade their sacred and binding force.

2. That Treason and rebellion are crimes, by the fundamental law of this or of every other country; and nowhere else so culpable, so abhorrent, as in a republic, where each has an equal voice and vote in the peaceful and legal direction of public affairs.

3. While we thus emphatically disclaim and deny any right as loberng in journalists or others to incite, advocate, abet, uphold, or justify treason or rebellion, we respectfully but firmly assert and maintain the right of the Press to criticise freely and fearlessly the acts of those charged with the administration of the Government, also all their civil and military subordinates, whether with intent directly to secure greater energy, efficiency, and fidelity in the public service, or in order to achieve the same ends more remotely through the substitution of other persons for those now in power.

4. That any limitations of his right created by the necessities of war should be confined to localities wherein hostilities actually exist or are imminently threatened; and we deny the right of any military officer to suppress the issues or forbid the general circulation of journals printed hundreds of miles from the seat of war.—N. Y. Independent.

DIFFICULTY OF JOURNALISM.—The Vicksburg Whig of the 21st April thus apologises for the short-comings of the current number. "We owe our readers an apology for the scarcity of reading matter in this morning's paper. The shells from the Yankee battery burst so close to our office yesterday that the printers could do but little work."

HARD LABOUR IN HIGH LIFE.

How doth the ever busy Pam Employ each leisure hour
In journeying from town to town,
Like bee from flower to flower!
How cleverly his tale he'll tell
Where'er a speech he makes,
Showing how England must excel
While his advice she takes!

While others waste their leisure hours,
Or idly mischief brew,
Pam actively the country scours,
In quest of hearers new.
Thus in hard work his holiday
Is virtuously passed;
But let us hope a peerage may
Be his reward at last.

The alarming increase of small-pox has attracted the attention of medical men in England. One of the most effective causes of this increase appears to be the ommision on the part of poor parents to have their children vaccinated. There is a compulsory Act of parliament on the subject; but it seems to be quite inefficient.

The Syracuse Courier states, upon authority which it deems unquestionable, that the abduction of the Hon. Clement L. Vallandingham has caused the insanity of his young and beautiful wife.

Further accounts of gold discoveries on the Saskatchewan come to us by the New Wester. The statements that the precious metal has been found over a wide range of the country are very positive.

General Hunt has forbidden the circulation of the World, Chicago Times, Cincinnati Enquirer, and other papers, in the Department of missouri.

A public meeting in Montgomery county, Indiana, Saturday, passed a resolution that no enrollment of the militia in that county should take place.

Rear Admiral Foote is lying dangerously ill at the Astor House.

A great principle. The principle of electricity lay locked beyond the reach of science for long centuries. Indeed at the day it is but indefinitely comprehended; and it is even doubtful whether it is commendable to pursue a research in occult science which may never be attained by any beneficial results to mankind; but the principle which actuates a man to purchase a bottle of Downs' Elixir and Henry's Liniment and present them to his wife and family, is one which should excite our warmest admiration. For Coughs, Colds, &c, the Elixir is the most excellent remedy that can be given, and as a Pain-Killer the Vermont Liniment is unequalled.

WONDERFUL SALT MINE.—It appears from scientific investigation that the salt deposit at New Iberia, Louisana, is of the most extensive and wonderful description. For vastness and purity it is unequaled on the globe. One account says:—"If you can, the [illegible] granite quarry of Massachusetts, or the marble quarry of Vermont, to be solid deposits of pure rock salt, clean and transparent as so much clear white ice, in one solid, inexhaustible mass, underlying the earth, and you may then acquire an imperfect idea of the vastness of the salt formation."—Detroit Advertiser.

Peterborough Examiner.

THURSDAY, JUNE 25TH 1863.

THE ELECTIONS.

For the last week every day has brought additional intelligence that the Ministry is to have the support of the country. Since the Elections of 1847 no administration has received so strong a vote from Canada West as the present one—a pretty clear sign that the people will have no more to do with the corrupt coalition of John. A. Mc-Donald and Cartier. We in common with our contemporaries, make a classification of members returned, and though differing with some opposition journals, we leave a large margin, and yet claim a good majority. As to Lower Canada we are not in a position to judge—the majority of the members leaning, we therefore avail ourselves of the labours of others who ought to know.

At the time of our going to press we have returns from 57 Upper Canada Constituencies. 43 of these we mark as Ministerialists, and 14 as oppositionists, or independents, making a majority of 29 in favour of the Administration. In Lower Canada, we have 22 as supporters, and 27 as opponents,—making in both sections a total of 65 in favor of the Ministry, and 41 opposed or independent. Twenty-four places have yet to be heard from.

The Leader and kindred journals are evidently sadly put out at the result of the Elections so far. They feel deeply mortified that the "Grits," in spite of their hate and venom, are to rule for the next four years Every scheme and appliance have been at work to carry their point but they have been signally foiled. In our sister County the interference of R. Scott, the member for Ottawa was sought, and by his means the mandate of the Catholic Bishops was sent up to Victoria to vote for Hon. S. Smith, but it did not succeed. It would be a lasting disgrace to the County if it did. What a libel on the people of the County that Mr. Scott, should know who can best serve their interests. We had supposed that the occurrences of the 17th of March in Peterborough, would have left a deeper mark on many of the votes there. We are told however that the Catholics, would get more from Mr. Smith than Mr. Dunsford. How or why we are at a loss to divine. Mr. Dunsford is surely as reliable a man to give Catholics or any others their rights as Mr. Smith. If they want more than their rights, and if the latter won'd vote to give them this, it is right that it should be known, so that the Electors might understand the true position of this gentleman. The Review, in reviewing the result of the Election, takes credit that Mr. S. and the party spent no money in the late contest, and actualy reads a homily on the awfully corrupt practices of spending money at Elections! O tempora O mores. How different at the recent election of Mr. Smith, for the Trent Division, when money was used successfully, and without stint. We are curious to know the sum then expended. But let us hope that our contemporary has really seen the error of his ways. We heartily join him in deprecating the corrupt practice of spending money to secure the returns of members to Parliament.

In East Durham, the Electors have given a majority to the Government Member of 62. The two previous elections gave Mr. Smith but 5 of a majority, and that of 1857 gave Mr. Burton 5. Facts are stubborn things, and the opposition will be given to understand by the voice of the people in 1863, that their day of misrule is at an end—for a season at least—and that their vote of want of confidence has had an effect the very reverse of what they intended or anticipated. John. A. Mc Donald, will now realize the force of the Leader's rebuke while moditing the want of confidence vote. He will find, that what he intended as a death blow to the Ministry, will be quite the reverse. It will give them a life and vigour, that will result in benefit to the County. Let the opposition, however, bear the blame of the serious interruption in the public business of the country, and the expense and annoyance of the present election. The people have uncovered the hollowness of the pretext of patriotism, made use of, and have most signally marked their disapprobation of it. Their confidence power are as eagerly sought by the outs as ever they were by the ins, all assertation to the contrary notwithstanding.

The Toronto elections, have struck consternation into the opposition camp. The Leader, too is awfully shocked at the awfully corrupt practices of the wicked Grits—who preach down corruption, and yet, spend money at Elections. Money did the work in Toronto, says the Leader, and, O how wicked it is then to bribe elections! Yes it is very bad for Grits, to do it, but not for the party the Leader represents. "O consistency, thou art a jewel"

Our contemporary talks of Peterborough being redeemed by the return of Mr. Cooper, by acclamation, what will he say of Toronto, being wrenched by fair play from his party. He may well dread the consequence of the loss of his friends. The York Road, and sundry other jobs have to be looked into.

GLORIOUS VICTORY.

TORONTO REDEEMED!

In common with our Reform cotemporaries, we hail the splendid achievement of the redemption of the Queen City of the West. It has been fairly rescued from the Tories.

From time immemorial it has been the stronghold of toryism, and never for a long period, if ever, has it sent both its representatives as Reformers.

But on Monday and Tuesday last the citizens of this important place elected two staunch Reformers to represent them in the Legislature, by a majority so large that it has taken every one aback. The Opposition, on Monday night, could not have been more dumbfounded if a shell had burst in their midst.

The majorities at the close of the poll were for McDonald..... 462.

Smith..... 509.

Hurrah for Toronto!

Essex Election.

We learn that Mr. Rankin has again beaten O'Connor by the small majority of two votes—very close running surely.—O'Connor had the majority the first day of 23. This is another gain to the Ministry.

The Trent Division.

The Writ for holding the election of a member of the Legislative Council, in place of Hon. Sidney Smith, resigned, is in the hands of the Sheriff, and the nomination is fixed for the 6th of July, to take place in this Town. A Convention has been called at Norwood, to have met on the 23rd, to select a candidate. We have heard the names of two individuals, Bills Flint and Col. Strickland. We understand that the former is willing to stand, and the latter has declined the honor. Nothing could be fairer than for this Division to select Mr. Flint, who ran so well at the last contest. The Reform party could not desire a better man, and the Conservatives in all conscience could not, after the shabby conduct of their former nominee in throwing up his seat, think of bringing out another. We suggest that a requisition be at once got up and largely signed, calling upon Mr. Flint to represent the Division. Who will move in this matter? We believe if gone about in earnest we shall have an election like that of Mr. Conger—without a poll.

Since the above was in type we received the communication on the doings of the Convention held in Norwood, which appears elswhere. As we expected, that body nominated Mr P.M. Grover—but we are in no way bound by what has been done. More on this anon. We wish Mr. Roxbury had given us a list of the delegates—and where from.

THE WAR.

Since our last issue, stirring events have taken place at the seat of war. The rebels in force have crossed the Rappahannock, invaded Pennsylvania and Maryland, and have actually driven Hooker and the Grand army of the Potomac northward towards Washington. Several encounters have taken place between the two parties at various points, but nothing of much importance. We may expect to hear soon of some stirring fights. Vicksburg is still beseiged by Grant, and he is sanguine of success. On the other hand rebel papers state that the City is in no danger of being captured or of surrendering. The President in view of the rebel raid into Pennsylvania has issued his proclamation for an additional 100,000 men—to be raised in that state, Maryland and Virginia for 6 months service. The Northern army is sadly reduced by the term expiring of a great many regiments. Enlisting is slow now, and the conscription in very unpopular. In Indiania and Connecticut it has been resisted. Time alone must tell the issue of this tedious and terrible conflict.

THE SILVER QUESTION.

Our business men have issued a notice that hereafter they will not receive nor pay out silver but at the following rates, American silver 4 d on the dollar discount and English 4 cents on the do lar, being at the rate of about 7 per cent on the former and 4 per cent on the latter. They have been driven to this cause from the recent influx of large amounts of silver to buy wool with. It is rather strange that we should be so annoyed at the glut of silver, as to depreciate its value while our cousins are worse annoyed at its scarcity that they have a premium of some 30 per cent upon it. The adoption of the above measure is one of self protection and forced upon our merchants against their wish.

THE WEATHER AND THE CROPS

We have had recently some very timely rains which have revived the spring crops wonderfully. The turnips sowed about the 12th have had the benefit, and are now coming on finely. Those who sowed prior to that have had to sow them over again, owing to the fly. An immense demand has existed for turnip seed this season. The fall wheat is finely headed out and promises a large yield. Clover will soon be ready for the scythe, and will be a fair crop. Spring wheat oats pease &c are looking well, and altogether, we may look forward for fully an average crop.

COUNTY COUNCIL.

June 16th, 1863.

Council met in half yearly session.

Twelve present: Peter Pearce, Esquire, Warden, and Messrs Birdsall, Crow, Clark, Galvin, Grover, Ingram, Lockie, Rogers Sullivan, Walton and Nelson.

Three absent: Messrs Probert, Richie and Gainer.

The minutes of former session were read and confirmed.

The Warden addressed the Council.

On motion of Mr. Ingram the Warden's address was referred to a special Committee.

On motion of Mr. Ingram, Messrs Grover, Rogers, Birdsall, Walton, Crow and the mover were appointed a Committee to revise and classify the rolls of this County.

On motion of Mr. Grover, the Petition of William Sergeant and eight others was referred to the Committee of Roads and Bridges.

WEDNESDAY, all the Councillors were present.

Moved by Grover and seconded by Mr. Rogers,—That Mr. Brooks' plans lay upon the table for examination of the Council.—Carried.

Moved by Walton and seconded by Mr. Grover,—That the deputation from the Town Council of Peterboro', consisting of Wm. Cluxton, Dr. Ormond and William Toole, be heard on the subject of the Court House Square and the old Burial ground. —Carried.

On motion of Mr. Grover a Committee was appointed to act in connection with the committee of the Town as to the improvements of the Court House Grounds.

On motion of Mr. Grover, the Treasurer's report of assets and liabilities, together with sundry accounts and claims, were referred to committee on finance and assessments.

On motion of Mr. Grover, the Council of the Town of Peterboro were authorised to take possession of the Burial Ground in the Town of Peterboro.

On motion of Mr. Ingram, the sum of fourteen dollars was authorised to be paid to John Murray, for work performed on the Boundary line between Douro and Otonabee.

On motion of Mr. Birdsall, the report of special commitee appointed to equalize and revise the assessment rolls was read in committee.

On motion of Mr. Grover, the Clerk was authorised to take charge of the Court House grounds and property in front of the Court House, and that he be instructed to prevent trespassers from taking possession for the purpose of setting up licenses and gambling tents.

On motion of Mr. Walton, a sum of money was granted for the improvement of the Boundary line between Monaghan and Peterboro.

On motion of Mr. Ingram, the County Auditor's estimates for the current year was referred to standing committee on Finance and Assessments.

On motion of Mr. Grover, a special committee was appointed to make such alterations in the new Registry Office, as they shall deem necessary.

On motion of Mr. Lockie, the petition of Mr. Wm. Fowler, Sen., praying for the sum of fifty dollars to repair the Boundary line between Cavan and Monaghan was referred to the committee on Roads and Bridges.

Moved by Mr. Clark and seconded by Mr. Rogers,—That the expediency of granting the sum of one hundred dollars to be laid out in gravelling the Road on the Boundary line between Douro and Otonabee, from the finger post to Patrick Walsh's, be referred to committee on Roads and Bridges.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Galvin and seconded by Mr. Crow.—That the expediency of granting the sum of $100 to be expended in repairing the Bridge across the Otonabee River at Lakefield, and a bad crossway in the vicinity of the Bridge on the Smithtown side of the River, be referred to committee on Roads and Bridges.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Probert and seconded by Mr. Galvin,—That this Council do grant the sum of two hundred dollars to be expended on the Bobcaygeon Road, commencing three miles north of Bobcaygeon and that the same be referred to committee on Roads and Bridges.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Gainer and seconded by Mr. Richie,—That the sum of $100 be granted by this Council for the repairs of the Bobcaygeon Road, north of Burnt River, provided that the County of Victoria give a like sum, and that this motion be referred to the committee on Road and Bridges.—Carried.

In the Warden's Address, which we published last week we note that he states that a sum of money was granted in 1858 for the erection of a Bridge over the Otonabee River on the Boundary Line between the Townships of Otonabee and Douro and Smith and the Town of Peterboro, that the bridge not being built and the piers still remaining, he advises the County to look after it, as he says the Town has no claim to it, &c. Now we beg to correct the Warden; the Town has a claim upon those piers. The money granted by the County Council in 1858 for that bridge was a part of a sum raised by debentures for improvements throughout the two Counties, and the Town of Peterborough was the largest assessed Municipality in this County. The following are the sums granted and expended in and adjoining the Town:—On the Court House Hill £50; on the Bridge across the Otonabee £50; on the new Bridge £250; in all £350. In the township of Otonabee £381 was expended on roads, besides boundaries. We have to pay to this day our share for the money raised by the Council, and whatever timber may be left belongs not to the County Council but to the Town of Peterborough. Taking all three sums we did not get our proportion. We regret that our Town Council was so foolish as ever to invest so much in such an undertaking.

☞ The Semi-Annual Examination of the Grammar and Union School is being held to-day, at the School House. Parents and friends of Education are respectfully invited to attend.

OTTAWA CITY ELECTION.

There are 3 Candidates for the representation of the Capital of Canada, Mr. Scott the late corrupt member & Messrs Lemare and Currier. It is very likely that the latter gentleman will be elected. Mr. Scott has made himself obnoxious by his connection with the Railroad riot, and the duplicity and treachery he employed to oust Mr. Bell in Russell. It appears that during the absence from home of Mr. Bell his friends independent of himself had brought him out to contest the City with Mr. Scott. The latter alarmed of the consequences of such a contest, waited on Mr. Bell on his return home, and told him if he would waive his claim to the city and stand for Russell, he (Mr. S.) would help him to get elected—Mr. B. told him that his intention always was to stand for Russell, Mr. Scott reassured him of support and good will, denounced Dr. Hunter, said it would be a lasting disgrace to have Russel represented by him, and that he would write to his friends to use their influence against the Dr.

No sooner however does Mr. Currier appear on the Stage than Mr. Scott turns round and opposes Mr. Bell—attends the R. C. Church in Russell and after mass harangued the people in favor of Dr. Hunter. Out upon so mean a man he richly deserves to loose his seat.

The School Board.

The Board met on Tuesday night. The chief business transacted was the receiving of the Committee's Report, on the increasing the salaries of the teachers. The Report was not adopted, but an amendment was carried, increasing the salaries less than that recomended in the Report.

At a former meeting, a Resolution was adopted instructing the Secretary to publish the names of members of the Board who did not attend the regularly called meetings. The Secretary has handed us in the following names:—Rev. J. M. Roger, Wm. Hall, William. Lundy, James. Hall.

SAD INDEED.—"We greatly regret to observe the falling off of conservative votes in good old Cavan."—P. H. Messenger. 20th inst. Expectant. "Well done Peterboro, Conger, elected by acclamation. Conger, and Cockburn, will go into the new Ministry"—Ibid. Then we should have marked them Ministerialists.

From advertisements inserted in this issue the public will see that Mr. Alex Hamilton, formerly agent for the Niagara Nurseries, is now agent for D. W. Beadle's celebrated St. Catharine's Nurseries, and is canvassing the County along with Mr. Gardner.

We cordially recommend them to the public, as the trees delivered by Mr. Gardner this spring gave general satisfaction.—From what we hear they are doing well.

☞ It will be seen by a reference to our advertising columns that an adjourned session of the Peace is to be held in the Court House on Monday the 6th of July, for the purpose of auditing accounts, &c.

TRENT DIVISION ELECTION.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE NORWOOD CONVENTION.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,

At a Convention of Delegates from the different Municipalities in the Trent Division, held at Norwood, on Tuesday the 23rd inst., for the purpose of nominating a Candidate to represent the Trent Electoral Division in the Legislative Council, vice the Hon. Sidney Smith, resigned. On motion of P. Pearce, Esq., seconded by Mr. John Richardson, Walter Scott Esq. was unanimously called to the chair, and William C. Roxbury Esq. requested to act as Secretary.

The meeting being called to order, the Chairman briefly stated the object of the Convention.

After some further discussion by the Delegates the following resolutions were moved and unanimously concurred in:

Moved by Mr. Wm. Sargent, seconded by R. C. Birdsall Esq.,

That the Delegates pledge themselves to support the nominee of the Convention.

After a speech of considerable length and unusual ability, P. Pearce Esq., Warden of the County of Peterboro, moved, seconded by H. Fowlds Esquire,—That Peregrine Maitland Grover Esq., be the nominee of this Convention, as a suitable candidate to represent the Trent Division in the Legislative Council.

During the proceedings of the Convention a large number of electors, many of them from the neighboring Townships, attracted by the sitting of the Convention, had gradually filled the Town Hall to its utmost capacity, and the announcement of the choice of the Convention was the signal for repeated cheers.

P. M. Grover Esq., was then introduced to the audience, and addressed the Convention and electors at some length, after which, and the usual votes of thanks, the meeting terminated.

Before the meeting dispersed, however, the appointment of a Central Committee was proceeded with, and arrangements made for a vigorous prosecution of the canvass: Walter Scott Esq. presiding over the Central Committee, William E. Roxbury Esq. being Secretary of the same.

(Signed) WALTER SCOTT,
Chairman.
WM. E. ROXBURY,
Secretary.

Company Drill,—Section 2.

FORMATION OF A COMPANY IN COLUMN.

(Communicated.)

Ans. 29th—As a Company in column, right (or left) in front.

30th—On the first flank, to lead his company.

31st—The lieutenant one pace in rear of the second file from the reverse flank, the covering Sergeant, one pace in rear of the second file, from the first flank.

32nd—The same as when in line, but at one pace distance from the rear rank.

33rd—In the supernumerary rank.

34th—A column is right in front when that company is in front which will be on the right when in line.

35th—When a column is right in front, the left is the front flank. The pivot flank is that which is wheeled up to, when coming into line.

36th—As a general rule by the rear.

37th—Yes see answer 27.

38th—Invariably by the rear.

SECTION 3. MARCHING TO THE FRONT AND REAR.

39th—To select points to march upon particular care is necessary in this important matter.

40th—they will step up in line with the proper rear rank.

41st—He always remains on the proper pivot flank, if in column retiring, in line with the rear rank.

Next week questions on a Company wheeling from the halt from Columns into line.

First Shot In The Revolution.

THE first American who discharged his gun on the day of the battle of Lexington, Ebnezer Lock, who died at Deering, N. H. about fifty years ago. He resided at Lexington in 1775. The British regulars, at the order of Major Pitcairn, having fired at a few Americans on the green in front of the meeting-house, killing some and wounding others, it was a signal of war. "The citizens," writes one, "might be seen coming from all directions in the roads, over the fields and through the woods, each with his rifle in his hand, his powder-horn to his side, and his pockets provided with bullets." Among the number was Ebnezer Lock.

The British had posted a reserve of infantry a mile in the rear, in the direction of Boston. This was in the neighborhood of Mr. Lock, who, instead of hasting to join the party at the green, placed himself in an open cellar at a convenient distance for doing execution. A portion of the reserve was standing on a bridge, and Mr. Lock commenced firing at them. There was no other American in sight. He worked valiantly for some ten minutes, bringing down one of the enemy at nearly every shot. Up to this time not a gun had been fired elsewhere by the Americans. The British, greatly distorbed at losing so many men by the random fire of an unseen foe, were not long in discovering the man in the cellar, and discharged a volley of balls, which lodged in the walls opposite. Mr. Lock, remaining unhurt, continued to load and fire with the precision of a distinguished marksman. He was driven to such close quarters, however, by the British on his right and left, that he was compelled to retreat.

He had just one bullet left, and there was but one way to escape, and that was through an orchard, and not one moment was to be lost; he leveled his gun at the man near by, dropped the weapon, and the man was shot through the heart. The balls whistled about him. Lock reached the brink of a steep hill, and throwing himself down upon the ground, he tumbled downwards, rolling as is mortally wounded. In this way he escaped unhurt. At the close of the war he moved to New Hampshire, where he resided until his death, twenty years after. He lived in seclusion and died in peace.

We learn that Mr. Sidney Smith has resigned his seat for Trent Division without waiting the result of the contest in Victoria. Only one year remains of the term for which Mr. Murney was originally elected, and of which Mr. Smith has served two years. We hear it stated that if Mr. Bills Flint will consent to serve, there will probably be no opposition to him. Our readers will recollect what a splendid fight Mr. Flint made against Smith in 1861, when the Ottawa Buildings money was brought so freely into play. He earned on that occasion a unanimous nomination from Reformers now.

THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

Harrisburg, June 22.

A special despatch to the Herald says:—There is no doubt that the enemy is fortifying Hagerstown. They hold the country between Haggerstown and Williamsport, with at least one corps d'armé, probably Gen. Ewell's Millerstown, eight miles from Gettysburg, has been occupied to day by a force of Confederate troops, 2,000 strong. This points to a movement on the Northern Central road, for the purpose of isolating Baltimore. Most of the moveable property that could be turned to Confederate account was removed before the place was occupied. They will have to fight for the possession of the Northern Central road.

Gen Lee, is believed to have been baffled in his main object—the capture of Washington. The progress of the campaign is watched with intent anxiety. The enemy have reoccupied Green Castle, after a skirmish with our cavalry. I have no further particulars.

Gen. Couch has received no report of the casualties. Troops continue to be concentrated and organized at the point. Matters are rapidly approaching a crisis. Great secrecy governs all public actions.

New York, June 23.—Richmond papers give accounts of the accidental explosion of the Confederate iron-clad ram Chattahoochee, with which it was intended to make a raid upon our fleet at Apalachicola in revenge for the capture of the schooner Fashion, laden with cotton, by boats from the squadron. 12 persons were killed and others badly scalded.

Murfreesboro, June 22.—News received to-day from reliable sources indicate that Gen. Carter had made another raid into East Tennessee. His force consisted of two thousand mounted infantry.

New York, June 23.—The New Orleans correspondence states that siege batteries have been opened on Port Hudson, and a continuous rain of shot and shell are being poured into the enemy's work.

Deserters coming into our lines report the Confederate strength at least 10 000—well clothed, but suffering from the want of food.

Captain Hart, of the gunboat Albatross committed suicide, by blowing out his brains while in a state of insanity from fever.

A Confederate telegram from Mobile of the 17th inst., says the Confederates repulsed our troops 27 times at Port Hudson and had all close at hand. Also, that the enemy was punished severely, and that the garrison has 60 days provisions, and will hold out till the last.

The iron-clad Roanoke is ordered to sea. It is said she may bear the flag of the Southern Atlantic blockading squadron.

Dishonesty

When a man is dishonest, he is dishonest not only in direct ways, but indirectly. He is an educator of men in dishonesty.

A man is furnishing his house, and he goes to the store to buy a carpet. He can afford to buy a cheap one; but that will not do. His friends do not live on such carpets, and he must not. So he attempts to get a better one than he can afford, and to get it out of the man that sells it. Then commences the attempt to buy something for nothing. It is a universal form of dishonesty to try to get goods below their value; and whenever you do that, you undertake to cheat. The man who wants to get a thing without giving a fair equivalent, wants to be dishonest. If it costs to make a hat, and give a good living to the man that works upon it, and a moderate profit to the man that sells it, three dollars, and you undertake to buy it for two dollars and a half, you undertake to cheat half a dollar. If you attempt to beat a man down, and to get his goods for less than a fair price, you are attempting to commit burglary, as much as though you broke into his shop to take the things without paying for them. There is cheating on all sides of the counter, and generally less behind it than before it.

It would be amusing, if it were not so serious a matter, to see how people, when they go home after a tour of shopping, exhibit and comment upon the goods they have bought. Here is a piece of lace, a shawl or a scarf; and the conversation is not this: "The article is good, and is suited to my circumstances and position;" but, "I got it for nothing." Why, you thief! Is there no such thing as a quid pro quo—an equivalent to be rendered? And are you one that wants to get a thing without rendering a fair equivalent for it? Where is your honesty? Dishonesty is the inevitable necessity of extravagance.

You want a man to build you, for two thousand dollars, a house that will be worth five thousand; and what is the result? You teach that man to cheat. You make him dishonest. You drive him to the necessity of using poor material, and of deceiving you by filling up holes with putty, and covering defiects with paint. You taught him to be dishonest, and he served you right, though you did not serve him right in teaching him that lesson. Where a man wants to be further along than he can afford to be, he wants to live dishonestly. And when the very texture of society is such as to discourage fair dealing, and hold out inducements to depart from honest methods, is it strange that there is so much rottenness on this subject?

PLEA FROM LIABILITY TO SERVE ON A JURY.—At a coroner's court, held before Mr. H. Raffles Walthew, deputy coroner, for Middlesex, at the Wellington Tavern, Cannon street road, lately, a singular plea of exemption from serving on the jury was made by a Mr. Willis, a tradesman, who was summoned as a juryman. Mr. Willis said that he should decline to be sworn, as he did not believe in a state of punishment or rewards hereafter. He handed in the following letter, which he caused to be read to the Court:—"I do not beleive in a future state of rewards or punishment. The law says I am on that account incompetent to make oath. Accordingly I beg to decline being sworn as a juryman.—(Signed) WILLIAM WILLIS 77 St. George street, E." The coroner said that he would dispense without regret with the attendance of such a man. If the really held such opinions he was very unfortunate, but to come into that court, and merely to obtain exemption from sitting on the jury to make such an unblushing and deliberate avowal of them, was not only unnecessary but improper. Mr. Willis: I think your remarks quite uncalled for. The law renders any one holding those sentiments which I have stated incompetent to take an oath, therefore you cannot swear one, and there is nothing more to be said as the law stands. The coroner said that he could not permit so ostentatious and needless parade of such sentiments to be made for such a purpose to pass without rebuke. Mr. Willis having attempted to argue in defence of his peculiar views, was ultimately told to leave the court, which he did, and the case to be inquired into was proceeded with.

TO TEACHERS

Fellow teachers, a word with you. We have interests in common. What interests us must interest you; what affects us must, in a more or less degree, affect you; hence what we are about to say ought to be read carefully over, and duly pondered upon.—You saw it announced in this column last week that the Quarterly Meeting of this County's Teachers' Association will be held on Saturday next. In reading the announcement did you resolve to attend? If not think you that you gave that attention to the announcement it deserved at your hands? You may think you did. We differ from you therein in toto. We think it the incumbent duty of every teacher to strive to elevate and improve his profession. Thus we said last week, and we now reiterate the statement. The profession of the teacher sadly wants elevation, sadly wants improvement in many respects. It is not as influential as it ought to be; neither is it as independent nor as remunerative as it ought to be. Are things improving? This is problimatical; year after year the best members of the profession are leaving it and entering other professions where their efforts will be better appreciated and paid. It is not because they do not like teaching; on the contrary many of them love the profession with all the ardor and zeal of warm and enthusiastic natures; but they find after years of toil, labor and anxiety, which no other profession knows, that they have wasted, so far as their worldly prospects are concerned, the best years of their lives,—while others with no more energy, no more ambition, no more talent, have grown rich around them. It is true these years of toil have not been thrown away, because if they have done their duty a good and noble work has been done—a true and proper estimate of which can only be conceived and realized when time shall have merged into eternity. Notwithstanding, man anxiously desires to see something tangible as the result his labours, especially in this utilitarian age, it cannot surprise that so many teachers leave the ranks of their profession. So it will be until the profession of teaching takes rank with that of law, that of medicine, or to any other, which the world now allows precedence. Such a thing is not only reasonable, but highly reasonable. The profession of teaching is the oldest in the world. Most of those illustrious names of antiquity which not only shed a halo of glory upon the age in which those professors themselves lived, but has also done so upon all succeeding ages, are the names of noble individuals who employed their time, and earned alike their fame and their bread by teaching. To prove this we need only to point to Aristotle, Demosthenes, Socrates, Plato, and many others whose names (if less familiar to the general reader) were hardly less famous and respected in their own times, than those (to us) better known ones we have enumerated. Do not the names Erasmus and Ascham and Locke reflect glory upon the English nation? Is not that of Buchanan—learned and patriotic tho' he was—all admired and revered throughout Scotland's length and breadth? So on we might enumerate, did we feel so inclined, both names in ancient and modern times that should and must make every true hearted teacher proud and fonder of his profession so far as it is itself concerned. But that is not the point at issue. The fact is patent that the profession has not obtained, and consequently has not, the standing to which it has a right, and which in ancient times was accorded to it. Now we want steps initiated which will tend to the consummation of this object. Who are to initiate these? Surely those most interested, the teachers themselves. If they wait until it is done for them, it seems to us they will wait a long time.

History proves that it is not many hundred years ago since Doctors and Lawyers were treated but little better than menials,—so low were they considered in the scale of society, when the great and the high born lords and had things all their own way. But now look at the position and standing that the members of these two professions enjoy. What has brought about this great revolution in their social condition? The very same influence which will bring it about in your case, if you only make use of it, viz: energetic, determined, persevering efforts to have their moral and intellectual worth recognised until at last that end has been effectuated. Will you then, fellow teachers, give some consideration to your interests, if you are influenced by no higher interests than your own. You have been moral helots long enough, and will continue moral helots till (one is almost afraid to pierce the future and state any time) till, at any rate, a better state of things should have been introduced.

Your influence may not be much, but it is a little, surely. Make that little tell. Let it strike home in the right spot, and like the smooth stone from the stripling David's sling it will tell. Try to do something; if you accomplish nothing after all your trying you have done your duty, and the responsibility of failure is not yours. The brave man may be worsted in the conflict, but he yields not till he can no longer make resistance. The coward, or timid one, or the slothful one, shrinks from the fight, or yields at once. Let every teacher who has the interests of his profession at heart be brave, and fight and struggle for the rights and honor of that profession as for very life itself. If teachers will join together and act thus, they will, they must, succeed. Let there then be a good turn out at the meeting on Saturday next. Let the steps of a fresh movement onward! onward! be there initiated.

CAN THE PRESIDENT RECALL HIS PROCLAMATION OF FREEDOM?—Since this question—which ought never to have been a question at all—has, however, been lately started and widely discussed, we give the views of Secretary Blair on the subject."

"The proclamation to the slaves to weaken the enemy commits the nation irrevocably to make good the pledge by the utmost exhibitions of its power. It not only creates an obligation to the boudsmen whose action it is meant to control, but is an implied pledge of honor to the foreign pow

St. Catharines Nurseries.

THE public will please take notice that finding it very difficult to take orders for the "St. Catharines Nurseries" without causing a misapprehension in the minds of many whereby they presumption is led to suppose that I was selling for the Nurseries, I have therefore "St. Catharines Nurseries;" I have of dissolved my connection with Mr. Moody, the Niagara Nurseries, and returned to my former position as Agent for the St. Catharines Nurseries, D. W. Beadle, son of the late Dr. Beadle, Proprietor

Any person who have given orders to the Niagara Nurseries prior to this date, will receive their articles from Mr. Beadle's Nurseries, unless the order is revoked.

Notice is also hereby given, that all business relations heretofore existing between me and James H. Evans are dissolved, and that I shall not hold myself responsible for anything he may say or do after this date.

A. HAMILTON.
Peterboro, June 20th, 1863. 26

Having full confidence in Mr. Alexander Hamilton from previous acquaintance with him as Agent for the St. Catharines Nurseries for nearly 4 years, and Mr. Hamilton having found it was difficult to sell for Mr. Moody's Branch Nursery at this place, without giving the impression that the trees were grown at the St. Catharines Nurseries, and being unwilling in any way to be the means of misleading the public, he had since my advertisement of 13th June, 1863, dissolved his connection with Mr. Moody and I have this day engaged him as my agent—who, along with Mr. Gardiner, is now canvassing the County of Peterborough.

But the public is also notified, that I have not engaged Mr. James H. Evans, and are requested to take notice that he is wholly unauthorized to represent my Nurseries.

D. W. BEADLE.
St. Catharines, June 20th, 1863. 26

ST. CATHARINES NURSERIES.

THE undersigned in returning his sincere thanks to those gentlemen who patronized him for the last two years with their orders for Fruit Trees and other Nursery productions, would again intimate to them and the public generally, that he has commenced to canvass for a new delivery.

All orders entrusted to him will be filled with care and despatch.

Purchasers leaving the selection of kinds to D. W. Beadle or the subscriber, may depend on getting the choicest kind of Fruit.

Any person wishing particular kinds, and no other, may depend on receiving them.

NIAGARA NURSERIES, AT ST. CATHARINES.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—We have just noticed an advertisement in your paper, written by a certain James Gardiner of this Town, who, we believe, previous to the death of the late Dr. Beadle, proprietor of the St. Catharines Nurseries, acted in the capacity of an agent, under the superintendency of Mr. Francis Stoddart, agent for said Nurseries in this place; in which he informs the public, seriously, and in very emphatic and flowing language, that "he has no connection or "acquaintance with either Messrs. Hamilton or "Evans,"—who are soliciting orders for the NIAGARA NURSERIES, AT ST. CATHARINES—and that "Dr. Beadle, Esquire, Sole Proprietor of "the St. Catharines Nurseries, repudiates them "as his agents," and cautions the public in the language of an anxious and doting parent to have nothing to do with said Hamilton or Evans and earnestly entreats them for their (the public) benefit to give no orders to any agents from any other Nurseries until they have first consulted him, their friend and public benefactor.

In answer to the above, we have but to say, that Mr. Gardiner is at least right in saying that he has no connection with us; and we take this opportunity of assuring his Lordship that he need have no fears of us exposing him by claiming any relationship.

With reference to his impertinent insinuations, for he does not come out and state plainly and manly what he would fain have the public believe, namely: that Messrs. Hamilton & Evans are obtaining orders in this vicinity under false pretences, by representing themselves as Mr. D. W. Beadle's agents—and that Messrs. Moody & Hamilton, Proprietors of the NIAGARA NURSERIES have no Nurseries at all

And we do hereby offer a Reward of $20 to any respectable person who will give satisfactory evidence in Court, that said James Gardiner did say in plain words that Messrs. Moody & Hamilton have no Nursery, and that Mr. A. Hamilton and Mr. J. H. Evans have and are obtaining orders in this vicinity by representing themselves as Mr. D. W. Beadle's agents who, we might here add for the benefit of Mr Gardiner if he should wish to write again, is and has been proprietor of the Nursery he [Mr. Gardiner] is said to represent for the last nearly three months.

In conclusion, we would just say to those gentlemen who have or may favor us with their orders, that no pains will be spared by us in filling their orders with an article, at least equal if not superior to any heretofore introduced in this county; and that we are not accustomed to fill an order for a King of Tompkin County, or Alexander Apple tree, with a Yellow Bellflower Man, or President Apple tree, but purchasers may rely upon getting their orders filled with just the article they order.

Not that we wish to infer that Mr. Beadle's stuff is not first-class on the contrary we would rather recommend than speak lightly of his Nursery. We might also add, that by referring to any number of the Toronto weekly Globe or Leader since the 20th of May, 1863; or the daily Globe of the 20th, & Leader of the 21st of May, the public may find the following advertisement signed by Mr. Beadle and ourselves:—

"ST. CATHARINES AND NIAGARA NURSERIES.

"THE public are requested to take notice, that the above-named Nurseries have no connection. The one being known as the St. Catharines Nurseries, D. W. Beadle, Proprietor; the other, the Niagara Nurseries, Moody & Hamilton, Proprietors; and that A. Hamilton & Brothers have closed their agency for the St. Catharines Nurseries and are now selling exclusively for the Niagara Nurseries

"Signed,
"D. W. BEADLE.
"MOODY & HAMILTON."

Our agents are all furnished with a certificate of Agency, and we think Mr. Beadle's duly authorised agents are furnished with the same.

Yours truly,
For MOODY & HAMILTON,
HAMILTON & EVANS.

NO MERCURY USED.

Dr. Amos & Son,

48 EAST GENESSEE STREET,
BUFFALO, N. Y.

ARE the only Physicians in the State who are members of the Royal College of Surgeons, London.

May be consulted from 8 o'clock in the morning, until 9 at night, in every stage and symptom of Disease.

The treatment they adopt is the result of upwards of thirty years' extensive and successful practice in London.

A most Scientific Invention

An instrument for the cure of general Debility, or Nocturnal Emissions, more properly known as Seminal Weakness, &c. These complaints can be permanently cured in from fifteen days to two months by the use of this instrument, when used conjointly with medicines.

Dr. AMOS & SON, in order to satisfy the most skeptical as to the merits of this instrument, pledge themselves that in any instance where it may prove unsatisfactory after a fair trial, the money will be refunded by returning the instrument in good order. Price Ten Dollars, by mail or express.

YOUNG MEN TAKE PARTICULAR NOTICE

Those who have injured themselves by a certain practice indulged in when alone—a habit frequently learned from evil companions, or at school, the effects of which are nightly felt even when asleep, and if not cured, renders marriage impossible and destroys both mind and body, should apply immediately. Self abuse is one of the most formidable enemies to health, for nothing else has filled the catalogue of human diseases causes so destructive a drain upon the human system, dra s this thousands of victims through a few of suffering down to an untimely grave. Destroys the nervous system rapidly, wastes away the energies of life, causes mental derangement, prevents the proper development of the organs, disqualifies for marriage, society, business, and all earthly happiness, and leaves the sufferer wrecked in body and mind, predisposed to consumption and a train of evils more to be dreaded than death itself.

PERSONS IN ANY PART OF THE WORLD may be successfully treated by forwarding a correct detail of their cases.

THE BRITISH AMERICAN

A MONTHLY MAGAZINE DEVOTED TO

Literature, Science and Art.

NOTWITHSTANDING the repeated attempts which have been made in Canada to establish a Monthly Magazine devoted to Literature and Science it is nevertheless apparent, that success has not been the reward of those who have engaged in the undertaking.

The Canadian Institute at Toronto, the Natural History Society of Montreal, the Literary and Historical Society of Quebec, aided by the Government grants they each get, regularly publish their proceedings, and thus occupy to a greater or less extent, the several fields which from the special objects of their incorporation, but the public at large are still unexplored with a periodical Magazine devoted to general Literature of Canadian origin and growth, and to Science divested of unattractive technicalities and adapted to the requirements of those who do not profess familiarity with its steeper Details.

It is the design of the originators of the British American Magazine to occupy this vacant field, and endeavor to satisfy a want which is so generally felt to exist.

In maturing the plan of a new periodical, it is desirable to supply the public with some guarantee of its character and prospects. It is therefore determined to invite leading contributers to permit their names to be published in the prospectus, as among those who will lend, not only to give it countenance and support, but to add to its vitality by contributing to its pages. It is also thought advisable to publish the names of those who are willing and anxious to encourage the undertaking by a liberal subscription to the first number.

Many of the difficulties which have impeded the progress, and ultimately led to the abandonment of a Monthly periodical, at large in general design to the British American Magazine, have disappeared, with the advance of the country in population, wealth and civilization; hence the origin store commence their labours with far brighter expectations than their predecessors could have enjoyed, and they anticipate, without doubt or distrust, the successful progress of the undertaking.

The aim of the British American Magazine is to encourage British American Literature, to offer an opportunity long desired by many for giving public and permanent expression to their thoughts, to foster a taste for literary pursuits, to present the marvels of Science in familiar language, easily understood by all, to supply a monthly abstract of whatever is interesting and valuable in the periodical literature of Great Britain, and the Continent of Europe, in regard of Literature, Science, Industry and Art, throughout North British America.

It will be within the province of the Magazine to furnish critical notices of new publications, unfettered by prejudices, nationality, or religious bias; and while political discussion of a party character will be carefully excluded from its pages, set descriptive articles relating to our home institutions, affecting the general interests of the country, will be freely admitted

Each monthly issue will contain one hundred and twelve pages, of the same size as the English Monthlies, which will form at the close of the year two volumes containing 672 pages each.

The publishers hope to be able to commence their issue in April next, and from the success which has already attended their efforts to procure subscribers, they anticipate that they will be able to present the British American Magazine with a subscription list amounting to 10,000 copies for the first number.

Terms $3 per annum, in advance.

EMPLOYMENT.

THE Undersigned has, for several years past, been engaged in a business, which has yielded him at the rate of three thousand dollars per annum, and is now willing to teach it to others. The business is of a highly useful and general character, adapted both to cities and villages, and one that any person of ordinary capacity, young or old, male or female, can acquire with a few hours' practice, and by which they can secure a very handsome income. Several young ladies who have received instructions from me, both in New York State and Pennsylvania, are earning upwards of $10 per week by it, and from the same reason why no one else cannot do the same. Invalids, even, can do well by it, as it is no peddling affair, but a business that is perfectly respectable. Gentlemen and Ladies who would like to learn the business for their own amusement or pleasure, will find the practice of it a pleasant pastime, and one that will take great interest in. On receipt of $1, I will send printed instructions by which any person can readily acquire the art, and these instructions will also contain every particular relative to the carrying it on so that it will be highly profitable. The purchaser of the "printed instructions" will also be authorized to teach it to others; and I have something to give away, as $200, for teaching it personally to a single individual. I would state further that $2.50 or $3 will buy everything that is necessary to commence the business with, and the articles can be got almost anywhere, in city or country, or if preferred, I can furnish them. THE WORLD.

AN INDEPENDENT

Daily, Weekly and Semi-Weekly NEWSPAPER.

IN soliciting for another year a continuance and increase of the favor which in so short a period has given to the World its present rank among American journals—a circulation, business patronage and influence equalled by other journals only after the effort of many years—we renew to our old and new subscribers the promise that no labor nor expense will be spared to make the World what it aims to be,

The Best Newspaper in America.

In politics, now as ever, the World is independent but never neutral. Its only creed is a national one—of which are the corner stones.

The Union, the Constitution, and the Laws, and Freedom of Speech, of the Press, of Political Discussion and Action

The political events of the past year have most notably demonstrated the need of an able, fearless outspoken, first-class

Conservative Journal,

in the commercial metropolis of the country, which shall give constant, bold and vigorous utterance to the conservative sentiments of the best men and the honest masses of the nation. Opposing every enemy to

The Union,

whether armed in rebellion at the South, or insidiously planting the seeds of disunion at the North.

Opposing every violation of the Constitution,

the only bond and hope of union, the only ground upon which we can exhort and compel the allegiance of the South:

Opposing every infraction of

The Laws,

in high places or in low, believing that obedience to Law is service to God:

Opposing every violation of the

Freedom of Speech, of the Press, of Political Discussion and Action,

by whomsoever those violations are committed, whether by the executive in its

Arbitrary, Illegal, and Unjust Arrests

its refusal of the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus, its denial of the rights and liberties of citizens, its arrest without warrant, its imprisonments without trial, its abrogation of state and federal laws, its illegal proclamation of an empty emancipation, or whether those violations are committed by the party in power, its orators and its presses, advocating measures which must sunder the Union for the sake of destroying slavery, and denouncing treason against all their political opponents.

Loyal to the government always, it will give to the administration its hearty and vigorous support whenever and wherever the administration itself is loyal to the bond, the principles, and the purity of the government.

The World will continue to compromises which would barter away or divide the Union, for which alone the North is waging war; it will oppose no peace itself, till the success of the war assures the permanence of peace, and will urge the prosecution of the war with an economy which has not hitherto governed its expenditures, and a vigilance which the nation during a year has prayed for in vain.

The same care will be exercised over the columns of the World to exclude everything which could offend a pure, Christian morality, and recourse will always be had to the same high principles as well to guard its columns as to guide its judgment of men and events.

All the News

will be found in the columns of the World from the various departments of human activity,

Political, Agricultural, and Commercial, as well as in Literature, Science and Art.

New Publications, Inventions, Discoveries, and Works of Art will receive the same careful and thorough attention.

The latest and most important news from London, Paris, Turin, Rome, Syria, China, California, Japan, Egypt, and South America, our correspondents will send to us.

Our correspondents are attached to the various divisions of the army; will accompany them wherever they go, and by the free use of the telegraph and the mails, present in the columns of the World

A Complete History of the War,

from day to day, and from month to month.

In the Weekly and Semi-Weekly editions of the World, especially, large space will be given to

Agriculture,

and to all departments of

Manufacturing and Mechanical Industry.

The Weekly World will contain an admirable serial story during the current year

THE DAILY WORLD.

FINKLE & LYON

SEWING MACHINE COMPANY,

538 Broadway, New York.

TO parties little acquainted with the Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machines the careful perusal of the following is specially commended. This circular can be had on application. It is very specific, and will be found highly instructive, having been prepared without much care and we will abide by all statements therein made.

The following brief quotation is characteristic of the entire circular:

"This Machine is better adapted than any other Sewing Machine in market to the frequent changes and almost endless variety of sewing required in a family; for it will sew from one to twenty thicknesses of Marseilles without stopping, and make every stitch perfect. Will sew from the finest gauze to the heaviest cloth, and even the stoutest harness leather, without changing the feed needle or tension, or making any adjustment of machine whatever."

This have we successfully overcome the most difficult point in the Sewing Machine art. It was no ordinary triumph. Defiantly can we now say, "No other Machine compares with it in this respect." Hence, have we uniformly—almost without exception—taken the highest premium, wherever the Machine has been properly exhibited in competition with other first class Sewing Machines. Hence it is that we are able to offer the following guarantee, viz.; "We warrant every Machine we sell to give entire satisfaction than any other Sewing Machine in the market, or money refunded." We never sell a Machine on any other terms. The guarantee is as reliable as the note of any business man in the land. For more than five years have we relied upon such facts for the reputation of our Machine; and without a single travelling agent in the field, and without a single neighborhood on the continent where the Machine is not favourably known. We prefer such a reputation to one based on mere "taking points," or the arts usually resorted to in the trade. Hence we make but one kind of stitch, viz., the lock-stitch, alike on both sides, requiring only one thread of the kind of other kinds of Machines.

N. B.—Local Agents wanted in every county throught the West. ☞ Special Inducements offered.

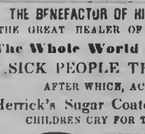
Herrick's Sugar Coated Pills,

CHILDREN CRY FOR THEM!



THIS remarkable American remedy is carrying the world before it. Three hundred boxes Business and Family Compound Extract of Flowers, for the human system in pleasant, agreeable, nervous and scrofulous Action directly on the blood, stands astonished at the wonderful results of their use in one third with the boxes of Pills, &c., &c. In fact admixture of diseases, one or two doses almost always cures. In bad cases of long standing, small doses repeated frequently—as cleanse the system that good health is the result. No change in employment or diet is necessary. They never cause sore mouths, swelled gums, aching limbs, sick, as do many other kinds. They are warranted to give satisfaction, or the money will be refunded. They are considered cheaper, safer, prettier, and in all respects superior to any purgative pill in the world.

The great discovery of coating a pill with sugar emanated with Dr. Herrick. All others are counterfeits, and if unsuccessful in this, will disappoint the sick. Herrick's pills are elegantly put up in a box, with a large sheet of directions, and sell for 25 cents a box. 6 boxes for $1.

Herrick's Kid Strengthening Plaster.

THE GREAT STRENGTHENER AND PAIN DESTROYER. THE BEST AND CHEAPEST HOUSEHOLD REMEDY IN THE WORLD.

These renowned Plasters cure pains, weakness and disease in the back, sides and breast, in a few hours. Instead of wearing them for weeks they, like the proper remedy, cure at once. Spread upon kid leather and some common cloth leather, renders them peculiarly pliant, soft and adhesive. Full directions and other matter in universal—equal to the strong man. To the young woman and the delicate infant. To each and all they will prove a balm and a blessing. They are unexceptible, and without annoyance or trouble—Each Plaster will wear a month or two—thus, and in rheumatic complaints systems and diseases frequently, effect cures where all other remedies fail. Full directions will be found on the back of each. Public speakers, the vocalists, ministers of the gospel, and others, will strengthen their lungs and improve their voices by wearing them on their breast. Price 1s6d cents.

The above articles are sold by all the druggists in Canada, and by druggists throughout the United States and South America. Wholesale by all large druggists in the principal cities.

"Dr." Hunter's Lament and Protest.

From the Ottawa Citizen.

Farewell ungrateful Russell,
I've had a mighty tussle
To set you right,
Alas! too late,
Thou naughty, wicked Russell.

For thee I left my plaid,
In Freedom's (?) glorious land—
My pills, my patients too;
To buy your precious vote
I brought a pile of notes—
Green backs they were 'tis true.

I bought your starving geese
At ten dollars a-piece—
Was I not liberal my?
Did I not for a call
(You chuckle now and laugh)
Ten times its value pay?

Vile, miserable cad!
To think that you should get
My money and my praise;
And then, ungrateful lout!
With fingers as your snouts,
For "Bell" your votes raise.

I'd like to lick that Bell,
I guess I would, right well—
But then his friends won't stand it.
I've tried the Railway dodge,
But cannot Bell dislodge—
His f..l I nicely planned it.

Since all my schemes have failed,
And serious loss entailed,
On purse and reputation;
I've come to this conclusion
That Russell's a delusion,
And politics—vexation.

Without delay I'll hasten back,
Resume my practice as a Quack
In New York's famous city,
And to my patients press relate
The story of my hapless fate,
And thus excite their pity.

Farewell, ungrateful Russell,
I've had a mighty tussle
To set you right,
From such dill alight
I've worked thee naughty Russell.

"QUIZ."

Miscellaneous.

A Letter from D'Arcy McGee.

Montreal, Friday, 12th June, 1863.

DEAR SIR,—You will not suppose—none of my friends will suppose—that because I have been associated by the force of circumstances, and the folly of my opponents, with the other successful candidates of this city, that I must perforce have adopted all their politics and abandoned my own. Such is not the fact. But though claiming to be a liberal politician—in the true sense of the the word—I do not know but that I hold fast by many political maxims which some who call themselves Conservatives have hardly the moral courage to avow.

Nor are these maxims new-found or new fangled with me. You remember the New Era, and its strenuous advocacy of a Canadian nationality, under one of the sons of her Majesty. It is true that was a theory —a prospectus—but we must have speculation before practice, in politics, as in every other experimental science. You may have observed how often I have spoken of the necessity "of asserting the Monarchial principle" in our form of government.—What I mean by this is the assertion of the principle of political stability—the principle of authority in the head, with freedom in the members. Perhaps you may wish me to indicate a little more practically what I mean. Well, I mean that the time seems to me to have come on this continent—that the race has reached that point of experimental progress in politics—when it would be wise and proper to establish our power under the immediate custody of a royal Prince. A Viceroyalty, a Dukedom, a Principality, or a Kingdom of Canada, would surely be as noble and important a heritage for one of the sons of her Majesty as the propped-up treaty-made throne of Greece. We have not the far antiquity of Greece, but neither has Greece, nor any other European State, our capacious future. I mean by the assertion of the monarchial principle that we should give that principle —what we are not just now giving it—a fair field and fair trial. In the Upper Chamber of our Legislature we recognise property and mature age—two Conservative qualifications—as essential to membership, but it may be questioned if the elective principle ought ever to be, under a monarchial head, the seminal principle of both houses of the Legislature. Many thoughtful members of both parties admit that the change wrought in 1854 was of very doubtful expediency; and if it increases the practical difficulties of our system, why not go frankly back to the old practice of life-membership, or some modification of it? If, also, we are to give the monarchial principle a fair trial, we should be prepared to consider, with that view, the nature of our land tenures, the possibility of infusing the hereditary principle into the transmission of property, and of reforming in accordance with these our existing system of popular education. Our present school system is the democracy of boys, which naturally enlarges into a democracy of men; it is American, or Prusso-American, rather than English, Irish or Scotch; it is founded on a low and barren utilitarianism rather than on the high and tried ground of our ancient Christian civilization. It must lead us whither it is going; it must make of Canada an unripe Republic, wanting only a few more seasons to fall into the common current of all unbalanced democracies. Understand me, I do not undervalue the democratic principle as one of the living and essential forces of every free society, but it must have a counterpoise given for its own sake, otherwise it runs wild into anarchy, to be caught and tamed down by the first strong-handed despot who may arise.

I offer you these glimpses into what I venture to call my own politics, and I beg to assure you they are not hazarded without reflection, and are not put forward without an earnest desire to influence healthily the public opinion of the Province. The times in which we live call aloud for serious attention of principle; and nothing will do so much to calm the angry and petty passions of partizan strife, as the frequent contemplation of the essential grounds on which all strife first commenced here, when the world began, rested and endured. I can't say I am entirely in any dominant party in this country which holds opinions the opposite of these, but I believe there are individuals who so hold. And as these individuals mold their opinions it is to me of the utmost importance to contend as against the extravagance and waste which have marked our past public expenditure. If the maintenance of such a position constitutes a really "independent member," then, I promise you, so far as I am concerned, you will find me resolute to play that part.

I should wish these opinions to reach our friends everywhere, and you may give any extract of them you please to say one likely to value them. I throw them out not for the purpose of controversy, but as food for reflection. I have found them (at least I fancy so) a healthy mental sustenance—I would freely share them with all Canada—if they could do other any of our fellow-subjects any good.

Faithfully yours,
THOS. D'ARCEY McGEE.

How Wind Instruments affect the Health.

Mr. Alphonse Sax has written an article in La France Musicale, regarding the healthfulness of different instruments, from which we translate some passages. He says:

"I hear it said every day—and it seems that physicians agree with the popular belief—that wind instruments, and particularly brass ones, predispose to pulmonary complaints. * * * I do not pretend to speak on matters of medical science; I only wish to oppose real facts to an opinion which I think to be erroneous. * * * The son of a manufacturer of wind instruments, a manufacturer and performer myself, I have been brought into contact with thousands of artists who play on these instruments which are thought to be so injurious to the health; and yet only three of these have, so far as I know, died of lung complaints. Besides this, it is important to know—and the fact has been proved—that those were not the victims of their profession, but excesses of all kinds, to which they were addicted.

"Persons who practice wind instruments, are, in general, distinguished—and anybody can verify the statement—by a broad chest and shoulders, an unequivocal sign of vigor In the traveling bands that pass through our cities, who has not seen women playing the horn, the cornet, the trumpet, and even the trombone and ophiclide, and noticed that they all enjoyed perfect health, and exhibited a considerable development of the thorax? In an orchestra a curious circumstance can be noticed; and that is the corpulance, the strength which the players of wind instruments exhibit, and the spare frames of the disciples of Paganini. The same may be said, with more reason, of pianists.

"If I may be allowed to cite a personal instance, I will say that our family of twelve children was condemned, by the faculty, to pulmonary consumption. This sinister prediction of the physicians was realized by eight of us; but the other four—those who from early childhood blew upon wind instruments—still remain in good health, with every appearance of long life. Artists who play upon wind instruments are generally possessed of good appetites, easy digestion, and, after copious meals, they are able to play without fatigue or inconvenience, four or five hours. If, by chance, they are forced to suspend their use for a time, they lose their appetite, the digestion becomes difficult, and the general well-being and regular functions of the organs are disturbed. I have proven all this in my own person. In 1847, from certain causes, I was deprived of my flute and all other instruments for three months, and I became ill from the lack of that pulmonary exercise to which I was accustomed. When the crisis of my illness was over, I resumed my instrument, and my convalescence was so rapid that Dr. Requin was astonished. That wind instruments may produce the best effects, it is important that the professor should teach his pupils the mode of breathing. Respiration should be taken with the whole chest; first, because a large quantity of wind permits the best execution of a musical phrase; and secondly, because by this kind of exercise, the respiratory organs may acquire strength and energy.

"The piano, the organ, the violin, obliged the artist unconsciously to nervously contract his chest. In a musical phrase which demands sentiment, soul, the executant appears to wish to transfer his own life to the inanimate instrument under his hands, and render it, at will, sad or gay, full of excitement or rapture, as he is himself excited or rapt. He identifies himself with it; they exist through each other, and are but one. It is only on this condition that he becomes a true artist. But what does this condition cost him? He has sought to transfer his own life into the instrument; and might not one think, indeed, that his life is passing, when his troubled and gasping respiration is observed.

"The grave influences upon the health do not, cannot exist for those who perform on wind instruments. However instinct with emotion the musical phrase may be, the full employment of the lungs is indispensable to the production of the sounds. * * * We may therefore conclude that if the practice of string instruments is prejudicial to the health, especially in persons predisposed to affections of the lungs, the practice of wind instruments is, on the contrary, of a nature to prevent these affections, or to diminish their violence in such persons. We should say that the exercise of wind instruments is to the organs of respiration what gymnastic exercise is to the body in general.—Musical Times.

A Terrible Murder.

DRUNKENNESS AND BRUTALITY OF A SOLDIER OF SEVERN COUNTRY.

A soldier, whose name is Samuel Slater, belonging to the 50th Pennsylvania, a portion of which passed through the city on Monday the 8th inst., was found dead on the line contiguous to Simcoe street, about o'clock on the Tuesday morning following. Upon examination, it was discovered that he had a most frightful wound on the abdomen, just below the navel, which evidently produced his death, and which had the appearance of having been made with a two-edged bowie knife.

The body was borne into the undertaking establishment of Mr. Scarth, close by, and Coroner Doherty held an inquest thereon.

The deceased was, apparently, only about nineteen years of age. It was testified that he was on Simcoe Street in the evening with about seventy-five dollars in his possession, and was seen in one or two bar rooms that infest the edge to head of Simcoe, between Elm and Piano streets. When discovered, there was no money found on his person, and there can be no doubt but that he was murdered and then robbed.

Whether he was murdered on the affected in one of the haunts to left lately to mention; the probability is the former, as at about one o'clock, or less for the police were heard by the inmates of the Clifton House, which appeared to emanate from some one midway of the square, and about the same hour a crowd was observed standing in front of one of the disreputable houses, and an individual seen lying in the gutter. There is very little doubt but after the murder the body was carried to the tiny oodles and placed thereon. The verdict of the jury was that the deceased came to his death by means of a stab in the abdomen by some person unknown.

The police of that beat, if they kept faithful watch, should be enabled to throw a little light on the mysterious and terrible murder. Burglaries and robberies are becoming quite too frequent, and now it would appear we are to have the crime of murder added thereto. If the policemen were not kept until so late an hour dancing attendance on the Police Court, thus depriving them of their necessary rest, it is highly probable they would be enabled to keep a more faithful watch at night, and thus prevent a recurrence of robbery, burglary and murder.

Proposed Broadway Murder.

The New York Evening Post of the 11th says:—Henon W. Beecher, alias Zenas Curtis, was yesterday arranged at Police Court before Justice Dowling, charged with an attempt to murder Gordon W. Plumb, a diamond-broaker, at 512 Broadway. The facts, which have been already published at length, are reiterated on this trial, and may be briefly thus recapitulated:—

The prisoner, Beecher, was staying at Power's Hotel about two weeks ago and there met one George W. Howard. He proposed to the latter a plan by which they could gain a large amount of money, by only murdering a man. Howard appeared to lean favorably toward the scheme, and learned that the intended victim was Mr. Plumb, just named. The plan was thus:—Beecher was to induce Plumb to display as large a stock of diamonds as possible, and at the appointed moment was to blind him with snuff, while his accomplice, Howard, was to enter, knock the brooker on the head, and aid in securing the plunder. If they were caught in the attempt they were to saw their way out of the prison with implements provided and secreted on their persons.

When Howard had learnd enough of the plot he unfolded it to the proper authorities. The result was that Beecher was led on to the day for the consumation of his villiny, the brooker being put on his guard. At the right moment the prisoner was arrested. The whole plan was foolish in the extreme, and must have failed of success, though a terrible crime might have been committed before detection fell on the perpetrators.

A Snake Story.

"During the Florida war," said the speaker, "I was in the American army. One day I shouldered my gun and went in pursuit of game. In passing through a swamp I saw something a few feet ahead of me, lying upon the ground, which had every appearance of a log, it being some forty feet in length and about one foot in diameter. So positive was I that it was nothing but a log that I paid no attention to it; the fact is I would have sworn before a court of justice that it was a log and nothing else. You see, I never heard of snakes growing to such huge dimensions; and, the fact is, I never should have believed it if I had. Well, between me and the log as I took it to be, was a miary place, which it was necessary for me to avoid. I therefore placed the but of my gun on the ground ahead of me, and springing upon it, lit right on the top of what do you suppose?" "A boa-constructor?" said one. "No." "An anaconda?" said another. "No." "What then could it have been?" asked a third. "Just what I supposed it to be—a log," said the wag.

☞ The Ministerialists in Upper Canada are glorifying over the return of so many members in the present election in favor of the ministry. We have no objections to their enjoying a short lived comfort; but before another week passes away they will change their tone to a doleful whine, and then begin the next impracticable outcry for a dissolution of the Union. Every constituency known to be safe for the ministry are placed first in the election, and, as a matter of course, the preponderance of members returned in favor of the ministry was to be looked for, but next week the opposition will show their hands. The ministers defeated, and the certainty of the shattered remains of the Cabinet meeting in Parliament to face a majority of fifteen against them.—Sentinel.

MR. JAMES GORDON BENNETT SUED
The New York Herald publishes a letter from Mrs. Harriet Kinsted, widow of the late Col. THE MAIDEN'S LEAP.—A daughter of the first Earl of Cowrie was courted by a young Highland gentleman, much to her father in point of fortune. The young lady however, hearing the well-known steps of her mother hastening up stairs, ran to the leads, and took a desperate leap of "nine feet four inches," over a chasm of sixty feet from the ground, alighted on the battlements of the other tower, a feeble distance into her own chamber, exceptionally [illegible] Her mother, having in vain sought her in her lover's chamber, came into her room, where finding her seemingly asleep, she apologized for her unjust suspicion. The young lady eloped the following night with her Highland lad, and was married. The climbing between the towers is still known under the appellation of "The Maiden's Leap."—Glasgow Courier.

SINGULAR APPLICATION TO A CORONER.—An application has been made from a gentleman residing at Lichfield to R. Hooper, Esq., coroner for South Staffordshire, for advice under the following circumstances; The gentleman refered to, states that a "treasure trove," in the form of a number of silver coins, weighing altogether about nine or ten pounds, was found last week in a field at, Comberford, near Tamworth. The coins are principally of the reigns of the Charleses and Elizabeth, and must have lain in the place in which they were found for nearly 300 years. The gentleman asks for instructions from Mr. Hooper as to what steps he shall take, so that he may arrange for the disposal of the silver. The holding of an inquest in such a case would, it is true, seem to be somewhat unusual in the present day, but it is quite within the scope of the duty of the ancient office of coroner, and we believe that under the instructions of the Lords of the Treasury such an inquiry will take place. —Birmingham Post.

ROMAN CATHOLICS AND MEMBERS OF THE ESTABLISHED CHURCH IN IRELAND.—Returns have been issued of the number of Roman Catholics in Ireland in the years 1834 and 1861, of the number of members of the Established Church in Ireland in the years 1834 and 1861; and showing the proportion of Roman Catholics to members of the Established Church in 1834 and 1861 respectively. The number of Roman Catholics in Ireland in 1834 was 6,436,060; and in 1861 4,505,265. The number of members of the Established Church in Ireland in 1834 was 853,160 and in 1861, 691,872. The proportion of Roman Catholics to members of the Established Church in 1834 was 100 Roman Catholics to 13, 25 members of the Established Church; and in 1861, 100 Roman Catholics to 15,35 members of the Established Church.

THE LUMBER TRADE.—We cannot deny that we are suffering severely in our lumber regions for the want of a market for our coarse lumber. The Americans, on account of their troubles have not made any purchases in this Province the past year, and being unable to compete with the North of Europe we can't ship it to England, but serious as the matter is, it is gratifying to know that the "Canadian Pain Destroyer" is a great favorite among our lumbermen, for curing coughs, sudden colds, cramps in the stomach, burns, bruises, frost-bites, chilblains, &c., and they do not depend upon a foreign market for it, it is sold by all Druggists, at 25 cts per bottle.

THE HECTOR IMPUDENCE.—As the Deputy Sheriff in a Western Court was rapping to secure the silence of two men who were talking one of them rose and said to the judge, "May it please your honor, it is impossible for gentlemen to conversation test cannot be allowed to make such a noise," an effort of impudence that brought down the house.

An orator holding forth in favor of woman concluded thus—

"O, my hearers depend upon it not ing beats a good wife,"

"I beg your pardon," replied one of the female auditors, "a drunken husband."

Peterborough Examiner.

THURSDAY, JULY 2ND, 1863.

THE RESULT.

We complete the list of Members returned to Parliament, and we make 46 in favor of the Ministry, in Upper Canada, and 19 against them. In Lower Canada we have 23 for, and 37 against,—making in Upper Canada a majority of 27 in favor of the Ministry, and in Lower Canada a majority of 10 against them; leaving a majority in both sections of 17 in favor of the Ministry.

In the above calculation we class the Independent members against the Government, but there is no doubt but that a majority of these may be reckoned to support the Government. For all practical purposes the majority is sufficient to carry on the affairs of the country, and we look forward to some good being effected by the Administration,—having, as they do, that they have received such a generous response from the West especially. The Leader acknowledges that a majority from Upper Canada have voted confidence in the Government, but states that its fate is in the hands of the Independent members of the House,—"a class of men who always make uncertain partizans." The opposition prints are taken aback at the result of the appeal to the country, yet prate about certain defeat of the Ministers when the House meets, and all sort of forebodings and prophesyings. In fact we are given to understand that no set of men have a right to rule the country just now but the late Coalition. The appeal just made to the country has resulted, we are told by the Review, "in the return from Upper Canada of a large majority of men imbued with the most narrow spirit of sectional bigotry." And this is the fashion in which some of the journals of the same stamp vent their chagrin at the routing the corrupt coalition has had. If the elections had resulted in favor of the opposition, it would have been pronounced as the deliberate verdict of the country in favor of the previous Government.

All very fine, but it is amusing to see how readily falsehood is used for party purposes, and with what facility these elastic journalists can transform themselves into champions for the truth and for purity at elections. Never have we heard or read so much from the tory press, of the wickedness of spending money at elections. From the Leader down, whenever a Grit gained the election the success was attributed to money—the volition of the people had nothing to do with it. So accustomed have this party been to secure elections by this means that they at once attribute the success on the other side to this, rather than to the proper cause. They cannot, they will not see, in the elections of Upper Canada in 1863 the voice of the people condemning the policy of the party which has so long ruled the country not in accordance to the wishes of the people. The elections of 1861 secured it a new lease of power, by a small majority in Upper Canada. The event was celebrated, as our readers may remember, by feasting and speechifying all over the country. Now what a change in two short years. If the present administration should pursue a similar course of going through the land, and leading the people for their generous support, the hue and cry would be raised at once against them; their adulations and self-glorifications would be condemned, and possibly they would be reminded that a haughty spirit precedes a fall.

We sincerely trust that the tory or Conservative party will learn as well as teach that in future they will not only say it is bad to secure seats by means of money but refrain from doing what they say is bad—that they will not only denounce the grits for abandoning Representation by Population, but sincerely advocate the principle as well. In this way we may make improvement in our political morality—which certainly requires amendment, and we shall rejoice if this is attained.

We congratulate the party on the splendid victory achieved unparalled since 1848. May our rulers have wisdom to employ the power given in their hands, and the confidence reposed in them for the good of the country—May sectional and personal legislation be lost sight of in the public weal—Then will our rulers receive the approbation of their constituents, and may expect as they doubtless will receive a longer lease of power.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the advertisement published in our columns to-day, announcing a Concert to be given in the Methodist Church, in this Town, on Thursday evening next,—the proceeds to be applied towards the purchase money of an excellent Organ, built by Mr. Warren, of Montreal. From the array of musical talent to be brought together on this occasion, we bespeak a rich treat to our friends.

The list of the names of the pupils of the Grammar and Union School that distinguished themselves at the late examination will appear in our next issue,—the returns as yet not being quite complete.

THE TRENT DIVISION.

We publish to-day the address of Mr. Flint to the Electors of the Trent Division. The will [illegible] being a candidate. He will be in the nation on Monday next when [illegible] will be a large [illegible] A large central committee comprising men of all shades of politics and men of standing and position—has been constituted in Peterborough with instructions to communicate with the townships. Mr. Flint is very popular in the lower section of the Division, and will have a large vote in this county. Mr. Grover can not have a chance with such a candidate as Mr. Flint, and if he is determined to press a vote he will find that it will be only to be beaten.

Exception is taken and we think justly, to the getting up of the Convention that nominated Mr. Grover, and for fixing its sitting in Norwood. Many Townships were not represented at all, and the members that did meet were all from one corner of the county.

The following is Mr. Flints' central committee.

THE WAR.

The Confederate army so long acting on the defensive, seems now to change its operation and a some the aggressive

We noticed last week that both Pennsylvania and Maryland had been invaded. This week the news are confirmed, and further that depredations are being committed by the rebels, in destroying Railroad Bridges and seizing stores and provisions. A large force is said to be between Baltimore and Washington, and both Cities it is thought will be attacked by them. To add to the difficulty of the Federals at the present critical juncture General Hooker has been relieved of his command, and General Meade appointed in his place—the latter officer is but little known, and has no prestige. If he does better than his predecessors, it is more than can be looked for. It is more than probable he is not equal to the important appointment of Commander of the army of the Potomac. It is very likely we shall hear of some severe fighting soon.

The Governor of Pennsylvania has called out 60 000 men. The citizens are responding to the call, but before these can be qualified and made ready for the line, General Lee will have left his mark north of the Potomac.

At Port Hudson the Federals have recently had a severe repulse and loss amounting to 700 men.

At Vicksburg General Grant continues his siege with energy, having reached within 30 yards of the Rebels works. The besieged are said to be subsisting on half rations and cannot hold out much longer. That Grant is a heroic, brave commander, none will deny, but that he will succeed as soon as it is expected we do not believe.

At Portland a daring act was made in the capture of a revenue cutter by a confederate crew, which not being able to carry off they blew up.

We regret to find owing to an oversight in neglecting to read the proof, that several inaccuracies have appeared in last weeks, advertisements which we correct to-day. In that for an adjourned session of the Peace, in place of the 16 July, it should have read 6 July.

In the notice to contractors in place of 30th July it should have been 3d July.

THE SCHOOL EXAMINATION.

On Wednesday and Thursday last the semi-annual examination of the Grammar and Union School took place. There was less than the usual interest taken, which was apparent from the few parents and visitors who attended.

It is said by the examiners that the scholars evinced a creditable knowledge of the subjects submitted, yet it was evident that there was a lack of that proficiency and thoroughness to be expected from the appliances at command. We have an edifice probably not surpassed in the Province of its kind, every apparatus and facility required; a large class of teachers, male and female, to whom liberal salaries are given; a board of Trustees desirous of carrying out the intention of the establishment, and yet the fact cannot be disguised, that the School does not give general satisfaction to the majority of the ratepayers of the town. They cheerfully would pay the required sum to maintain the efficiency of the School, if an equivalent in the shape of education for their children is given, but to be taxed heavily and not satisfied with the attainments made by their children is rather more than human nature will suffer long. Is it not a fact that the private schools are flourishing at the expense of the Union School?

We direct the attention of the School Board to these matters, and invite them to adopt some measures to remove the matters complained of. The Board has passed a resolution for the establishment of Ward Schools—a measure we believe called for, as some of the classes of smaller children especially are too crowded. The importance of promptness in action in educational matters cannot be too urgently insisted on. We therefore again respectfully request the Board to look more into the affairs of the Union School.

Correction.

In referring last week to the Warden's Address, we inadvertently accused that gentlemen of saying that the Town had no claim on the timber and piers of the Bridge at the north of the Town,—in place of which he said that he had heard that the Town had no claim to either. We know that Boundary Roads and Bridges are under the control of County Councils, and it is in this sense the Town can have no claim on anything upon Boundaries. The Warden, however, explains that his object in referring to the matter at all was that the Council should take the matter up, thinking that probably something might be done to complete the Bridge. The whole undertaking, from beginning to end, was a piece of extra vagant folly. It is found expensive enough to keep up one bridge across the Otonabee.

The members of the Grand Division sons of Temperance who put up at the Huffman House, were so well pleased with the establishment, that the following resolution was unanimously adopted.

"Resolved that we have much pleasure in bearing testimony to the Superiority of the Huffman House in the Town of Peterboro, its table being well furnished, attentive and courteous waiters and charges moderate, being all that could be desired in a first class house."

Parliament stands further adjourned to the 11th day of August, when it is likely to meet to make provisions for the various wants of the public service, and to finish the matters which should have been done in May last, and would have been done but for John A. McDonald and his party—We may thank the opposition for the extra cost to the country.

A meeting of Capt. Smith's Infantry Company will be held on the 3rd inst at the armory over the Bank of Toronto at 8 P. M.

The Grand Division of the Sons of Temperance held their annual meeting in this town last week—Two public meetings were held and the delegates made some excellent speeches and powerful appeals on Temperance. The order is in a flourishing condition and doing a good work. Success to it.

There was no meeting of the Town Council this week.

The next monthly meeting of the Fire Company takes place on Tuesday next.

Personal.—Robert Flaven, a young Vermonter, eleven years of age, has just been released from imprisonment at the South, and has undergone some very sore experience. Several months since he was captured on the Mississippi river by a band of guerrillas and marched to Vicksburg distance of 175 miles. Thence he was taken to Richmond, and while there he determined to examine the gunboats, which he heard were constructing there. About ten o'clock in the morning, after the morning meal had been dealt out, he slipped by the guard and walked down to the navyyard, where the two ironclads are in process of construction. He remained there all day, with his wits about him and eyes wide open. He observed that the vessels were pierced for eight guns, and was told that they were to float on the 12th of June. After getting, tired of the yard, he made his way to the Tredegar Iron Works where they were casting shell and cannon. This had been suggested to him by his fellow-prisoners. He then went back to the prison, and, slipping past the guard, returned to his companions, who plied him with questions as to his luck. Another day he was taken by a sergeant of police to the capitol, where he saw Jeff. Davis sitting in a red-covered chair. He also saw the "pretender" pass the train several times in a buggy. The little fellow has not seen or heard from his parents since his capture, and is consequently now enacting the role of "Jephet in search of a father."

A correspondent, writing from Vicksburg, says the Confederates have a gun which dominates over the river, and is a persistent bother to the Federals. They call him "Whistling Dick." No gunboat has any business where this terrible gun can get a shot at it. It shoots a ball two and one-half feet long, steel pointed, weighing two hundred and fifty pounds, can tear through our best iron-clads, and is thought to be the best gun of the war.

A Confession of Defeat.

[illegible] a fact now patent to everybody that the great Conservative party of Upper Ca[illegible] in the [illegible] the Macdonald-Cartier Government, by which the party is most justly [illegible] Having voted on every occasion to stifle enquiry into the abuses which were going on, and having done its utmost to resist the introduction of a better system of management, the party generally must share the odium of the combined [illegible] of the leaders. To say that Conservatives generally are deficient in those conscientious convictions by which the conduct of some of them must to be entirely [illegible] is absurd, and the supposition is not to be entertained. But their great error was in being over-indulgent to their [illegible] J. A. Macdonald and Galt are good Conservatives, therefore they are not likely to do anything wrong. Cartier and Cauchon are bosom friends and colleagues with [illegible] and therefore, it may be expected that they are honest and capable ministers. Andrews if they should do a little job now and then, why, must we not still support them? It is pleasant to have our own friend in power, and besides, if they were out, the rascally Grits would be sure to come in. Consciously or unconsciously, it is certain that by such reasoning as this the Conservatives of Upper Canada were drawn on, year after year, to restain men [illegible] whom they ought long ago to have withdrawn their support. Had the party generally, with bold and open honesty of purpose, at this dishonored connection with the men who have so disgraced it, some of their leaders would of course have took to the shades: but new ones would soon have arisen, and the Conservative cause would have gained strength in the country from a sympathy with its prompt cutting loose from the transgressors. But what a different result do we now behold. Having so long defended corruption, the party name of Conservative is almost synonymous with Corruptionist. The doings of Galt and Cauchon make a burden too heavy for any party to bear. We see the consequence, ie the overwhelming defeat of the Conservatives in Upper Canada at the polls.—But powerful as this first named cause undoubtedly was in its operation, there was still another which went a long way to bring about the result we have noted. It consisted in the hostility which the Upper Canadian Conservative party has been in the habit of displaying to the assertion of Upper Canadian influence in the Government. It is apparently incredible that men should be found fighting against their own people, and against the interests of their own locality. But the thing is not so difficult to explain, after all. General interests were sacrificed, it is true, but individuals gained by the operation for all that. Was it not better that we should all submit to more or less of injustice and degredation at the hands of Cartier and his crew, than that the Conservatives should be driven from power? And then, was it not necessary to magnify the rights and claims of Lower Canada, and to decray those of Upper Canada, if for nothing else than to be in contradiction to the Grits, who was always harping on about "justice to Upper Canada?" The danger arising from this false and indefensible position of antagonism to home interests was not fully perceived till too late. And who led the Conservatives into this false position? Who but the Hon. John a Macdonald?—a man whom it appears they still delight to honour, notwithstanding all that his bad generalship has done to injure their cause. To many people, this charge of bad generalship will appear a new sort of a charge against John A., who has heretofore been considered an admirable tactician in his own peculiar way. But events already past go far to substantiate the charge; and events now sure to follow will shortly drive home the proof with overwhelming force.—He has been for many years the upholder of Lower Canadian influence against Upper Canadian, and he was general enough in one sense to draw his party with him; many of them, we doubt not, against their own convictions. But already there is a mutiny in the camp, and the Conservatives of the Western Peninsula refuse to follow him in such a course any longer. Even while declaring their faith in him as a leader, they take care to add to their profession a clause to the effect that they do not by any means indorse the present unfair and one-sided arrangement. Some of them would pitch him over immediately without remorse if they were sure of any one else upon whom they could unite. We say that for the present defeated and broken Conservative ranks in upper Canada, the Hon. John A. Macdonald is mainly responsible. We say more than this, we say that the Conservatives of the Western Peninsula are themselves convinced of the fact.

We have been led to make these remarks after the perusal of the Brantford Courier of June 29th, which makes a plain enough confession of a general defeat; though it studiously avoids the right way of accounting for the same. We append hereto a short paragraph taken from one of its articles. It will be seen that that darling idea of the Conservatives, of a coalition with opponents when too weak to sustain a Government of their own, is not wholly abandoned. It still seems to "loom up" in the distance before Conservative eyes.—But it is not destined to be realized. We want no Coalition. What we want and should like to see, is a fighting spirit of resignation to a somewhat lengthened sojourn in the "cold shades" on the part of men who so abused their trust when in the sunshine of prosperity and power.—London News.

Although the Conservatives have not gained all that we could wish, yet it is pretty evident that their hands will be materially strengthed by the elections. There will be enough Opposition members returned to give them a good working majority, or at least to cause the formation of a Moderate or Coalition Ministry. The gross conduct of John S, and his colleagues has thrown several talented and influential members into the position of independants, whilst the Lower Canadina losses will render them wholly unable to carry on a party Government. The appeal to the people will then have accomplished this good, and the look to Washington statesment will no longer bid at the head of our affairs. We may now expect a good Militia bill and a sound progressive policy on the part of the Government. Still we must regret that so fair a chance for securing to Canada a sound conservative Ministry has been allowed to pass away.—Brantford Courier, June 20.

A Woman and her married daughter in New Jersey were both delivered of babies on the, same day—fine boys. In the confusion attending the affair, both babies were placed in the same cradel, and which really belongs to the mother, and which to the daughter, must ever remain a mystery.

Recognition.

From the London Herald.

[illegible] from the [illegible] of [illegible] for a [illegible] meeting. From such a spirit of temperance [illegible] we hope good effects may [illegible] ingdon. But without any such entanglement as might by possibility result from mediation, it is in our power, and surely it is our duty, to withdraw the encouragement which we are actually giving to the prosecution of such a war by tacitly allowing—what few men in England believe—that the hold of the Federal government upon the Southern States is not finally and irretrievably lost. So long as our public policy permits the North to say that Europe does not consider, or at least has pronounced, its enterprise hopeless, there can be little hope that such enterprise will be forthwith abandoned. On the other hand the recognition of the Southern Confederacy by France and England would inflict the heaviest discouragement on the war party in the North. To dream of resisting it would be madness; to reflect its significance impossible; it would be necessary for the northern government and the republican party to confess to themselves that the termination of the struggle and the acknowledgment of Southern independence was merely a matter of time; and as the prolongation of the war could not affect its issue, all that could be done was to end it on the best terms that could be obtained; in all probability, European recognition alone would terminate the war within six months. European recognition is withheld by the obstinate refusal of the English Cabinet. On them, therefore, almost as much as on the government of Washington, rests the awful responsibility entailed by the continuance of this savage, fruitless and fratricidal conflict; on them and on those, who, stifling their own strong misgivings, support them in the one-sided inaction which they call "a dignified neutrality."

A Fearful Record.

An army officer writes from Louisiana to the Boston Transcript that the camps of the black regiments in Gen. Bank's army are models of neatness and order, and that but one man in the whole command has been punished for misconduct. Never were men seen to fight with more dauntless courage and devotion than these raw recruits. He adds:

"Every man presenting himself to be recruited strips to the skin, to be surveyed by the surgeon. We do not accept one half that offer. On Tuesday, out of 82, only 33 were accepted. I have directed my surgeons to keep accurate lists of the causes of rejection. They report to me that not one in fifteen is free from marks of severe lashing. More than one half are rejected because of disability arising from lashing with whips and the biting of dogs on their calves and thighs. It is frightful. Hundreds of them have welts on their backs as large as one of your largest fingers. I intend to have these memoranda collected and published with certificates of surgeons. —N. Y. Tribune.

Vallandigham "Played Out."

ANOTHER CANDIDATE: A WAR DEMOCRAT.

From the N. Y. Tribune.

If any room for doubt of Vallandigham's signal defeat had existed, the nomination of John Brough as his competitor would have effectively dispelled it. Mr. Brough was known in other days as the ablest editor and canvasser in the ranks of the Jacksonian Democracy of Ohio. Some ten to fifteen years since he withdrew from all active participation in political strife, and devoted his entire energies to the construction and operation of railroads, by which he is understood to have secured a competence. But though still regarded as a Democrat, he never swerved or hesitated when the Union was assailed by armed treason, but threw his whole soul into the cause of unconditional loyalty. He has already spoken ably and forcibly on the right side, and will doubtless continue to speak through the canvass now fairly opened. We believe he will carry Cincinnati, Dayton, and nearly every other city in the State, with a majority on the home vote, while of the army vote of fifty to eighty thousand, Vallandigham's share will not be worth the trouble of counting. The following correspondence by telegraph forcibly illustrates this branch of the subject:

Headquarters of the Army of the Cumberland, Murfreesboro, June 17, 1863.

Hon. Wm. Dennison:

This army greets John Brough. Ohio soldiers will give him greater greeting in October.

J. A. GARFIELD, B. G.

REPLY.

General J. A. Garfield, Murfreesboro, Tennessee:

Telegram received. The loyal people of Ohio rejoice at the hearty approval, by our noble army of Brough's nomination.—One hundred thousand majority will ratify the nomination in October. Say to the army to defeat the enemy in the front and the loyal people of the North will defeat them in the rear.

W. DENNISON.

Columbus, June 18, 1863.

There is every reason to believe that the Tribune is right in this instance. Vallandigham is most undoubtedly "played out."—Times.

Too Bad!—We are informed on what we consider good authority that the Hon. J. A. Macdonald had remitted $500 to assist Mr. Sidney Smith in being returned for this County, on the distinct understanding that the money was to be retained out of Mr. Smith's sessional allowance. The letter contained the money was addressed to Thomas White, Esq., Lindsay, but for some reason which we cannot comprehend, the letter was not delivered till the contest was over. The question is, now, whether the money shall belong to Mr. Smith or to Mr. J. A. Macdonald, seeing there is now no prospect of Mr. Smith's being able to refund the money out of his sessional pay. It is really too bad!—Lindsay Post.

A great principle. The principle of electricity lay locked beyond the reach of science for long centuries. Indeed at this day it is but indefinitely comprehended: and it is even doubtful whether it is considerable to pursue a research in occult science which may never be attained by any beneficial results to mankind; but the principle which actuates a man to purchase a bottle of Downs' Elixir and Henry's Liniment and present them to his wife and family, is one which should excite our warmest admiration. For Coughs, Colds, &c. the Elixir is the most excellent remedy that can be given, and as a Pain-Killer the Vermont Liniment is unequalled. D. BUTTERLAND.

The Mississippi and its Tributaries.

The Mississippi ("father of waters") is [illegible] for the [illegible] of North [illegible] which [illegible] 6,500 miles [illegible] 00 feet, from [illegible] through its great central plain [illegible] and after a winding course of 2,160 miles, falls through a swampy delta into the Gulf of Mexico. Its main tributaries on the right or Rocky Mountain side, in which they take their rise, are the Missouri—a river even longer, larger, and having more affluents than the Mississippi itself—the Arkansas, having also many affluents and the Red river; whilst on its left its chief tributary is the Ohio, with its numerous feeders from the Western slopes of the Alleghanies. Between the Rocky Mountains on the west and the Appalachians on the east, therefore, the great central basin of the Missouri, Mississippi, and Ohio, having a area of more than a million square miles, contains every description of soil and scenery—prairie, barren and wooded; watered by innumerable streams and navigable rivers; and possessing every variety of climate, from the cold[illegible] temperate highlands of Nebraska to the sub-tropical warmth of the Gulf of Mexico. The Mississippi we have said, has a winding course of 3,160 miles, but if the Missouri be taken as the main stream, its length is 4,260 miles; while that of the Arkansas is 2,000 and the Ohio more than 1,000 miles. The breadth of the Missouri and Mississippi at their confluence is about half a mile, and the main stream downwards is very little more. Though gentle, the current is by no means sluggish; and that during floods from the melting of the snow in the higher latitudes, the river sweeps towards immense quantities of mud, driftwood and other debris. The Missouri is said to be navigable from the Great Falls in the Rocky Mountains to the sea, a distance of 4,000 miles; the Mississippi, from those of St. Anthony, 2,240; while the Ohio, being connected by a system of canals with Lake Erie, and thence to Lake Ontario carries out a water communication between the Gulfs of Mexico and St. Lawrence. The Delta of the Mississippi, which projects itself forward into the Gulf of Mexico, is a low and unhealthy region, nearly 14,000 square miles in area and full of lagoons, creeks, and pestilential marshes.—Page's Physical Geography.

A Gigantic Bird.

Naturalists are delighted to read that at last a Moa has been seen in New-Zeland. The Moa is a walking not a flying bird, supposed, from the numerous skeletons which have been found of it, to grow from eight to nine feet high. It has been hitherto believed to be extinct, though it was known that within the memory of men now living on the island it had been killed and eaten by the natives. It was always hoped that, in the unexplored parts of the island, some lost specimen of this nearly extinct race might yet be found alive; and now it seems that a gold miner, sitting by his campfire, saw one peering at him from the edge of a near hill. He took it at first to be a man, but presently saw it gravely starting off. The track or foot-print, of this great bird showed "three claws, and about a foot behind, the mark of a pad, and behind that again the mark of a spur." A reward of twenty-five hundred dollars has been offered for the bird, alive or dead; and if the miner told the truth, we may yet see a living Moa—a member of a tribe once sufficiently numerous in New Zeland to be a source of dread to the natives.

Great Cavalry Fight between Pleasanton's and Stuart's Forces.

Headquarters of the Army of the Potomac, June 23.—General Pleasanton had the greatest cavalry fight that has yet taken place. Early on Sunday morning General Pleasanton advanced on the enemy at a point beyond Middleburg, being supported by Gen. Barse's division of infantry. A fight ensued which was kept up all day, Gen. Stuart being driven back steadily with heavy loss clear into Ashby's Gap, beyond Upperville, a distance of twelve miles.

General Pleasanton captured two guns, (one a Blakeley,) three caissons, and blew up another caisson. He also captured upward of a hundred prisoners, including one lieutenant-colonel, one major and five other officers. The enemy left their dead and wounded on the field, and in the Town of Upperville a large number of wounded rebels were found.

Gen. Pleasanton describes it as a most disastrous day to the rebel cavalry.

Our cavalry behaved with the greatest intrepidity, and, as usual, did terrible execution with the saber.

Gen. Stuart has fortified Ashby's Gap, and will probably hold it against our further advance. Considering the extensive nature of the fight our loss is light, and will not exceed, in killed, wounded and missing, one hundred and seventy-five. The enemy left a ten-pound Parrott gun-car

The first consignment sale of confederate cotton took place at Richmond on the 15th inst. Five hundred and fifty-six bales were sold, chiefly consisting of an inferior quality, at prices ranging between 20¢ and 50¢ per lb.—N. Y. Times, 17th.

During a period of seven months 4,821,900 gallons of petroleum were refined in Pennsylvania.

The total value of the exhibition, 28,000,000 pounds of cotton lately landed from foreign countries in New York.

HAYARD'S

PULMONIC WAFERS.

The Only Certain Remedy, Instantly and Positively for all Diseases of the Chest and Lungs, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Consumption, Bronchitis, Influenza, Hoarseness, Difficult Breathing, Sore Throat &c., &c., &c.

THESE WAFERS give the most instantaneous relief, and when persevered with, a permanent cure in every case. Thousands have been restored to perfect health who have tried other means in vain. To all climates and all constitutions they are equally a blessing and a cure—none need despair, no matter how long the disease may have existed, or however severe it may be, provided the organic structure of the vital organs is not hopelessly decayed. Every one afflicted should give them an impartial trial.

To Vocalists and Public Speakers, these Wafers are peculiarly valuable; they will in one day remove the most severe occasional hoarseness; and their regular use for a few days will, at all times, increase the power and flexibility of the voice, greatly improving its tone, compass and clearness, for which purpose they are regularly used by many professional vocalists

TO THE ELECTORS

OF THE

TRENT DIVISION

GENTLEMEN,

Mr. Smith retiring from the Legislative Council, causes the necessity of an Election to fill the vacancy.

At the earnest request of my old friends and supporters, combined with the strong desire manifested by a large number of those who voted against me in 1861, I have consented to allow myself to be placed once more before the electors of the Trent Division.

As my canvass in 1861 has not been forgotten, and the time is so short that I could not possibly do justice to any portion of the Division, in attempting to meet you in the various localities, I trust you will excuse me, and that you will see the necessity of at once forming your working committees, in order to be prepared for the Election should there be a contest.

The main questions before the Country, such as Representation by Population, our Common Schools, the thorough organization of a sufficient force for the protection of our noble country, a due regard being paid to that economy which will be necessary under the present state of the Finances,—Retrenchment in every possible form in the various departments of the Government, in order to bring the income of the country in excess of the expenditure, with a view to lessen the burdens at present imposed upon the people, by indirect taxation on the necessaries of life,—no further aid to the Grand Trunk Railroad, or to jobbers who infest the country in order to fatten on the spoils of the people,—in fact a return to the most rigid economy in order to relieve the mass of the people, and save the country from utter ruin,—all of which will commend my attention.

If elected I shall discharge my duty to the Division independently of sectional feeling.

I shall meet as many of you as can conveniently, at Peterboro', on the 6th of July next.

Yours, &c., &c.,

BILLA FLINT.

THE BRITISH AMERICAN.

A MONTHLY MAGAZINE DEVOTED TO

Literature, Science and Art.

NOTWITHSTANDING the repeated attempts which have been made in Canada to establish a Monthly Magazine devoted to Literature and Science it is nevertheless apparent, that success has not been the reward of those who have engaged in the undertaking.

The Canadian Institute at Toronto, the Natural History Society of Montreal, the Literary and Historical Society of Quebec, aided by the Government, publish very irregularly, irregularly publish their proceedings, and thus many to a greater or less extent, the several fields which from the special objects of their incorporation. But the public at large are still unsupplied with a periodical Magazine devoted to general Literature of Canadian origin and growth, and to Science divested of unattractive technicalities and adapted to the requirements of those who do not profess familiarity with its sterner details.

It is the design of the originators of the British American Magazine to occupy this vacant field, and endeavor to satisfy a want which is so generally felt to exist.

In maturing the plan of a new periodical, it is desirable to supply the public with some guarantee of its character and prospects. It is therefore determined to request intending contributers to permit their names to be published in the prospectus, as among those who are willing, not only to give it countenance and support, but to add to its vitality by contributing to its pages. It is also thought advisable to publish the names of those who are willing and anxious to encourage the undertaking by a liberal subscription in the first number.

Many of the difficulties which have impeded the progress and ultimately led to the abandonment of a Monthly periodical, at first in general design to the British American Magazine, have disappeared, with the advance of the country in population, wealth and civilization; hence the origin ators of the present undertaking with far brighter expectations than their predecessors could have enjoyed, and they anticipate, without doubt or distrust, the successful progress of the undertaking.

The aim of the British American Magazine is to encourage British American Literature, to offer an opportunity long desired by many, for giving public and permanent expression to their thoughts, to foster a taste for literary pursuits, to present the marvels of Science in familiar language, easily understood by all, to supply a monthly abstract of whatever is interesting and valuable in the periodical literature of Great Britain, and a faithful resume of the progress of Literature, Science, Industry and Art, throughout North British America.

It will be within the province of the Magazine to furnish reviews of such new publications, unfettered by prejudices, nationality, or religious bias; and while political discussion of a party character will be absolutely excluded from its pages, yet descriptive articles relating to our home institutions, affecting the general interests of the country, will be freely admitted

Each monthly issue will contain one hundred and twelve pages, of the same size as the English Monthlies, which will form at the close of the year two volumes containing 672 pages each.

The publishers hope to be able to commence their issue in April next, and from the success which has already attended their efforts to procure subscribers, they anticipate that they will be able to present the British American Magazine with a subscription list amounting to 10,000 copies for the first number.

Terms $3 per annum, in advance.

EMPLOYMENT.

THE Undersigned has, for several years past, been engaged in a business, which has yielded him at the rate of three thousand dollars per annum, and is now willing to teach it to others. The business is of a highly useful and general character, adapted both to cities and villages, and one that any person of ordinary capacity, young or old, male or female, can acquire with a few hours' practice, and by which they can secure a very handsome income. Several young ladies who have received instructions from me, both in New York State and Pennsylvania, are earning upwards of $15 per week by it, and there is no reason why any one else cannot do the same. Invalids, even, can do well by it, as it is no peddling affair, but a business that is perfectly respectable. Gentleman and ladies of leisure who would like to learn the business, can have it as a genteel or pleasure, will find the practice of it a pleasant pastime, and one that they will take great interest in. On receipt of $1, I will send printed instructions by which any person can readily acquire the art, and these instructions will also contain every particular as to where to buy everything that is necessary to commence the business, and where the attention of the postmaster is directed to the remittance at the time of mailing the letter. It may be made at our risk.

THE WORLD.

AN INDEPENDENT

Daily, Weekly and Semi-Weekly

NEWSPAPER.

IN soliciting for another year a continuance and increase of the favor which in so short a period has grown to the World its present rank among American journals—a circulation, business patronage, and influence equalled by other journals only after the effort of many years—we crave to our old and new subscribers the promise that no labor nor expense will be spared to make the World what it aims to be,

The Best Newspaper in America.

In politics, now as ever, the World is independent but never neutral. In only creed is a national one—of which

The Union, the Constitution, and the Laws, Freedom of Speech, of the Press, of Political Discussion and Action are the corner stones.

The political events of the past year have notably demonstrated the need of an able, fearless outspoken, first-class

Conservative Journal,

in the commercial metropolis of the country, which shall give constant, bold and vigorous utterance to the conservative sentiments of the best men and the honest masses of the nation. Opposing every enemy to

The Union,

whether armed in rebellion at the South, or insidiously planting the seeds of disunion at the North.

Opposing every violation of the Constitution,

the only bond and hope of union, the only ground upon which we can exhort and compel the allegiance of the South:

Opposing every infraction of

The Laws,

in high places or in low, believing that obedience to Law is service to God:

Opposing every violation of the

Freedom of Speech, of the Press, of Political Discussion and Action,

by whomsoever those violations are committed, whether by the executive in its

Arbitrary, Illegal, and Unjust Arrests,

its refusal of the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus, its denial of the rights and liberties of citizens, its arrest without warrant, its imprisonments without trial, its abrogation of state and federal laws, its illegal proclamation of an empty emancipation, or whether those violations are committed by the party in power, its orators and its presses, advocating measures which must sunder the Union for the sake of destroying slavery, and denouncing measures against all their political opponents.

Loyal to the government always, it will give to the administration a hearty and vigorous support whenever and wherever the administration itself is loyal to the bond, the principles, and the purity of the government.

The World will oppose all compromises which would barter away or divide the Union, for which alone the North is waging war. It will oppose peace itself, till the success of the war assures the permanence of peace, and will urge the prosecution of the war with an economy which has not hitherto governed its expenditures, and a vigor which the nation during a year has prayed for in vain.

The same care will be exercised over the columns of the World to exclude everything which could offend a pure, Christian morality, and recourse will always be had to the same high principles as well to guard its columns as to guide its judgment of men and events.

All the News

will be found in the columns of the World from the various departments of human activity,

Political, Agricultural, and Commercial, as well as in Literature, Science and Art.

New Publications, Inventions, Discoveries, and Works of Art will receive the same careful and thorough attention.

The latest and most important news from London, Paris, Turin, Rome, Syria, China, California, Japan, Egypt, and South America, our correspondents will send to us.

Our correspondents are attached to the various divisions of the army; will accompany them wherever they go, and will be the first one of the newspapers to furnish

Accurate and Reliable Information to all departments of

Manufacturing and Mechanical Industry.

The Weekly World will contain an admirable serial story during the current year

THE DAILY WORLD.

The Daily World is the most complete Commercial and News Paper published in America. Besides as full telegraph news, war correspondence, and foreign news, &c., as any two cent daily, it contains also much fuller commercial news. Its Ship News, Produce, and Cattle Market reports, Foreign and Domestic Importations, Stock Lists, and Commercial news, no business man can do without.

FINKLE & LYON SEWING MACHINE COMPANY,

538 Broadway, New York.

TO parties little acquainted with the Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machine the annual report of the Company's Circular is specially commended. This circular can be had on application It is very specific, and will be found highly instructive, being the most prepared willmuch care and we will abide by all statements therein made.

The following brief quotation is characteristic of the entire Circular:

"This Machine is better adapted than any other Sewing Machine in market to the frequent changes and almost endless variety of sewing required in a family; for it will sew from one to forty thicknesses of Marseilles without stopping, and make every stitch perfect. Will sew from the finest gauze to the heaviest cloth, and even the coarsest Leather. Either with or without changing the feed needle or tension, or making any adjustment of machine whatever."

Thus have we succeeded in overcome the most difficult point in the Sewing Machine art. It was no ordinary triumph. Defiantly can we now say, "No other Machine compares with it in this respect." Hence we have a uniformity—almost without exception—taken the highest premium, whenever the Machine has been properly exhibited in competition with other first class Sewing Machines. Hence it is that we are able to offer the following guarantee, viz.;—"We warrant every Machine we sell to give perfect satisfaction than any other Sewing Machine in the market, or money refunded." We never sell a Machine on any other terms. The guarantee is as reliable as the sole of any business man in the land. For more than five years have we relied upon such facts for the reputation of our Machine; and without a single travelling agent in that time, or scarcely a neighborhood on the continent where the Machine is not favourably known. We prefer such a reputation to one based on mere "talking point," as is usually called in the line of trade. Hence we make but one kind of stitch, viz., the lock-stitch, alike on both sides, requiring only one-third the thread of other kinds of stitch.

N.B.—Local Agents wanted in every county throughout the West. ☞ Special inducements offered.

THE INVOCATION.

BY KINGSTON CLARE.

Kiss me under the starlit sky!
None are abroad but thou and I;
The birds are sleeping, the air is still,
Only our whispers the young birds thrill.
We can see, not feel, the grassmer threads,
We guess at the rose by the sweets it sheds;
The lamel reminds us we pass by;
Kiss me under the starlit sky!

Kiss me under the clematis bough!
None are abroad to see us now;
Dearly I love each graceful spray,
For it calls back thoughts of the happy day
When first I saw thee so gay and fair,
With its pale stars wreathed in thy clustering hair.
The blossoms fall on my fevered brow—
Kiss me under the clematis bough!

Kiss me under the greenhouse eaves!
There's a faint, rich smell from the stifled leaves;
Little care I for the brilliant bloom
That must waste its glow in a crystal tomb;
Give me an English girl for wife,
Not too high for this daily life,
Whom a kind word gladdens, a harsh one grieves;
Kiss me under the greenhouse eaves!

Kiss me again at the the threshold door!
We enter the world at this open door;
Friends will come round thee and claim thy smile,
And I must share thy dear looks awhile;
Would that the day were already come
When I should carry my young bride home!
Then we should enter to part no more;
Kiss me, love, at the threshold door!

Miscellaneous.

The Physical Man.

THERE is an approach to an opening controversy between two of the New York dailies—the Times and Herald—on the abstruse question of "how the American man stands among the races?" A writer in the Times leads off with an article from a clever contributor, founded on a late report of Mr. Mansfield, Commissioner of Statistics for Ohio. Mr. Mansfield holds that "the Belgian "and Rhenish German is inferior in stature to the "Englishman, and that the Englishman, again, is "inferior to the Scotch Highlander." He also asserts that the differences in stature between some of the European races are as great as that between the average heights of men and women; and the writer in the Times laying hold on these and other alleged facts, proceeds to propound the doctrine that is the United States, there is much less variety of race than is generally supposed. "In fact," he says, "there are but two roots (ethnologically) to "the people of the United States, viz: the German "or Gothic, and the Celtic." Four-fifths of the people of this country, he contends, are included under the name of Germans or the Gothic Race and comprised of Lowland Scotch and English, as well as Hollanders and Dutchmen in the common acceptation of the name.

This is an easy enough division to be sure—whether it be ethnologically correct or not. Now, then, let us see how the Ohio statistics dispose of the races as to their physical characteristics. Mr. Mansfield avers that the "average height of "Belgian men, taken from Quebelet Sur L'Homme "is 5 feet 5¼ inches. Height of recruits enlisted "in London, 5 feet 6 9 10 inches. Height of 11 "Highland Regiments, 5 feet 7 9. 10 inches; and "the average height of 239 men, taken at random, "in the interior of Ohio, 5 feet 10¼ inches." This gives to the Ohio man an average height of 5 inches above the Belgian (who is purely ethnologically, a Goth); 2¾ inches above the English recruit; and even 1¼ inches above the Scotch Highlander. And if physical power and vigor were held to be indicated by the simple quality of height your Ohio man would certainly be a prodigious fellow. But Mr. Mansfield is candid enough to tell us that his countrymen lack something in breadth of chest to come up to the full standard of the Highlander in physical power. Thus the measurement round the chest of the principal classes is as follows:

	Inches
Men of Ohio, round the chest	39. 03
London recruits	32. 06
Scotch Highlander	39. 7

This gives the Mace of our own dear old country an advantage of fully one inch in chest measurement over the biggest men of the United States, and the result of this measurement to the solid contents of their bodies (which we even still more emphatically the physical superiority of the Highlander. The solid measurement is thus given:

Scotch Highlander	893.76
American	858 3;
London Englishman	673.01

The corollary to all this our Scottish bretheren of Celtic origin may not accept as complacently as the statistics themselves. The reviewer in the Times asks us to reflect, that "if we were to take ten "thousand Americans and ten thousand Europeans" of this inferior development, (all other things being equal), the Americans would be superior in "strength and capacity for labor. I believe, too, that if European "armies were put in place of the rebel armies, we "should have destroyed them long ago. One of "our main difficulties in this rebellion is, that the are fighting Americans."

Turning from the Times to the Herald, we find a writer contending with laborious zeal and commendable industry, first that the English and the Lowland Scottish races are most improperly classed—that they are emphatically Celtic and not German at the root; and next, that as the English element is the principal one in the American population, it is the Celtic and not the German race which forms the root of the American man, and re-produces itself in Ohio, and elsewhere in the tall and powerfully developed race whose claims to superiority Mr. Mansfield upholds. We shall not follow the Herald's argument either as to what constitutes the root of the English race, or as to whether the Saxon and Norman elements are merely feeble and unimportant tributaries to the great Celtic stream of blood which has flown through the veins of our people for twenty centuries—although we think the force of argument as well as of historical evidence, would go far to support the proposition as the Herald lays it down. Nor shall we follow the same journal in—what we regard as—its pointless appeal to the great European wars of the last two centuries to prove the superiority of the maddletarred Celtic stock over the German and every other race as steady, unflinching, courageous warriors in the field. The contrast, or comparison, is needless. But a word of interest to our own countrymen may be said on the question of confounding the Lowlanders en masse with the Dutchmen or Teutons, either on ethnological or any other grounds.

It has never been attempted to be proven that the Anglo-Saxon occupation of Scotland in the 10th 11th century was of more than the most temporary kind; and the invasion itself, indeed, only extended to what are now called the Lothians including Roxburghshire and the smaller contiguous shires. A little before the middle of the 12th century, when the army of David I. was organized into four divisions representing the different sections of the kingdom North and South, it was found that these divisions were made up mainly as to origin in the following manner:—The first consisted of Galloway men, who were all Celts—inhabitants of Galloway, Ayr, and Dumfries; the second consisted of men at arms from Cumberland and Teviotdale, who included Normans, Danes, Scots and Picts, the third comprised the Lothian men and Lennox men, who, it was admitted had the smallest possible suspicion of Saxon blood in their veins; and the fourth division was made up mainly of pure Scots or Highlanders, with a small admixture of Picts and Norwegians from Morayshire. Thus, then, the whole of the first and nearly the whole of the fourth division of David's army—taken from the two extremes of the kingdom, North and South—were Celts, while in the remaining two divisions there was a small admixture of Norman Pict, and Danish—and the merest dribble of Anglo-Saxon blood—the great body even of these divisions, however, being Scot or Celt to the backbone, just as were the men—nineteen-twentieths at least—of the people themselves.

The origin of the Scot—his relation with Ireland, or the relation of Ireland with him; the early settlement of the race in Dumbartonshire, and their alleged expulsion by the Picts—are all matters which though incidentally bearing on the ethnological question of classifying the descendants of the races in this country—we need not further pursue. We scout the notion that the Scottish Lowlander is any more akin to the German than is the Highlander whose Celtic origin is undisputed. The microscopic infusion of Saxon in the 10th and 11th centuries could have had no visible effect upon the race; nor is it much nearer a strict interpretation of ethnical facts, to claim the Danes and Normans transfused the Gothic into the Celtic blood to such an extent as to change or perceptibly modify the origin of the Scot—in his pure and simple character.

The subject is a diversion at least, for the moment from the more sober and solemn topics of the war; and if the daily journals which have introduced it, pursue the controversy without involving unpleasant allusions to the different races engaged in the struggle, we shall follow their musings with interest.—Scottish American Journal.

Brevity.

It is said of the three most influential members of the Convention that formed the Constitution of the United States, that in all the debates of that body no one of them made a speech of more than twenty minutes. We have good authority for stating that Alex. Hamilton, though reckoned among the more diffuse orators of the day, did not occupy more than two hours and a half in his argument on the trial of a cause, and his rival Aaron Burr, not more than an hour and a quarter. A judge who was intimately acquainted with Burr and his practice, confirmed this statement, adding, that when in his eclipse, this advocate repeatedly and successfully disposed of cases involving a large amount of property in half an hour.

"Indeed," said he, "on one occasion he talked to the jury seven minutes in such a manner that it took me on the bench half an hour to straighten them out." He added, "I once asked him: "Col. Burr, why cannot lawyers always save the time and spare the patience of the Court and jury by dwelling on the important points in the case?"—to which Burr replied: "Sir you demand the greatest faculty of the human mind, selection."

He is well known to have been one of the most effective advocates in his time, and in this matter, if nothing else, he deserves to be studied and imitated. We refer to a single foreign example, an English barrister.

"I asked Sir James Scarlet," says Burton, "what was the secret of his pre-eminent success as an advocate. He said that he took care to press home the one principal point of the case, without much regard to others. He also said that he knew the secret of being short."

"I find," said he, "that when I speech half an hour, I am always doing mischief to my client. If I drive into the heads of the jury unimportant matter, I drive out matter the more important I had previously lodged there."

We commend his method and his reason for it, not only to ministers, but quite as as urgently to lawyers and members of Parliament. Contributors to newspapers may also here learn a lesson of instruction.

A TELEGRAM from Paris says that communications have passed and are passing between the French and English Cabinets, with a view to the joint occupation of the kingdom of Greece by the two Powers.

On Friday morning the Royal artillery force, under Capt. Leslie, left London for ball Practice at Port Stanley, marching the whole way, a distance of twenty-nine miles. They will encamp there for two weeks, firing at floating targets on the lake.

Reading one's Own Obituary.

In the days of old Mycall, the publisher of the Newport Herald, (a journal still alive and flourishing,) the Sheriff of old Essex, Philip Bagley, had been asked several times to pay up his arrears of subscription. At last one day he told Mycall that he would certainly hand it over the next morning as sure as he lived.

"If you don't get your money to-morrow you may be sure I am dead," said he.

The morrow came and passed, but no money. Judge of the Sheriff's feeling when, on the morning of the day after he opened his Herald, and saw announced the lamented decease of Philip Bagley, Esq., High Sheriff of the County of Essex; with an obituary notice attached, giving the deceased credit for a good many excellent traits of character, but adding that he had one fault very much to be deplored: he was not punctual in paying the printer!

Bagley, without waiting for his breakfast started for the Herald office. On the way it struck him as singular that some of the many friends and acquaintances he met seemed to be surprised to see him. They must have read their morning paper. Was it possible they cared so little about him as to have forgotten already that he was no more? Full of perturbation, he entered the printing office to deny that he was dead in propria persona.

"Why, Sheriff!" exclaimed the facetious editor. "I thought you were defunct."

"Why, you, yourself!" said Mycall.

"Oh! ah! you!" stammered out the Sheriff. "Well, there's your money. And now contradict the report in the next paper if you please."

"That's not necessary, friend Bagley," said the old joker; "it was only printed in your own copy!"

The good Sheriff lived many years after his sell, and to the day of his real death took care to pay the printer.

Hay and Haymaking.

The Ohio Farmer makes the following sensible remarks:—"As the season for making hay is approaching, we will give a few words of caut on in advance. Don't dry your hay too much. Hay may be dried till it is as worthless as straw. As a good coffee-maker would say, 'don't dry your coffee; but brown it,' so we say, 'don't dry your hay; but cure it.' Our good old mothers, who relied on herb tea instead of "apothecary medicine," gathered the herbs in blossom, and cured them in the shade. This is the philosophy of making good hay. Cut it in the blossom and cure it in the shade. The sugar of the plant when it is in the bloom, is in the stock ready to form the seeds. If the plant is cut earlier, the sugar is not there; if later, the sugar has become converted into a woody matter. Hay should be well wilted in the sun, but cured in the cock. Better to be a little green than too dry. If, on putting into the barn there is danger of heating in the mow, put on some salt. Cattle will like it none the less. Grass cured with the least exposure to the drying winds and scorching sunshine is more nutritious than if longer exposed, however good the weather may be. It ever cures, it contains more woody matter and less nutritive matter. The true art of haymaking, then, consists in cutting the grass when the starch and sugar are most fully developed, and before the art converted into seed and woody fibres; and curing it up to the points when it will answer to put it into the barn without heating, and no more."

A Balloon Duel.

Perhaps the most remarkable duel ever fought took place in 1808. It was peculiarly French in its case, and could hardly have occurred under any other than a French state of society. Mons. de Granpre and Mons. Pique had a quarrel, arising out of jealousy concerning a lady engaged at the Imperial opera, one Mademoiselle Frevitt. They agreed to fight a duel to settle their respective claims; and, in order that the heat of angry passion should not interfere with the polished elegance of the proceeding, they postponed the duel for a month, the lady agreeing to bestow her smiles on the survivor of the two, if the other was killed; or, at all events this was inferred by the two men if not actually expressed. The two men were to fight in the air. The two balloons were constructed precisely alike. On the day denoted, De Granpre and his second entered the car of the balloon, Le Pique and his second that of the other; it was in the garden of the Tuileries, amid an immense concourse of spectators. The gentlemen were to fire, not at each other, but at each others balloons, in order to bring them down by the escape of gas; and as pistols might hardly have served for this purpose, took a blunderbuss in his car. At a given signal, the ropes that retained the cars were cut, and the balloons ascended. The wind was moderate, and kept the balloons at their original distances of eight yards apart. When about half a mile from the earth a preconcerted signal was given. M. le Pique fired but missed. M. de Granpre fired, and sent a ball through Le Pique's balloon. The balloon collapsed, the car descended with fearful rapidity, and Le Pique and his second were dashed to pieces. De Granpe continued his ascent triumphantly, and terminated his aerial voyage successfully, at a distance of seven leagues from Paris.

FLAX COTTON.—A Flax Cotton Manufacturing Company has been organized in Oswego, in the State of New York. It occupies a stone building one hundred and forty feet long, and five stories high. Fifty looms for flour sack sheeting are ready for operation, also several knitting machines. The farmers have began already to reap a profit from the movement. The culture of flax, in some instances, in that vicinity has paid a net profit of $175 per acre.

—Street railways are to be almost immediately introduced into Mexico.

BRADWOOD SMITH HOSKINS—HIS LOVE ADVENTURES AND DEATH—A TRAGIC LOVE EPISTLE.

Fairfax Court House, Va., June 4, '63.

One of the victims of the first desperate fight between the Union forces under command of Colonel Wm. D. Blaze, of the Seventh Michigan Cavalry, and the Rebel guerrilla Mosby, near Gallett's Station, Fauquier county, Va., was captain Branford Smith Hoskins, a British officer in the confederate service, who was mortally wounded in the back by a pistol ball, and was made prisoner by our troops. He lingered in great agony for two days and died on Monday, June 1st, at a farm house near the battle field.

His private papers fell into the possession of our troops. They are very interesting, showing the previous history of the man, his romantic adventures, and his operations as a member of the guerrilla band of the notorious Mosby which has performed so many daring raids in Eastern Virginia. The papers were done up neatly in an oil-skin bag, which kept them in a good state of preservation.

Among his effects were the two crimean medals referred to. The British medal is of silver, and has three silver clasps, each clasp containing the words "Sebastopol" "Inkerman," "Alma." The medal is about the size of a silver dollar, but thicker. One side is a likeness of Queen Victoria, with "Victoria Regina, 1854" encircling the head. On the reverse—"Crimea," with embossed figure of a Roman warrior armed with sword, shield and buckler, and frame crowning him with a wreath of laurel. Attached to this medal was one of silver, with the same embellishments, but one-fourth the size. The name of Captain B. S. Hoskins was on the rim of each.

The Turkish medal is of silver same size as the British medal. On one side appears the British, French and Turkish flags entwined together, with cannon, mortars, an anchor, and a map of the Crimea, at the base of the design. The inscription "La Crimea" ——"1855," appears on the reverse, encircled with a laurel wreath. There is also a miniature edition of the Turkish medal, of one-fourth the size.

The whole, suspended by silver buckles, and red, blue and green ribbons, presents a gay and brilliant appearance.

Major Hoskins, it appears, determined to try his fortunes in the New World, and a passport was issued to him at the Foreign Office, London, signed by Lord John Russell, on the 9th of August, 1861.

From his private diary it appears that he was in Baltimore the latter part of 1862, and in destitute circumstances, from the fact of his selling his watch, clothing valise, &c., to support himself. While in Baltimore he entered into arrangements to "convey goods," which it dictates, probably, some contraband transaction. While there, in doubtless felt the influence of the tender passion, as the following affectionate missive would indicate. It was written in pencil, and wraped up inside of a piece of paper very carefully, as if he cherished it very fondly.

A LOVING EPISTLE FROM "CARRIE."

My own Darling Braddie—I could not let them all write without one line from me, so I have asked Mr. B——to send this for me. I do not think, dearest, I will be able to send you messages as I thought, but I promise to do so whenever I can, so please do not think it is from indifference on my part, when you receive no message, for I do love you, Braddie, darling, and believe me, my own darling, I will always be true.

I received your note from Mr. C—— and I will trust you, for I know you will love me. I will not wish you a merry Christmas, but I do a happy one, for I intend to make mine happy with thoughts of you, my dearest one, and that God will bless you in all your trials, is the dearest wish of

Your own CARRIE

Pray that you may keep to your good resolutions, dear one, and you will be sure to succeed. I have missed you oh! so much. But I must not write any more, so good night, my darling, with your own CARRIES love.

This was written in a neat, clerkly hand, showing that he was a man of good education. The entries show his movements from the 1st of January last within a few days of his death. It exhibits his determination to join the Rebels, his trip across the Potomac, his hobnobbing with some of the rebel dignitaries, Yancey, Wigfall, &c., and finally how they assigned him to an insignificant position in Mosby's guerrilla band.

His memoranda denote the activity and audacity of the Rebel guerrillas more clearly than they have ever been described before—their long and wearisome marches, and desperate raids upon our pickets, railroads and telegraph lines south of Washington.

The fight in which he was wounded took place on the 30th of May.

The Major deeply appreciated the humiliation of his position, and in very bitterness of soul he exclaimed:—

"Oh! has it come to this, that I must die in this way! No, no! it can't be! Oh! that I should ever have come to this!"

His distress of mind aggravated his wound, and hastened his death. He received every attention at the hands of our surgeons that could be given. His private papers were turned over to Colonel Mann, and will be sent through the regular channels to Gen. Heintzelman, and from thence to Lord Lyons, the British Minister, for transmission to the father of Maj. Hoskins, who is still living in England. His father's name is believed to be Rev. W. E. Hoskins, of Cuddington, Edenbridge, Kent, England.

He wrote frequent letters to Major Hoskins, as it appears by notes in the diary, and the son, it would seem, entertained a strong feeling of paternal affection, as several affectionate passages appear from time to time relative to his father.—Cor. Philadelphia Inquirer

Epitome of News.

THE Queen of Spain has determined to grant a general amnesty to the persons implicated in the recent disorders at Si, Domingo.

YOUTHFUL LOVE.—It is only to early youth, in the first freshness of the spring of life, that love can be trusted in its undimmed rapture. Youth looks upon everything with fond and credulous eyes, and the air seems one universal rainbow. The emotion will not bear doubtful, and what it loves can not bear the idea of change or fickleness.

DOMESTIC LOVE.—Woman is to man what the sun is to the flower; it ministerately enjoyed, it beautifies, it refreshes and it improves; too much or too little, it withers, deteriorates and destroys. But the duties of domestic life, engagements as they must be in retirement, and calling forth all the sensibilities of woman, are perhaps necessary to the full development of her character, as the shades and the shadow are to the rose, confirming its beauty and increasing its fragrance.

What food is to the hungry medicine is to the sick. In either case if it is improperly taken, unnecessarily or in disproportionate quantities, the object designed to be obtained is over-reached, and injurious effects are the certain consequence.

Dowds' Vegetable Balsamic Elixir, and Henry's Vermont Liniment when taken according to directions will effect certain and speedy cures of Colds, Catarrh, Asthma, &c &c. See advertisement in another column.

Girls.—There are two kinds of girls. One is the kind that appears best abroad—the girls that are good for parties, rides, visits, balls, etc., and whose chief delight is in such things. The other is that kind that appears best at home—the girls that are useful and cheerful in the drawing-room, and all the precincts of home. They differ widely in character. One is a moth fluttering everything about her, the other is a sunbeam, inspiring life and gladness all along her pathway. Now, it does not necessarily follow that there shall be two classes of girls. A slight education will modify both a little, and unite their good qualities in one.

NOVEL RESOLUTION.—The Chatham Union states that the following resolution was carried unanimously in Howard:

Proposed by Mr. William Boston, seconded by Mr. John McKinlay:

We, here assembled, feel content,
Archie McKellar should be sent,
Straight to a seat in Parliament,
As we can find
A better, in County Kent.
To suit our mind.

VALLANDIGHAM ON HIS WAY TO CANADA.—The Detroit Royal Gazette of June 23rd says:—"Mr. Vallandigham, who has caused so much excitement in the Northern States, and who was banished to the Southern States, for a stated period, arrived here in the Confederate steamer Jody Davis, from Wilmington, on Saturday last. It is reported that Mr. Vallandigham is on his way to Canada, and there will await coming events."

—Mr. Thomas Pope, Mayor of Quebec, who has been in delicate health for, some time past died on Tuesday. His death is regretted by all classes of the community. Talented and impartial, he endeared himself in no small degree to the citizens of Quebec who showed their appreciation of his worth by electing him three Mayor, twice by acclamation. He was born in Prescott, C. W., was a lawyer by profession, and enjoyed a large and lucrative practice.

THE ENGLISH GIRL.—The English girl spends more than half of her working hours in physical amusements, which tend to develop and invigorate and ripen the bodily powers. She rides, walks, drives, rows on the water, runs, dances, plays, sings, jumps the rope, throws the ball, hurls the quoit, draws the bow, keeps up the almanac clock—and all this without having it pressed upon her mind that she is thereby wasting her time. She does this every day, until it becomes a habit which she will follow up through life. Her frame, as a natural consequence, is larger, her muscular system in better subordination, her strength more enduring and the whole tone of her mind healthier.

QUEEN OF THE WORD "CANADA."—A correspondent of the Washington National Intelligencer questions the authority of Mr. Warburton who gives the word Canada as the origin of the name of this Province. He says:—"I have before me a book printed in London in the year 1698 written by L. Hennepin, and entitled "A New Discovery of a Country Greater than Europe." On page 37 I read: "The Spaniards were the first who discovered Canada, but on their arrival, having found nothing considerable in it, they abandoned the country, and called it Il Capo di Nada; that is a cape of nothing; hence by corruption sprang the word Canada, which we use in all our maps."

—Copperhead teachings are producing their legitimate fruit in the West. The Enrolling Officer of Sullivan County, Ind., was shot dead on the 18th while riding along the road. An Officer in Boone county was captured and held by men while women pelted him with eggs. In Holmes County, Ohio, a large number of men have banded and armed themselves, and troops were sent to disperse them on Wednesday; the troops were fired upon, and the fire promptly returned, followed by a charge which scattered the Copperheads. None were killed on either side, and but two wounded; another report, however, is that four on the one and ten Vallandigham Democrats were killed. Holmes County, Ohio, last rejected on Congress, Walker, Union, 791; Bliss, Democrat, 2,599; Dem. majority 1,768; Sullivan County, Ind., elected, Scott Union, 708; Voorhees, Dem., 1,986; Dem. majority, 1,278.—*N. The Cobourg Annual Regatta will take place this year on Wednesday and Thursday the 5th and 6th of August, open to all yachts, the course the same as last year.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Steamer Rochester—C. Elliott.
Just Received—W. Clenton.

Peterborough Examiner.

THURSDAY, JULY 9th, 1863.

THE TRENT ELECTION.

We give elsewhere the proceedings and speeches at the nomination. It has been considered and many still think that Mr. Grover will have a very poor chance of being elected, and we are of the opinion that he will not succeed—yet let the history past admonish the friends of Mr. Flint not to relax in their efforts. During the elections just closed there were many instances where the over confidence of the of the party who regarded the other as insignificant has cost them the election. In Victoria Mr. Dunsford and his friends were too much lost of success, and they well nigh slipped up on it. We urge diligence and energy to secure the return of Mr. Flint, and thereby send an honest upright liberal man to represent them in the Upper House.

TOWN COUNCIL.

MONDAY, July 6, 1863.

The Council met. Present: His Worship the Mayor, and Messrs. Toole, Lawson, Carlile, Fry, Clenton, Ryan, Landy Burnham, Dickson, Nicholls, Ormond and Dixon.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

A communication from Elias Thompson offering to take contracts of improvements of Streets and Bridges, was read and referred to committee on Streets and Bridges.

His Worship informed the Council that he had waited on the Commissioners of the Town Trust, who informed him that they had several applications for sale and lease of the lands South of the Town, and that the Commissioners were anxious to have the land surveyed according to Mr. Stewart's plan.

Also, that since the last meeting of the Council, the two night watch had resigned and they had been settled with.

Mr. Nicholl's as chairman of the public property, laid plans and specifications for the Lock-up and Engine House, before the the Council, agreeable to a resolution passed at the last meeting of the Council.

A communication from S. S. Kelly, offering to furnish plank for the Streets and Bridges, was referred to that committee.

On motion of Mr. Burnham, the Mayor was authorised to advertise for tenders for posting out the lots laid out upon the vacant land at the south west side of the Town, and report such tender to this Council at its next meeting.

On motion of Mr. Clenton, the sum of Four Hundred dollars was granted by the Council for the contemplated improvement of the Court House grounds and the Protestant Burial grounds; and that Messrs. Nicholls, Ormond and the mover be a committee to co-operate with the committee appointed by the County Council for that purpose.

On motion of Mr. Nicholls, Mr. John Walton, Reeve of Smith, was heard in reference to improvements on a part of Park Street.

On motion of Mr. Toole, the sum of Forty dollars is to be appropriated on Park Street, between the North end of the Town and the bridge lately built on that Street, in connection with an appropriation made by the County Council for the improvement of that Street, under the superintendence of the Street and Bridge Com.

The Council then adjourned for one week.

THE weather has been exceedingly hot during the past week—hot enough for New York or a more Southern latitude. The crops that were favoured by the copious rain of last week are growing rapidly and look beautiful, but we regret to learn that South and North of the town there was no rain, and the crops are suffering severely in consequence.

Haying has commenced, and on new meadows is heavy. The grubs are still at work, nevertheless we anticipate a good return. We have heard nothing of weevil or lice yet.

MILITARY CLOTHING.—It is with pleasure we announce that the clothing for our Companies has arrived. Capt. Kennedy's Infantry Company turned out on Thursday evening last, and Capt. Poole's Rifles were also out on Monday afternoon, each having their new uniform on. They made a very imposing appearance; on both occasions they were headed by Mr. Philp's Band.

DROWNED.—Mr. F. Ogilvie, a well to do farmer, was drowned on Saturday evening last, in the Scugog River, about eight miles north-west of Lindsay. He leaves a large number of friends and relations to mourn his loss. He was President of the Agricultural Society for the Township in which he lived.

STEAMER TO ROCHESTER.—As will be seen by referring to our advertising columns Mr. Daintry has got his new steamer Rochester running on the route formerly run by the Maple Leaf, across Lake Ontario to Rochester. She has made two or three trips already and gives general satisfaction.

VICKSBURG is reported to have surrendered; Lee is retreating to Virginia, a great battle is expected shortly. There has been a serious Negro riot in Buffalo on Monday last. Several were killed and many [illegible]

The Trent Nomination.

DILLA FLINT HAS THE SHOW OF HANDS, TWO TO ONE!

On Monday last, according to notice, the nomination of a member to serve in Legislative Councillor for this Division was held in front of the Court House in this Town. Notwithstanding an impression about Town that but little interest was taken in this election, there was a large number of the "free and independent" electors on the ground—at least 500 we suppose—who behaved during the three hours occupied in the proceedings with that order, quietness and decency for which the electors of our good County are noted. The day was extensively hot yet the crowd bore the inconveniences without a murmur, determined to hear what should be said by the candidants for their suffrages. After the reading of the Writ, COLONEL HAULTAIN proposed Dilla Flint as a fit and proper person to represent the Electors of the Trent Division in the Legislative Council. He referred to the character of the Upper Chamber as not being as partizan as that of the Lower, and was glad to think that the present contest was not likely to assume the bitterness and acerbity of the previous one. Did not consider it necessary that it should assume the political character it then did. Her Gracious Majesty had been pleased to concur in the wish expressed by the people of this important Province, that the members of the Upper House should be elected by themselves, in place of being appointed by the Crown, as was the case in England. The candidate he had the pleasure to propose to them was a public spirited man, of large business operations, having built Mills and carried on extensive business—benefitting others as well as himself. He (Col. H.) had made enquiry, and had found that Mr. Flint was an honorable, responsible and independant man—which any would be satisfied of by enquiry. Having two years ago travelled with Mr. Flint over a large portion of this County, he had become pretty thoroughly acquainted with him, and was satisfied of his views on loyalty and militia matters, concurring as they did with his own, he had every satisfaction in proposing to them Mr. Flint as their representative.

MR. M. S. DEAN, the Ex-Warden, seconded the nomination. He contrasted Mr. Grover's professions of Retrenchment and economy in his address, to his conduct when a member of the Counties Council. He considered Mr. Flint a reliable man, and more worthy of support than Mr. Grover.

MR. PEARCE, Warden of the County, proposed Mr. Grover. He referred to the charges of Mr. Dean, and considered them as mean and much out of place in the present contest. He (Mr. P.) entirely agreed with what had fallen from Colonel Haultain on the nearness of the political parties in the country to each other—and was of opinion that if Mr. Flint had given out in the East earlier that he was to be a candidate, Mr. Grover would never have come out. (A Voice—He may as well not come out.) He (Mr. P.) had been down in Hastings a few days ago, and he found that Mr. Flint's supporters there had made the contest quite a party one, and had declared war to the knife. In Belleville he found that it was quite a local question—the people said there they would prefer any man from Belleville. He could say that we should have a man from Peterborough. A charge had been made against Mr. Grover of receiving a bribe at the former election in the Division; it was false. Mr. Grover did not receive any of the money; £136 was promised to Mr. Grover's Committee, but never paid. Mr. Grover was pledged to go to the polls, whatever be the consequence—and he was satisfied that he would succeed.

MR. THOS. CHAMBERS, of Otonabee, seconded the nomination.

MR. THOS. WHITE, Jr., proposed the Hon. Sidney Smith.

MR. JOSEPH WALTON, of Monaghan, seconded the nomination.

MR. FLINT was received by cheers. When here two years ago he did not expect to meet them so soon again. He did not wish Mr. Smith to die, and he had no idea that he would resign but as he has seen fit to do so, he (Mr. F.) at the earnest solicitation of his friends and many who had formerly opposed him, agreed to come out as a candidate. He had no personal ends to serve in coming forward, nor had he any particular wish to have Honorable prefixed to his name. He was of opinion that if a man was not honorable before, no such prefix would make him so. As to his politics, his Country was his politics. His desire was to see it prosper; was anxious for the reduction of the expenses of the country; to keep the expenditure within its income; to reduce incomes and salaries, beginning with Government and officials, and thus redress the indirect taxation the people were burdened with. In Canada we had to pay at the rate of 14s. 10½d. per head of taxes, while in England they pay at the rate of £2 8s. 9d per head; the former was but a young country, and comparatively poor, while the latter was wealthy. His object would be to seek to relieve the country of some of the burdens upon it, and while serving it he would be serving himself. He being a large tax payer himself—something about $1,600 a year—could not advocate a burden upon the community without being personally interested. He considered that there was too much expense in collecting the Revenue—too many officials employed, some of whom did nothing but merely draw their salaries. It was too bad that it required one-fifth or one-fourth of the Revenue to collect it. He advocated retrenchment in this department as well as the burden that fell upon the people—upon the farmers, no matter if the weevil ate the wheat, or the lice the oats they had to pay the salaries of these officials who regularly drew their pay. As to Mr. Grover's address he had no fault to find with it; he advocated similar measures. He, like Mr. Grover, was a Conservative as well as a Reformer: he went for conserving what was good and reforming what was bad. He was satisfied that Mr. Grover would not like a gentleman in this contest, and he trusted he would receive similar treatment from him. As to the Militia, he considered it should be placed on a good footing; he advocated a practical man at the head of it, and hoped the matter would receive the attention it deserves at the hands of the Government. Was in favour of Emigration, and opening up the waste lands of the Crown, but would put the settlers on good land, and make good roads through the Townships; was against the practice of putting settlers on poor lands; he would give them the best—one settler was worth more to the Government than a hundred acres of wild land. He felt pleased in taking up the Examiner to find that he had so large and respectable a Committee in Peterborough, numbering 120 gentlemen—many of whom formerly opposed him. He was also glad to find that the Review at this time was not heard on him. If, however, he was defeated in this election he should not cry, and if he won he was satisfied—and he believed he should win. After referring to his farming operations, and to his opposition to further grants to the Grand Trunk and again to economy and retrenchment in the public revenue, Mr. Flint retired.

MR. GROVER in coming forward appeared to be considerably excited, and alluded to the charges that were made against him, and the insinuations thrown out—but he vindicated himself as a thorough conservative—did not approve of the course of the late Government—nor indeed of the coalition—we should have [illegible]

DESTRUCTION AT SEA.—There are five pirates now afloat and destined to be found troublesome. The Georgia has commenced her career of destruction by capturing and burning the ship Dictator bound from Liverpool to Hong Kong with coal. The Alabama has captured the Sea Lark, and Dorcas Prince. In addition to the above we have particulars of the capture of an merchant vessels by the pirate Florida.—The intelligence of these depredations coming in quick succession, have roused the Navy Department, which has sent seven United States vessels in search of the pirates, and others are soon to follow. As some offset to these depredations, the Gulf Squadron has been very active and captured and brought into Key West, since the rebellion began, upwards of one hundred and seventy vessels, and the value of prize money already amounts to about three and one-fourth million dollars.—Boston Recorder.

A PLAIN PROPOSITION.—A writer on deep ploughing says:

I am persuaded that the corn crop in central Illinois can be doubled on the acre planted, by efficient tillage. I should be glad to contract with our corn growers to stir their lands at least eight inches deep—following the stirring plow with a trench plow running four to six inches deeper. The trench thus formed will serve as an excellent substitute for under draining in wet seasons, and prove a valuable resolver for moistures during a drouth. I should be happy to pay the extra cost of such tillage, and receive in return the increase of product.

Again he says:

There is no danger of over tilling. Fifty acres tended "up to grade" will be found more profitable than one hundred acres derided over.

THE average daily circulation of the London Times is 65,000, which requires a supply of sixty-six tons of paper per week. The number of persons employed by it is 370. The editor, Mr. Delane, receives $9,000 a year, and has a twenty fourth share on the paper.

A COMPANY WHEELING FROM THE HALT, —FROM COLUMN INTO LINE.

(Communicated.)

Question 42—What will the caution be in this movement?

43—On the command "Left wheel into Line" where will the Captain place himself?

44—Where will the Covering Sergeant go?

45—In which direction will the Covering Sergeant face? to which flank will he glance his eyes? and with whom will he align himself?

46—How does the covering sergeant hold his rifle, and which arm does he raise?

47—How does the pivot man act?

48—How does the rear rank man of the pivot file act?

49—On the word "Quick March" being given, to which flank do the men look, and to which flank do they feel?

50—Does the pivot man move?

51—To which flank does the right hand man look?

52—How does the captain move?

53—Where does the Lieutenant move to, and when?

54—When does the supernumerary rank gain its distance, and what distance ought it to be when halted?

55—When does the rear rank man of the pivot file regain his place?

56—When does the captain give the command to the company to "halt and dress?"

57—From which flank does he dress his company?

58—After giving the word "eyes front" where does the captain go?

59—Where does the covering sergeant go?

60—When a company is supposed to stand in column left in front, what word of command is to be given to wheel it into line?

61—State how the captain, covering sergeant and pivot man act in that case, and from which flank the company is dressed

SECTION 5—A COMPANY WHEELING FROM THE HALT FROM LINE INTO COLUMN.

62—What caution is required in this movement?

63—On the command "open column right in front," where will the captain place himself, and facing in what direction?"

64—Where will the covering sergeant go? How will he hold his rifle? How will he face, and which arm will he raise?

65th—Who will be the pivot man? and how will he face?

66—Will the rear rank man of the pivot file move in this instance?

67—On the word "right about face" how will the covering sergeant and pivot man act?

68—On the command "right wheel, quick march" where will the captain move to?

69th—On the words "halt, front dress" by the captain where will he move to?

70—Where will the covering sergeant go?

71—How will the supernumerary rank act?

72—Explain how a company in line is wheeled into open column, left in front?

FIRE IN MONTREAL.—On Friday last, the furniture shop and store of Mr. R. Jones, in Craig Street, was destroyed by fire. He is insured for $10,000. The damage to the estate is roughly estimated at $25,000. One of the firemen got badly injured by the falling of a shed, on the top of which was a quantity of lumber, and somewhat scorched by the fire.

THE Steamship Bohemian sailed from Quebec on Tuesday morning last with 45 cabin, 63 steerage and $13,000 in specie.

An old Scotch person, who was not only a preacher but a person, and who on weekdays returned the visits which his people made to him at the kirk on Sundays, once came to the house of a parishioner, where his gentle knocking could not be heard for the noise within. Upon this he lifted the latch and walked in, saying in a majestical tone:

"I should like to know who is the head of this house?"

"Weel, sir," said Sandie, "if ye bide a wee, we'll maybe be able to tell ye, for Jenny and I are just trying to settle that point."

THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

New York, July 5.—A special despatch to the Herald from Shippensburg, Pa., dated yesterday, says:—

"Captain Boyd arrived with forty-two prisoners from Ewell's rear guard at Fayetteville, without the loss of a man. All Lees forces are concentrating near Gettysburg. Stuart's cavalry were on their way there yesterday. Lee's forces, except a guard, have left Greencastle. All quiet at Carlisle. Enemy falling back. Chambersburg is not burned, and only buildings belonging to railroads are destroyed. Gen. Barksdale, of Mississippi, who was wounded yesterday, is lying within our lines.

"The death of Gen. Longstreet, the report of which was brought by Confederate prisoners yesterday, is confirmed by prisoners taken this morning. Longstreet and Hills' corps are said to be fighting on the right. Ewell is in front. 1,600 prisoners taken so far have been sent to the rear."

Baltimore, July 3, 10 P. M.—A special messenger from General Meade to General Shenock brings news from Gettysburg up to 1 o'clock this afternoon. General Meade had then driven the Confederates four miles north and west from their position of yesterday, and was still following. We have taken 1500 prisoners. They are on their way to this city. The victory is undoubtedly ours."

Washington, July 4.—10 a. m.—The following has just been received:—

"Headquarters Army of the Potomac, July 3,—8 30 p. m., near Gettysburg.—To Major-General Halleck; The enemy opened at 1 p. m., from about 150 guns concentrated upon my left centre, continuing without intermission, for about 3 hours, at the expiration of which time he assulted my left and centre twice, being upon both occasions handsomely repulsed with severe loss to him, leaving in our hands nearly 3,000 prisoners. Among the prisoners is Brigade-Gen. Armistead and many colonels and officers of lesser rank. The enemy left many dead upon the field and a large number of wounded in our hands. The loss upon our side has been considerable. Maj.-Gen. Halleck and Brig.-Gen. Gibbon were wounded. After the repelling of the assaul indications leading to the belief that the enemy might be withdrawing, an armed reconnoissance was pushed forward from the left, and the enemy was found to be in force. At the present hour all is quiet. My cavalry have been engaged all day on both flanks of the enemy, harrassing and vigerously attacking them with great success, notwithstanding they encountered superior numbers, both in cavalry and infantry. The army is in fine spirits.

"GEO. G. MEADE, Maj-Gen."

"Hanover, Pa., July 4, 5 p. m.—There has been no fighting up to this time to-day. Last evening we drove the enemy back to Gettysburg. Our lines this morning extend eight miles around Gettysburg, our batteries being on all the hills looking on the town from the south. We occupy Round Top Ridge commanding the Chambersburg turnpike road, and have cut off all the lines of retreat. Our forces occupy the strongest possible position. A flank movement in our left is impossible.

A bearer of despatches from Jeff Davis to Gen. Lee has been captured. The despatch orders Gen. Lee peremptorily to return to Richmond and states that the movement into Pennsylvania was wholly against his wishes.

Headquarters Army of the Potomac (semi official report), July 3.—The decisive battle has been fought to-day, and the enemy has been repulsed to-day with terrible loss. At daylight Lee's right wing batteries opened on our left, and shortly after those of his centre followed. After half an hour's cannonading, doing but little damage to us, the fire slackened and only occasional shots were exchanged. Shortly afterwards the enemy's left, composed of infantry and sharpshooters, made an attack on our left wing. So suddenly and impetuously was it accomplished that our skirmishers and front line were driven back from their intrenchments, but by the aid of the batteries in the rear and the battery of the 12th corps, we regained the front position, capturing a considerable number of prisoners. Before a moment had elapsed it is estimated that at least 80 guns opened upon us. Our batteries returned the compliment with interest. The air seemed literally thick with iron, and for more than an hour it seemed impossible that man or beast could live through it. Strange to say, the enemy's accuracy of range, as exhibited on the two previous days, was wanting on this occasion, most of their shells exploding far in the rear of our front and generally missing our batteries. Under cover of this feud enfer Gen. Lee advanced his columns of infantry for the covers and made several attempts to carry the lines by assult; but each successive attempt was repulsed with terrible havoc to their ranks. After an hour's incessant cannonading, the fire grew less intense for a short time, but was renewed for a little while with great spirit.

"Baltimore, July 5.—News has been received from Meade's army up to 12 o'clock to-day. The late victory gets brighter and brighter, and the enemy was in full retreat towards Chamberburg and Greencastle. It is thought that General Lee will strain every nerve to reach Hagerstown, and it is thought that his aim is to reach Williamsport, and thence retreat into Virginia. Intercepted despatches give the information that Beauregard is in Richmond, and perhaps on his way to Culpepper. Meade is harrassing Lee with cavalry and following in pursuit."

New York, July 5.—The Herald's account of Friday's battle says:

"The attack on our left raged fiercely three hours when the enemy fell back yielding to us the whole of the battle field of last morning as well as of the previous day, at the same time a tremendous effort was made by the rebels to turn our right and gain our position on a wooded mountain commanding our positions on Cemetery Hill, but the unflinching bravery of the 12th corps, aided by a terrible fire of artillery, checked them. About 11 o'clock a. m. at a critical juncture one or two New York brigades arrived and were thrown into position on our right; this determined the fate of the day. The rebels quailed and retreated slowly, fighting at every step. The battle was raging for hours, until after noon, when the rebels abandoned the field. The rebels soon after massed in our front when the assault opened along the entire line, but our victorious forces drove them back. At 5 o'clock p. m., after twelve hours' incessant fighting, the contest terminated, our troops victorious at every point, with the entire battle-field in our possession. We took thousands of prisoners.

"At the close of the action Lee had the impudence to send in a flag of truce, asking a suspension of hostilities to bury his dead and exchange prisoners. General Meade replied that he intended to recapture all the prisoners and would bury their dead for them. Failing in this attempt to gain time, the enemy precipitately retreated to the mountains, leaving their guards and sentinels.

"This (Saturday) morning upwards of one thousand one hundred stragglers were taken in Gettysburg besides our wounded, who fell into the enemy's hands on Wednesday. General Pleasanton started at daybreak on Saturday, with artillery, in pursuit of the rebels, and at last accounts was pressing them hard. Both sides lost heavily 13,000 to 20,000 Unionists and 20,000 rebels. We have captured from 12,000 to 20,000 prisoners, more than quadruple what they have captured."

What Lee intends to do.

Correspondence of the N. Y. Herald.

BALTIMORE, June 30, 1863.

The fleets have come to fight yesterday and to-day in regard to the movements of General Lee's army prove the correctness of the views expressed in the leading editorial article of the Herald of June 25. Those views afford the elucidation of the problem which has so completely bewildered both General Hooker and the War Department, and in consequence of not comprehending which General Lee with his whole army, has been able not only to cross the Rappahannock, the Shenandoah, the Bull Run Mountains, the Blue Ridge and the Potomac, but also to invade Pennsylvania, and to take possession of a good portion of Maryland, and this, too, without any opposition whatever on the part of Hooker, whose express business is to fight Lee. The intelligence of the country is still insulted by such assurances as that "Hooker is watching all of Lee's movements;" that "the government has now got the rebel army just where they want them" and that "Hooker is prepared for any emergency." Hooker has watched General Lee's movements to very little purpose. Had any other general been in command of the splendid army of the Potomac Gen. Lee's army would never have been suffered to cross the Rappahannock, or would have been cut to pieces before it reached the Blue Ridge. If Hooker had been "prepared for the emergency," he would have proved it by making a rapid march up the left Bank of the Potomac from Washington to Williamsport, the distance by way of Rockville and Frederick City is only sixty miles. The march could have been made in three days. Then, on arriving at the Potomac, General Lee would have found the heads of his columns at Williamsport, at Falling Waters and at Antietam Ford confronted by the veteran legions of the peninsular campaign. In the face of such opposition he would not have dared to cross, and Hooker would have found himself in the exact position of Gen. McClellan after the battle of Antietam.

The news that I have received to-day confirms the intelligence which I have sent to you yesterday, to the effect that the whole of General Lee's army has crossed the Potomac, and is now in the undisturbed occupancy of all the territory in Maryland and Pennsylvania between the Potomac on the southwest, Carlisle on the north, and Westminster and Frederick City on the southeast. General Lee himself crossed the river on Thursday morning, June 25, with his whole staff and the train of waggons attached to his headquarters. This waggon train never accompanies him except when moving towards a point which he designs to occupy for a considerable time.

In regard to the strength of his forces, I have the most positive testimony that they were correctly enumerated in my former letters, and amount, as therein stated, to 125,000 troops, with over 125 pieces of field artillery; and that this force was augmented before General Lee left Culpepper by the arrival there of the first detachment of 20,000 troops from General Bragg's army at Shelbyville, all of whom are now with the rest of the rebel forces in Maryland and Pennsylvania.

To-day both Carlisle and Gettysburg are occupied by strong bodies of rebel troops, and it is reported that General Lee's headquarters are to be, or are already, established at the latter place. Detachments of cavalry are moving northward from Carlisle and eastward from Gettysburg. The trains on the Northern Central Railroad from this city to Harrisburg stopped running last night, and no trains are running to-day. The rebels can have but one object in view, and that is the destruction of the railroads which connect Washington and Baltimore with the North, and Harrisburg with the West.

It is in view of these facts alone, and with the map of Maryland and Pennsylvania before the observer, and with the eye fixed upon the territory now in the actual occupancy of the rebels, that the full design of Gen. Lee becomes apparent. If, on leaving Warrenton, about the 15th instant, General Lee had moved immediately on Washington, either by way of Centreville and Fairfax, or by way of Leesburg, Edwards' Ferry, and Rockville, or by way of Centreville, Coon's Ford, and Islandendburg, he might possibly have defeated Hooker and captured Washington. But could he have held the capital for a single week? Undoubtedly not. The whole North would have been aroused. In ten days, 500,000 volunteers would have rushed to Washington, and the rebel General would have been compelled to evacuate his dearly bought prize, after destroying as much of the city as he could.

But Gen. Lee designs more than that. He would save, and not destroy, the city of Washington. He designs the permanent occupation of the national capital. It is for this that he intends not simply to cut, but to substantially destroy, the three great railroads which lead from the whole country to Baltimore, the gateway of Washington—namely, the Pennsylvania Central, the Northern Central, and the Philadelphia and Baltimore roads. He has in the corps of Topographical Engineers in his army men who are well acquainted with all of these roads, and who know how and where their destruction can be most quickly and effectually accomplished. This work once done, Gen. Lee believes that the Union army will constitute no obstacle to his occupation of the Federal capital, at least none that he cannot overcome.

And once in the occupancy of Washington, he proposes to fortify it so strongly on the south and east that he cannot be driven from it. If it should be necessary for him to have more troops than those now with him, he has made arrangements for reinforcements to any extent which can be sent to him. He has taken care to keep open his communication with Richmond by the route over which he has just marched. Besides this, he also holds the shorter line from Richmond to his own estates at Arlington Heights, by way of Fredericksburg, Dumfries, Centreville, and Fairfax, of which latter place—only fifteen miles from Washington—his troops are now in possession.

It is whispered by those who know Lee best, that he never was a secessionist at heart; that he has no faith in the Jeff. Davis oligarchy or in the stability of the Southern Confederacy; that he loves the old Union and the old constitution, and wishes to see the integrity of the one and the supremacy of the other restored; that in the great resolution through which the country is now passing he aspires to play the part, not of Napoleon or Cromwell, but of General Monk, and to effect the restoration of constitutional government in America!

The London "Times" on Canada.

This able, yet unscrupulous journal has just come out in an attack upon the Canadian Government, which the Leader regards as "a crushing and unlooked rebuke," whilst the Globe characterizes it as "a sample of Cockney impudence."

The Times acknowledges that it knows no more of Canada than a Londoner knows of his next door neighbor, and it cares as little about us. And but for the risk of Britain being in war with some power on the continent, and its honour endangered through its colonies, the Times confesses the name of Canada might be forgotten.

The article goes on to state that "very incapable Government has just been beaten in the Canadian Assembly," and deals in language not at all warranted in its condemnation of a ministry which has received an overwhelming support from the British population of the Province. There are in the article before us indications of some Canadian hand having endeavored to enlighten the ignorance concerning Canada, which the Thunderer glories in. Among the charges brought against the Canadian Government are, their very incomprehensible shuffling with the Home Government as to the Inter-colonial railway, their failure to retrench, their reimposition of dues upon the trade coming down the St. Lawrence, and their neglect of preparations for defence.

To the apology which may be made in behalf of the Government for not enrolling a large militia force, that there is no probability of neighbouring States molesting us, the Times replies that not making such provision arises from indifference based on error or stupidity, and that as we do not know when a neighbour may become insane, we ought to involve ourselves in debt by providing means for protection and self-defence.

To some of these charges it may be replied that the Government was not in a position to enter upon undertakings involving a very large outlay, and consequently an increase to our already enormous debt, which a United States paper declares to be larger, in proportion to population, than theirs. There is also a great difference of opinion respecting an intercolonial railroad, especially after the experience of Lower Canadian railways, which, probably, do not pay working expenses. The people of Nova Scotia appear to be as tired of Government railway schemes as we in Canada are, for they rejected at the recent election the railway men by an overwhelming majority.

But railroads and a large militia force would probably require several millions of dollars, and how could the Government provide the money when the party which made taxation about as heavy as it could be borne, voted non-confidence when more taxation was proposed to meet the necessary expenses of the Province. The fact is, the Lower Canadians who are always clamoring for money, for purposes which Upper Canadians meet by local taxation, upset the Cartier-Macdonald Administration on the Militia Bill, because it involved an increase of taxes, and their non-confidence vote of last session, was on Mr. Howland's Budget, and not in the principles of the administration.

Canada, as part of the British Empire, has as much a claim to the services of the regular army as England itself, especially when there must be difficulties between the parent state and the United States Government which endangers Canada, and not the acts of our local Government.

In the matter of self-defence Canada has already done as well in proportion to its population as the mother-country; and it will surely be time enough for the Times to censure us for indifference and cowardice, when it finds us less alive to our safety and the honor of the father-land than we were when the "Trent" affair spread a military fervour throughout the Province. That journal will do us less injustice as an integral portion of the Empire when it loses its professed ignorance and indifference respecting us.

It is to be hoped that the present administration will profit by the animadversions of the Times, and show by their wise, economical and honorable management of public affairs that they are worthy of the positions they occupy. Canada would rise in the estimation of English statesmen if she pursued a more liberal policy in commercial matters. A free-trade country like England does not admire our protective policy and high customs duties.

Color d Troops.

The Anglo-African, in its last issue, in an article on the colored element and the war, says:—

Adjutant General Thomas had two weeks ago under arms	11,000
General Banks	3,000
Kansas regiments	1,000
General Hunter, about	3,000
General Foster	3,000
General Rosecrans, about	5,000
Navy	5,000
General Curtis	2,000
Massachusetts regiments	1,200
District of Columbia	800
Total	35,000

This calculation does not embrace in it those who are acting as pioneers for Gens. Banks and Grant in Louisiana and Mississippi, for these would doubtless swell the number to 50,000 men, nor do we believe the enumeration more than the official roll will exhibit.

—Two young men met one evening at the house of an acquaintance, with some young ladies, for one of whom both gentlemen entertained tender feelings. In a spirit of frolic one of the ladies turned off the gas, and the young men, thinking it a favorable moment to make known the state of their feelings to the fair object of their regard, moved seats at the same instant, and placed themselves, as they supposed, by the fair lady's side; but one had also moved, and the gentlemen were in reality seated next to each other. As the young men could not whisper without betraying their whereabouts, they gently took, as they thought, the soft little hand of the charmer, and when, after a while, they ventured to give a gentle pressure, each was surprised to find it returned by an unmistakable squeeze. It may well be imagined that the moments flew rapidly in this silent, mutual interchange of affections. But one of the girls, wondering at the unusual silence of the gentlemen, stepped noiselessly out, and suddenly returned with a light; and there sat the young men—most lovingly squeezing each other's hands, and supreme delight beaming in their eyes. Their consternation and the ecstacy of the ladies may be imagined but cannot be described. One of the young men was afterwards heard to say "that he thought all the while that his friend's hand felt a leetle hard!"

WANT OF PUNCTUALITY.—It is astonishing how many people there are who neglect punctuality. Thousands have failed in life from this cause alone. It is not only a serious vice in itself, but it is the fruitful parent of numerous other vices, so that he who becomes the victim of it gets involved in toils from which it is almost impossible to escape. It makes the merchant wasteful of time; it saps the business and reputation of the lawyer, and it injures the prospects of the mechanic. In a word there is not a profession, nor a station in life, which is not liable to the canker of the destructive habit. Many and many a time the failure of one man to meet his obligations brought on the ruin of a score of others. Thousands remain poor all their lives, who, if they were more faithful in their word, would secure a large run of custom, and so make their fortunes. Be punctual if you would succeed.

A PRESENT BEREAVED.—A. T. Stewart, Esq., the Merchant Prince of New York, has made a royal donation to the poor of Ireland. The ship Mary Edson, Capt. Nickerson, which sailed from New York on the 17th of May, was chartered by Mr. S. for $6,000 for the round trip. Her cargo of corn and provisions cost $60,000; and she is to bring back free of cost to them, from one hundred fifty to two hundred men and women between the ages of eighteen and thirty years, who may desire to seek a new home here. We know of no instance where one individual has done an act of charity so like the munificence of royalty. His contribution of $10,000 at the outbreak of the rebellion, in aid of the government, and his gift of a like amount for the relief of the starving operatives of England are well known. But this last benefaction, quietly performed, deserves the highest praise.—New Bedford Mercury.

Communications.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

PETERBORO', July 1, 1863.

DEAR SIR,—May I beg you to correct a statement made in your last issue. In the report of the proceedings of the School Board, the following paragraph occurs:

"At a former meeting, a Resolution was adopted, instructing the Secretary to publish the name of members of the Board who do not attend the regularly called meetings. The Secretary has handed me in the following names: Rev. J. M. Roger, Wm. Hall, Wm. Landy, James Hall."

The plea English of this is that the gentlemen named habitually absented themselves from the regular meetings of the Board, which, in my case, is not true, as I believe the minutes of the Board, during the many years I have been a member, as one has been more regular and constant in attendance.

What should have been said, and, I suppose, was intended was that the members mentioned were not present at the meeting reported.

I am, dear Sir,
Yours truly,
JOHN. M. ROGER.

The above letter was unavoidably crowded out in last week's issue. We can bear testimony from a long acquaintance of Mr. Roger in School matters that he has always been and still is a steady and firm fri

Landlord Assassination in Ireland.

The county of Tipperary has been recently startled by the murder of Mr. Jackson, a land-lord and magistrate. Mr Jackson was "generally esteemed and beloved by one of all classes and creeds." It is stated that he had four tenants who had paid him no rent for several years, and that he had served them with ejectment processes. Two of them were brothers named Peters; the names of the others were Cummins and Kennedy. On Thursday morning Mr. Jackson rose from his breakfast table about 10 o'clock, and having ordered his car to be ready immediately to proceed to Nenagh, he lit his pipe, and went out in his slippers, as he was accustomed, to take a walk in the shrubbery, which is close to the house. He also gave directions that his little son, four years old, should be got ready to accompany him on the car. Hours passed and he did not make his appearance; yet Mrs. Jackson was not alarmed, supposing that he had walked across the fields to his brother's, or that he had gone into town with some friend that was passing. She sent to her brother's and to her father's residence, but nothing was heard of her husband in either place. The idea of murder did not occur to her during the day, but during the night she sent the coachman, steward, and herd to search about the grounds, and about daybreak on Friday morning they found the body under a cluster of laurels in the shrubbery within a few yards of the house. The slippers were first discovered a few paces from the body, which was lying with the face downwards. The head was covered with blood, but, as there were no marks of violence on the other parts of the body, they feared he had burst a blood vessel. Dr. Cahalan was sent for, and speedily arrived. He found the skull broken in two places by a blunt instrument. The blow must have been struck with a bludgeon behind, and the effect was instant death The assassin seems to have been lurking behind a tree, and to have come stealthily behind him as he sauntered quietly along the gravelled walk smoking his pipe with no thought of danger.

Singular but successful defence.

The following remarkable defence of a prisoner, tried for highway robbery, will, we doubt not, interest our readers; but we have no mode of ascertaining when it occurred. That it is not of recent date is certain, because it appeared in a work that was presented to the late Sir John Conroy, when officially connected with his Majesty the King of the Belgians in 1832:—

A gentleman, followed by a servant in livery, rode into an inn in the West of England, one evening a little before dark. He told the landlord that he should be detained by business in that part of the country for a few days, and wished to know if there were any amusements going on in the town to fill up the interval of time. The landlord replied that it was their race and assize week, and that he would, therefore, be at no loss to pass away his leisure hours. On the gentleman's making answer that this was fortunate, for he was fond of hearing trials, the other said that an interesting trial for robbery would come on the next day, on which the peoples opinion was very much divided, the evidence being very strong against the prisoner; but the man persisted resolutely in declaring that he was in a distant part of the country at the time the robbery was committed.

The guest manifested considerable anxiety to hear the trial; but as the court would probably be crowded, expressed some doubt of getting a place. The landlord told him that there could be no difficulty of a gentleman of his appearance getting a seat; but that, to prevent any accident, he would himself go with him, and speak to one of the beadles. Accordingly, they went into court next morning, and through the landlord's interest with the officers of the court, the gentleman was shown to a seat on the bench. Presently after the trial began.

While the evidence was proceeding against him, the prisoner had remained with his eyes fixed on the ground, seemingly very much depressed; till, being called on for his defence, he suddenly fainted. This excited some surprise; and it seemed at first like a trick to gain time. As soon as he came to himself, being asked by the judge the cause of his behavior, he said:—

"Oh, my lord, I see a person who can save my life; that gentleman," pointing to the stranger, "can prove I am innocent, might I only have permission to put a few questions to him."

The eyes of the whole court were now turned upon the gentleman, who said he felt in a very awkward situation to be called upon, as he did not remember ever to have seen the man before, but he would answer any question that was asked him.

"Well, then," said the man "don't you remember landing at Dover at such a time?"

To this the gentleman answered that he had landed at Dover not long before; but that he could not tell whether it was on the day he mentioned or not.

"Well," said he, "but don't you recollect that a person in a blue jacket and trousers carried your trunk to the inn?"

To this he answered that of course some person had carried his trunk for him, but he did not know what dress he wore.

"But," said the prisoner, "don't you remember that the person who went with you from the boat told you a story of his being in the service; that he thought himself an ill-used man, and that he showed you a scar he had on one side of his forehead?"

During this question the countenance of the stranger underwent a considerable change. He said he certainly did recollect such a circumstance. On the man's putting the hair aside and showing the scar, he became quite sure that he was the same person. A buzz of satisfaction now ran through the court, for the day on which, according to the prisoner's account, the gentleman had met him at Dover, was the same on which he was charged with the robbery in a distant part of the county. The stranger, however, could not be certain of the time, but that he sometimes made a memorandum of dates in his pocket-book, and might possibly have done so on this occasion. On turning to his pocket-book, he found a memorandum of the time he landed, which corresponded with the prisoner's assertion.

This being the only circumstance necessary to prove the alibi, the prisoner was discharged.

PROGRESS OF THE VILLAGE OF HASTINGS.—Hastings is situated on the river Trent, a few miles from Rice Lake. 2 years ago there were some dozen houses in it; now there are over one thousand inhabitants, 2 four-story factories—one cotton and one woollen; 2 large saw mills, grist mill and tannery, and ten stores; altogether, it is quite a thriving village.

The cotton factory is called the Trent Valley Mills; it has 38 looms and turns out about 8,000 yards of grey cotton per week. The same firm have a small factory where they knit gentlemen's underclothing, vests and pants. They turn out a very respectable article imitation of the Scotland.—Extracts of private Letter.

Deaths.

At Clarence, Ottawa River, on the 26th ult., in the 76th year of his age, Mr. Nicholas Ayer, a native of Devonshire, England. Deceased was a shipwright in Portsmouth Dockyard during the Napoleonic wars. He emigrated to Canada in 1819, and settled in Clarence in 1822, where he underwent the struggle incident upon the settlement of a new country. Possessed of a quiet and unassuming turn of mind, he passed serenely through a life of toil and trial, exemplifying the traits of an honest and good man. Possessed of but a moderate share of earthly goods he yet felt rich, but it consisted in the blessed assurance of being an heir "to an inheritance incorruptible undefiled and that fadeth not away." He loved the Bible,

TO THE ELECTORS
OF THE TRENT DIVISION

GENTLEMEN,

Mr. Smith retiring from the Legislative Council, causes the necessity of an Election to fill the vacancy.

At the earnest request of my old friends and supporters, combined with the strong desire manifested by a large number of those who voted against me in 1861, I have consented to allow myself to be placed once more before the electors of the Trent Division.

As my canvass in 1861 has not been forgotten, and the time is so short that I could not possibly do justice to any portion of the Division, in attempting to meet you in the various localities, I trust you will excuse me, and that you will see the necessity of at once forming your working committees, in order to be prepared for the Election should there be a contest.

The main questions before the Country, such as Representation by Population, our Common Schools, the thorough organization of a sufficient force for the protection of our noble country, a due regard being paid to that economy which will be necessary under the present state of the Finances,—Retrenchment in every possible form in the various departments of the Government, in order to bring the income of the country in excess of the expenditure, with a view to lessen the burdens at present imposed upon the people, by indirect taxation on the necessaries of life,—no further aid to the Grand Trunk Railroad, or to jobbers who infest the country in order to fatten on the spoils of the people,—in fact a return to the most rigid economy in order to relieve the mass of the people, and save the country from utter ruin,—all of which will command my attention.

If elected I shall discharge my duty to the Division independently of sectional feeling.

I shall meet as many of you as can make it convenient, at Peterboro', on the 6th of July next.

Yours, &c., &c.,

ARE the only Physicians in the State who are members of the Royal College of Surgeons, London.

May be consulted from 8 o'clock in the morning, until 9 at night, in every stage and symptom of Disease.

The treatment they adopt is the result of upwards of thirty years' extensive and successful practice in London.

A most Scientific Invention

An instrument for the cure of general Debility, or Nocturnal Emissions, more properly known as Seminal Weakness, &c. These complaints can be permanently cured in from fifteen days to two months by the use of this Instrument, when used conjointly with medicines.

Dr. AMOS & SON, in order to satisfy the most skeptical as to the merits of this Instrument, pledge themselves that in any instance where it may prove unsatisfactory after a fair trial, the money will be refunded by returning the Instrument in good order. Price Ten Dollars, by mail or express.

YOUNG MEN TAKE PARTICULAR NOTICE

Those who have injured themselves by a certain practice indulged in when alone—a habit frequently learned from evil companions, or at school, the effects of which are nightly felt even when asleep, and if not cured, renders marriage impossible and destroys both mind and body, should apply immediately. Self abuse is one of the most formidable enemies to health, for nothing else in the dire catalogue of human diseases causes so certain a drain upon the human system, draws into the thousands of victims through a few years' misdirection down to an untimely grave. THE BRITISH AMERICAN.

A MONTHLY MAGAZINE DEVOTED TO

Literature, Science and Art.

NOTWITHSTANDING the repeated attempts which have been made in Canada to establish a Monthly Magazine devoted to Literature and Science it is nevertheless apparent, that success has not been the reward of those who have engaged in the undertaking.

The Canadian Institute at Toronto, the Natural History Society of Montreal, the Literary and Historical Society of Quebec, aided by the Government grants they enjoy, regularly publish their proceedings, and that society to a greater or less extent, the several fields which from the special objects of their incorporation, fill the public ear large are still unsupplied with a periodical Magazine devoted to general literature of Canadian origin and growth, and to science divested of unattractive technicalities and adapted to the requirements of readers who do not profess familiarity with its abstruse Exhibits.

It is the design of the originators of the British American Magazine to occupy this vacant field, and endeavor to satisfy a want which is so generally felt to exist.

In executing the plan of a new periodical, it is desirable to supply the public with some guarantee of its character and prospects. It is therefore determined to request intending contributors to permit their names to be published in the prospectus, as among those who are willing, not only to give it countenance and support, but to add to its vitality by contributing to its pages. It is also thought advisable to publish the names of those who are willing and anxious to introduce the undertaking by a general announcement in the first number.

Many of the difficulties which have impeded the progress, and ultimately led to the abandonment of a Monthly periodical, if not in general design to the British American Magazine, have disappeared, with the advance of the country in population, wealth and civilization; hence the origin alone commence their labors with far brighter expectations than their predecessors could have enjoyed, and they anticipate, without fear of disappointment, the successful progress of the undertaking.

The aim of the British American Magazine is to encourage British American Literature, to offer an opportunity long desired by many, for giving public and permanent expression to their thoughts, to foster a taste for literary pursuits, to prevent the marvels of Science in familiar language, easily understood by all, to supply a monthly abstract of whatever is interesting and valuable in the periodical literature of Great Britain, and a brief resume of the progress of Literature, Science, Industry and Art, throughout North British America.

It will be within the project of the Magazine to furnish critical notices of new publications, unfettered by prejudices, nationality, or religious bias; and while political discussion of a party character will be absolutely excluded from its pages, set descriptive articles relating to our home institutions, affecting the general interests of the country, will be freely admitted.

Each monthly issue will contain one hundred and twelve pages, of the same size as the English Monthlies, which will form at the close of the year two volumes containing 672 pages each.

The publishers hope to be able to commence their issue in April next, and from the success which has already attended their efforts to procure subscribers, they anticipate that they will be able to present the British American Magazine with a handsome engraving to $10,000 copies for its first number.

Terms $3 per annum, in advance.

THE Undersigned has for several years past been engaged in which has yielded him at the rate of three thousand dollars per annum, and now willing to teach to others. The business is of a highly useful and general character, adapted both to cities and villages, and one that any person of ordinary capacity, young or old, male or female, can acquire with a few hours' practice, and by which they can secure a very handsome income. Several young ladies who have received instructions from me, both in New York State and Pennsylvania, are earning upwards of $15 per week by it, and there is no reason why any one else cannot do the same. Invalids, even, can do well by it, as it is no paddling affair, but a business that is perfectly respectable. Gentlemen and ladies of leisure who would like to learn the business for their own amusement or pleasure, will find the practice of it a pleasant pastime, and one that they will take great interest in. On receipt of a dollar, will send printed instructions by which any person can readily acquire the art, and these instructions will also contain every particular relative to the carrying it on so that it will be highly profitable. The purchaser of the "printed instructions" will also be authorized to teach it to others: and I have sometimes realized as much as $200, for teaching it personally to a single individual. I would state further that $1.50 or $3 will buy everything that is necessary to commence the business with, and the articles can be got almost anywhere, in city or country, or if preferred, I can furnish them. THE WORLD.

AN INDEPENDENT

Daily, Weekly and Semi-Weekly NEWSPAPER.

IN offering the millions of our countrymen and increase of the favor which in so short a period has given to The World its present rank among Journals—a circulation, business patronage, and influence equalled by other Journals only after the effort of many years—we renew to our old and new subscribers, as the months that are to follow, our promise that no labor nor expense will be spared to render the World more welcome to its

The Best Literature and Intelligence.

In politics, now as ever, the World is independent but never neutral. Its only creed is a national one—of which

The Preservation of the Union and the Just and Practical Discussion and Action

are the corner stones.

The political events of the past year have notably demonstrated the need of reliable, fearless outspoken, fair-minded

Conservative Journal.

In the Counsels and Councils of the country, which shall give constant, bold and vigorous utterance to the conservative sentiments of the best men and the best masses of the nation. Opposing every enemy to whether armed in rebellion at the South, or insidiously planting the seeds of discussion at the North.

The Union,

Opposing every violation of the Constitution,

the only bond and hope of union, the only ground upon which we can exhort and compel the allegiance of the South.

Opposing every infraction of

The Laws,

in high places or in low, believing that obedience to Law is service to God.

Opposing every violation of the

Freedom of Speech, of the Press, of Political Discussion and Action,

by whomsoever those violations are committed, whether by the executive in its

Arbitrary, Illegal, and Unjust Arrests

its refusal of the privileges of the writ of habeas corpus, its denial of the rights and liberties of citizens, its arrest without warrant, its imprisonments without trial, its abrogation of state and federal laws, its illegal proclamation of an empty emancipation, or whether those violations be committed by that party in power, its creators and its passive, advocating measures which must sunder the Union for the sake of destroying slavery, and denouncing treason against all their political opponents.

Loyal to the government always, it will give to the administration a hearty and vigorous support whenever and wherever the administration itself is loyal by living the Union, for which alone the North is waging war; it will oppose peace itself, till the success of the war assures the permanence of peace, and will oppose the prosecution of the war with an economy which has not hitherto governed its expenditures, and a vigor which the nation during a year has prayed for in vain.

The same care will be exercised over the columns of the World to exclude everything which could offend a pure, Christian morality, and recourse will always be had to the same high principles as well to guard its columns as to guide its judgment of men and events.

All the News

will be found in the columns of the World from the various departments of human activity,

Political, Agricultural, and Commercial, as well as in Literature, Science and Art.

New Publications, Inventions, Discoveries, and Works of Art will receive the same careful and thorough attention.

The latest and most important news from London, Paris, Turin, Rome, Syria, China, California, Japan, Egypt, and South America, and the Canadas, will be found in the Daily World.

Our correspondents are attached to the various divisions of the army; will accompany them wherever they go, and by the free use of the telegraph and the mails, present in the columns of the World

A Complete History of the War,

from day to day, and from month to month.

In all the Weekly and Semi-Weekly editions of the World, especially large space will be given to

Agriculture,

and to all departments of

Manufacturing and Mechanical Industry.

The Weekly World will contain an admirable serial story during the current year

THE DAILY WORLD.

The Daily World is the most complete Commercial and News Paper published in America, besides its full telegraphic news, we correspondence, and foreign news, &c., as any two cent daily, is contains also much fuller commercial news. Poetry.

RETIREMENT.

A shady and sequestered spot,
To meditate alone,
Where foot of man approacheth not,
Untrodden and unknown.

A little brook to sing to me,
Some simple flower to scatter;
The clatter of a spreading tree;
The gales of heaven the while.

To fan me as they murmur near,
There would I ne'er resign,
To call the proudest portion here,
With all its glory mine.

Poor World! Thou art a generous soul,
All selfish though thou be,
To sip the froth of pleasure's bowl
And leave the draught to me.

Miscellaneous.

Abolition Perversion of the War.

(From the N. Y. World.)

The Tribune seems intent on holding us responsible for the phraseology, and for every urn in the phraseology, in which the Democratic state conventions of Pennsylvania and Illinois have couched their resolutions. As we were on neither of the committees by which these resolutions were drafted, and did not participate in the proceedings of the conventions by which they were adopted, we do not see why we should be so strictly answerable for the exact wording of their resolutions; much less why we should be called upon to acknowledge or disavow the inferences which it suits the Tribune to draw from them Whether the Democratic conventions of other states have succeeded in putting their resolves in language which is proof against the hypocritical cavils of the abolitionists is a very slight matter for the expenditure of so much vehemence as the Tribune seems inclined to waste upon it The wise and good Fenelon relates of himself that having fallen asleep in a country church he was struck, on awakening, with the violent gestures and great appearance of unction of the preacher and collecting his attention for what he supposed must be an affecting passage of the discourse, he found that the jactating parson was merely giving out a notice for the next Sunday. It strikes us that this disproportionate energy is well imitated in so urgent a challenge as the following on a trivial point of verbal criticism relating to the resolutions of a political convention:

We once more ask the Democratic organ to say frankly:

1. Whether the Democracy of New York fellowships and approves the above positions of the Democracy of Pennsylvania and of Illinois.

2. Whether it upholds as true the assertion that the federal administration avows and proclaims that it is no longer fighting the southern rebels in behalf of the Union and the Constitution.

3. Whether it does or does not justify the clear implication of the Illinois Democracy, that by simply ceasing to prosecute the war we may secure "peace upon the basis of a restoration of the Union;" and

4. Whether, if it be false that a restoration of the Union may thus be secured, and that our government avows and practises its purpose in prosecuting the war to be other than that of re-establishing the supremacy of the Constitution and Union, they are not wicked, perilous, and (in the present condition of our country) treasonable falsehoods?

Dare the World meet squarely the issue thus made up?

Although this daring of a public journal to express its opinion has an unseemly and ridiculous appearance of bravado, and its calling of names is extensively impudent, we will waive points of taste, and pay our respects to the interrogatories of the Tribune seriatim.

1. As the first question does not ask for our opinion, but for that of the Democracy of New York, we must say that the only authentic organ of the Democracy of this state consists of its delegates duly chosen and empowered. If these delegates shall choose, in the next state convention, to make themselves responsible for the precise phraseology of the Pennsylvania and Illinois resolutions, it will be done after full deliberation and careful comparison of views; and if they should dissent from any part of that phraseology, considerations of courtesy will prevent formal expressions of dissent, and the Democracy of New York will express their views in well-weighed language of their own. We are free to say, however, that, in our opinion there is nothing in the Pennsylvania or the Illinois resolutions calculated to obstruct the adoption of a satisfactory platform for the Democratic party of the country by the national convention which will meet next year. In substance and consensus the Democratic party of the several loyal states have sufficient unity to enable them to act together, and this being the case, there will be little difficulty in putting their common views in fit words.

2. The Tribune's second point in the one on which all its interrogatories seem to hinge. When this has been properly answered the substance of its whole challenge will have been met. Whether the administration has "proclaimed" that it is no longer fighting for the restoration of the Union, is of no importance except as furnishing evidence of its intentions. If the purpose of the war has really been changed, the administration is equally culpable whether the change is proclaimed or not. That the purpose of the war has been changed we hold ourselves ready to prove whenever it shall please the Tribune to demand it; but as nothing is now called for but an expression of our opinion on the use of the word "proclaim" we confine our attention to the point of verbal criticism which the Tribune raises. President Lincoln's first proclamation of emancipation "proclaims" in these words:—"All persons held as slaves within any state, or any designated part of a state the people whereof shall be, then" (Jan. 1st, 1863) "in rebellion against the United States, shall be then, thenceforward, and forever FREE; and the executive government of the United States, including the military and naval authorities, will RECOGNIZE and MAINTAIN the freedom of such persons." The President, in this language, gave in the face of the world a solemn pledge to make good the freedom of all slaves in the states, and parts of states, in rebellion, on the 1st of January. He declared and proclaimed that he would use the military and naval authority to maintain the freedom of all slaves he assumed the power to emancipate. If the rebels should offer to lay down their arms and return to the Union on condition of keeping their slaves, the President stands pledged not to accept of such submission, but to continue the war, and to use the military authority to maintain the freedom of the slaves. Does President Lincoln intend to break his faith? After solemnly pledging the whole whole military and naval power of the government to maintain the freedom of persons "then, thenceforward, and forever," has he any reason to complain that he is taken at his word? Has a Democratic state convention any right to presume that this solemn promise was made in bad faith, and that President Lincoln never meant to keep it? If the promise is kept—if the declaration that the slaves shall be thenceforward and forever free, is maintained by the military authority and made good, it is evident the war which was begun for the Union is perverted into an abolition arm de. The President proclaimed the when he made a promise which precludes the acceptance of the submission of the rebels so long as they do not acquiesce in the emancipation of their slaves. If there should be no opportunity to restore the Union with slavery still existing in the states in rebellion on the 1st of January, the President stands pledged in advance to reject it, and to continue to use the military authority for the maintenance of the freedom of the slaves

3. The Tribune's "implication," deduction, or strained inferences from the language of the Illinois platform are of little consequence. We agree with the Illinois Democracy in thinking that peace is desirable as soon as it is consistent with the restoration of the Union, without any regard to Mr. Lincoln's pledge to maintain, by military authority, the freedom of the slave forever.

4. The Tribune's number four requires no answer, after what has been said on its two and three.

We now desire, in our turn, that the Tribune will "come to the point," and explain how the President can absolve himself from his promise to maintain, by military authority, the perpetual freedom of all the slaves emancipated by his proclamation? Don't dodge!

The Romance of a Poor Young Girl.

Some days ago a comely young woman arrived in Chicago from Louisville, Kentucky, whose history thus recorded in the Post of that city, we commend to Miss Braddon for elaboration in her next novel:

The lady's name is Annie Lillybridge, and her family reside in Hamilton, Canada West. Last spring Miss Lillybridge was employed in a dry good store where she became acquainted with a Lieut. W——, of one of the Michigan Regiments, and an intimacy sprung up immediately between them. They corresponded for some time, and became much attached to each other. Some time during last summer Lieut. W—— was appointed to a position in the Twenty-third Michigan Infantry, then rendezvousing in Iona county. The thought of parting from the gay Lieutenant nearly drove her mad, and she resolved to share his dangers and be near him. No sooner had she resolved upon this course than she proceeded to act Purchasing male attire she visited Iona, enlisted in Captain Kavanagh's company, Twenty-first regiment. While in camp she managed to keep her secret from all—not even the object of her attachment, who met her every day, was aware of her presence so near him.

Annie left with her regiment for Kentucky, passed through the temptations of a camp life, endured long marches and sleeping on the cold ground, without a murmur. At last, the night before the battle of Pea Ridge (or Prairie Grove), in which her regiment took part, her sex was discovered by a member of her company; but she enjoined secrecy upon him, after relating her previous history. On the following day she was under fire, and from a letter she has in her possession it appears she behaved with marked gallantry, and by her own hand shot a rebel captain who was in the act of firing upon Lieut. W——. But the fear of revealing her sex continually haunted her.—After the battle, she was sent with others to collect the wounded, and one of the first corpses found by her was the body of the soldier who discovered her sex

Days and weeks passed on and she became a universal favorite with the regiment—so much so that Col. Stephens frequently detailed her as a regiment clerk, a position that brought her in close contact with her lover, who at this time was either Major or Adjutant of the regiment. A few weeks subsequently she was out on picket duty, when she received a shot in the arm that disabled her; and notwithstanding the efforts of the surgeon, her wound grew continually worse. She was sent to the hospital at Louisville, where she has remained until a few weeks ago, when she was discharged by the post surgeon, as her arm was stiffened and rendered useless for life She implored to be permitted to return to her regiment, but the surgeon was unyielding, and discharged her. Annie immediately hurried towards home, and by the aid of benevolent persons reached this city. At Cincinnati, she told her secret to a friendly lady; and was supplied with female attire. She declares that she will enlist in her old regiment again if their is a recruiting officer for the Twenty-first in Michigan. She still clings to the Lieutenant, and says she must be near him if he falls or is taken down sick; but where he goes she will go; and when he dies, she will end her life by her own hands.

A Life Long Duel.

One of the most curious duels under the French empire was one that lasted 19 years. It had its origin in Strasbourg. A captain of hussars, Fournier by name, killed, under the most frivolous pretext, a youth named Blum, the only support of a family. The evening Blum was buried, Gen. Moreau gave a ball, and he gave instructions to his aid-de-camp, Dupont, to refuse admittance to Fournier. The latter, irritated, challenged the aid-de-camp for carrying out his general's orders, but luckily the Dupont came off best and wounded the bully. But a month having elapsed, Fournier had so far recovered as to call Dupont out again, and this time it was the latter's turn to be placed hors de combat. Being about to meet a third time, Fournier, who used to amuse himself by knocking the pipe out of his brother officer's mouth, when riding by, proposed pistols. But to this Dupont naturally declined to accede, and they fought once more with swords, both being slightly wounded. The two antagonists became generals without having ceased to fight whenever an occasion presented itself. One night Dupont arrived at a village in the Grisons, so poor that there was not an inn in the place. There was only a light in one lonely hut. Dupont opened the door, and found himself face to face with Fournier.

"What you?" he said gaily. "Well, then, we must have a bout with the sword."

And so saying, they set to work, conversing all the time. At length Dupont pierced Fournier's neck, and held him pinned to the wall at arm's length.

"Come, now," he remarked, "you must acknowledge that you did not anticipate that trick."

"Oh! I know one quite as good as that. When you are obliged to let me go. I will give you one in the abdomen that will give your bowels fresh air."

"Thank you, but I shan't let go. I shall pass the night in this position."

"A pleasant perspective. Do you know that I am not at all at my ease?"

"Let go your sword, then, and I will let you go."

"No; not till I have disemboweled you."

Luckily the noise brought some officers, who separated these Moderate enemies."

But after the lapse of time, Dupont wished to marry. This he could not do very well so long as Fournier was alive. So he went to Paris to find him out.

"Ah! you here?" said Fournier. "We shall have another little bout then."

"Yes," replied Dupont; "but listen to me for a moment first. I want to get married, but to do so, I must get rid of you. So this time we fight with pistols."

"What! are you mad?" said Fournier, astonished.

"No; I know your skill, but I propose to equalize the combat. There is a little wood near Neuilly. I propose that we go there, and that, after getting out of sight one another, we shall track each other at our convenience."

"Agreed to. But don't think of marriage, for I propose you shall die a bachelor."

On the day appointed, Fournier and Dupont entered the wood. Each advanced stealthily through the thicket, till their eyes met in the foliage. Each at the same time rushed behind the tree. The position was a delicate one. Dupont passed the tail of his coat beyond the trunk. It was struck in a moment or a ball that whistled by.

"So much for one," said the general.

A few moments more elapsed, when holding his pistol pointed with his left hand, as if to fire, he pushed his hat out with his right. It was struck in a second.

"That is the last," said Dupont, and he walked, pistol in hand, right upon Fournier.

"Your life belongs to me," he said; "but will not take it."

"Just as you like," replied the hussar.

"Only remember this, I reserve the rights which I suspend to-day; and if your ever cross my path I will shoot you like a dog."

And thus ended the long succession of duels, which altogether had been carried on nineteen years.

The Source of the Nile.

The great geogra hical secret which has puzzled mankind for ages has been solved. Julius Cæsar declared that he would abandon his career of conquest in a moment if he thought he could discover the fountain of the Nile. Bayard Taylor wrote a few years ago:

"Since Columbus first looked upon San Salvador, the earth has but one emotion of triumph left in her bestowal, and that she reserved for him who shall drink from the fountains of the white Nile."

This brave drinker has been found. It is Captain Speke, an Englishman, who really discovered the Lake Victoria Nyanza on the 3d of August, 1858; but his claim that this was the true source of the Nile having been discredited, he has just returned from a second trip, which confirms the claims beyond all doubt. The lake lies between the equator and 4 degrees south, and between longitude 31 and 32 degrees. This is nearly the locality which the general conjecture of scientific men had fixed upon.

The river had formerly been traced, by expeditions sent out by the Pashas of Egypt to within five degrees of the equator—and there the exploration had stopped. The length of the Nile, as now ascertained, is something over 3,000 miles. It is peculiar among large rivers in having no affluent within 1,400 miles from its mouth, and in having a periodical inundation of great regularity and fertilizing value. The latter begins in June and ends in September, and is owing to the periodical rains in the region around the river's source. In the days of Herodotus, 16 cubits was considered a rise necessary for a fair overflow. Now, 22 cubits is the average which indicates the elevation of the valley by reason of the successive deposits. We do not know that the discovery of the source of the Nile is of much practical consequence, but it is well to have all these questions settled.

Three hundred Scotch immigrants arrived in Toronto on Wednesday last.

A Rich Scamp and a waiting to Woman who wear short hair.

We yesterday heard of a serio-comic incident which occurred, not a hundred miles from here, that must have been decidedly interesting to the parties concerned, and should prove a valuable story, for the perusal of jealous husbands. The facts given are as follows:

One of our most respectable citizens, who is blessed with the prettiest and best of wives, and one little "responsibility," had been absent from home for some days. His spouse during his absence had discharged the servant girl and employed in her place the wife of a soldier who had just returned from the war.

The little woman being lonely in her husband's absence, had induced the soldier's wife to share her bed with her. On the night the loving husband returned, the woman had before retiring, been engaged in repairing her Sugar mama's coat, and carelessly thrown it upon a chair on the sitting room. The anxious husband returned about 12 o'clock and admitted himself with his night key, found everything quiet, and cautiously struck a light, when the first thing that attracted attention was the soldiers coat upon the chair near his wife's bed-room. Instantly the green eyed monster seized him, and stealthily throwing the light upon the bed, he saw his wife reposing upon the same pillow with a masculine appearing person. (The woman who was with her, wearing her hair shingled, and being coarse featured.)

He was for a moment transfixed with rage, but soon determined to wreak the direst vengeance upon the supposed guilty pair. He soon procured a deadly weapon, and with murder in his eye, advanced toward the sleeping couple. At this juncture the soldier's wife awoke, and seeing the—to her—strange man approaching with savage aspect, jumped from the bed with a scream, and made a dash for a closet where she was for a moment safe. This of course awoke his wife. Her attempts to learn what the trouble was, were fruitless. The enraged husband would not listen. He rushed to the closet and dragged forth the trembling woman from her hiding place. Upon bringing her to the light and discovering her sex, the scene may be well imagined, but we shall not undertake to describe it.—(Edmara Press.)

The Hole in the Fence.

Timothy bates started off for school one bright September morning, with his arithmetic lesson well learned, and his slate brim full of sums under his arm. He was a little early, but then his mother wanted him to leave a note at Squire Jones' house. Tommy was glad enough to go that way, for very often Simon, the squire's gardener, had given him a bunch of flowers or a nice pear for the asking.

He peeped this morning through the slats of the garden fence, but no gardener was to be seen. Timothy was sadly disappointed, for he had made up his mind to carry a nice bouquet to his teacher who was very fond of flowers. He did his errand, and then sauntered slowly along, for it yet wanted a quarter of an hour of school time. Right across the way lay the squire's fish pound, glimmering in the sunshine, with its nicely pebbled shore and gaily painted boat. It made a pretty picture set in the green field; but Tommy did not look that way, for he felt sore about his lost bouquet, and, I am sorry to say, he began to hanker after some luscious looking Autumn pears which hung over the high fence of the squire's fruit orchard.

A club or a small stone would have brought half a dozen of them down, but Tommy would never have done such a thing as that, for he was on the whole a well meaning boy. Moreover, Squire Jones had entered into a compact with the village boys, whereby they were to touch none of his fruit, and he was to give them as many as they could eat, when he harvested them.

Now, boys, when your mouths begin to water after your neighbor's pears and apples, don't stop to look at them a second time, but walk straight along. This is what Tommy ought to have done; but instead of that he lingered and paried until a pear wickedly found its way into his jacket pocket. Just then he spied a great eye peeping at him through a knot hole in the garden fence. He threw the pear away, and ran off to school as fast as he could. He was a wretched guilty boy all the week. The great eye kept following him; and when, on Saturday afternoon, quire Jones' man brought a bushel of pears to the school house door, saying they were to be divided among all the young masters; save the boy whom the Squire caught stealing the pears, Tommy felt as if he could not live another day. He did live, however,—five to gain the Squire's forgiveness—and, remembering this severe lesson, grew up into a good and honest man.

Whenever our young friends feel tempted to do anything wrong, let them remember that there is certainly a great eye looking at them. "The eye of the Lord is in every place, beholding the evil and the good"—Well Spring.

TREATMENT OF COLOURED MEN IN WASHINGTON.—"Like priest, like people," is an old motto, and as true here as elsewhere. The spirit of slavery hidden beneath a loyal mask, still governs the old residents of this city. On Monday last corporal John Ross of the colored regiment engaged recruiting, was set upon by a "respectable mob." When he had been well beaten the police that stood by thought it time to interfere; and they did interfere by arresting the negro, striking him over the head with their batons and then lodging him for twenty-four hours in the guard house! and although Government is in earnest in its work of enlisting blacks, the community is against it; and it is hardly safe for a colored man to parade his uniform in the by-streets of Washington or Baltimore. The colored man is undoubtedly rising in the political and social scale; and his old masters are throwing every obstacle

Jeff. Davis on the Fall of Vicksburg.

The fall of Vicksburg must have the most serious consequences to the confederacy. Jeff. Davis himself being judge, its capture and the capture of Port Hudson will be a fatal blow to its prospects. In his speech to the Mississippi Legislature, made about nine months since, he said, with reference to holding the line of the river, that it was a "necessity not only to the people on the banks, but to the confederacy itself.—Vicksburg and Port Hudson are points that must be defended, and every effort must be strained for the purpose. The confederacy must stand or fall by the defence of the river."

General Scott held this view before the war had fairly opened, and his scheme was to confine the fighting to the river, which could be pierced from Cairo to New Orleans, as he supposed, in about eight great battles. If Davis really believes what he said to the Mississippians, he is bound to take immediate measures to bring about an honorable peace. It is monstrous to continue a hopeless war.

The Coca Leaf of Brazil.

Tea, coffee, tobacco, spices, sink into insignificance beside this invaluable leaf, which is the first necessity of life to the Indian, who in never seen without his leathern pouch containing the leaves and a small box of powdered lime. At least three times a day he rests from labor to chew his embecilla. Carefully removing the midrib of the leaves, he masticates them into a small ball, called an acullico. Then, repeatedly inserting a small piece of moistened wood, like a tooth-pick, into the box of unslacked lime, he introduces the powder which remains attached to it in to the acullico, until the latter had acquired the requisite flavor. This lime mitigates the bitterness of the leaf, the flavor of which is like that of bad green tea.

The marvellous properties of the coca are, first, its power of strengthening the digestion in a way no other tonic can approach; and next its power of preventing asthmatic effects in the rapid ascent of high mountains; and, above all, its efficacy as a substitute for food. In this latter quality we have the surprising testimony of Tschudi the traveller, in addition to that of many others. He mentions that an Indian, sixty-two years of age, was employed by him during five consecutive days and nights in laborious excavations. During the whole period he never ate anything, but every three hours chewed half an ounce of coca and kept the acullico constantly in his mouth. Nor did he require more than two hours sleep in the night. When the labor was finished, accompanied Tschudi during the ride of twenty-three leagues over the Huitam plains, constantly running alongside of the sumble mule, and never resting but for the purpose of making an acullico. When they separated he declared himself perfectly willing to do a similar amount of work if he had a plentiful allowance of coca. In the Cornhill Magazine we were told of a scientific investigation of this marvellous plant, which fully bore out the statements of travellers; and if used only as a tonic there is no drug now imported which would be so valuable to a dyspeptic people like that of Europe.—Saturday Review.

A Rebel Will.

The following was found by a soldier of the 24th Michigan Infantry, recently, in a house in the little village of Fort Royal, on the Rappahannock. We call attention especially to its second section.

In the name of God, Amen. I, John Cooper, of the county of Carolina, and state of Virginia, being of sound mind and health, and of disposing memory, do make this my last will and testament, hereby revoking all other heretofore made:

Imprimis: it is my will that after my funeral expenses and just debts be paid, all my estate both real and personal, be vested for ever in my beloved daughter, Nancy, begotten by my loving wife Charlotte, and such other children as may be born during our coexistence, to be equally divided between my said daughter Nancy and my other children as aforesaid, reserving, however, a support to my wife Charlotte, out of my estate during her widowhood.

Secondly: I do hereby emancipate and set free my beloved wife Charlotte and my daughter Nancy, and such other children as may be begotten on the body of my wife Charlotte.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed my seal, this 26th day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifty-four.

THE LATEST NEWS.

THE PAPER BLOCKADE.

The Fall closed last night, and from the appearance of the roads and sidewalks there is considerable asperity.

Never do my remember of an election to this County we do not think much of that held on Monday night and Tuesday we were favored with splendid mild weather, and the roads were unusually good. Considering the Board of Trade, which occupied the Board somewhat more than a week, the business was got through with very little delay. The Warden has ordered the Treasurer to have the Court House ready for the Fall Assizes, which will be held on the 3rd of August next.

The Crops.

THE WEATHER up to 5 days last week was excessively hot, and the crops were literally burnt up. Since then we have had copious showers, accompanied with thunder and lightning, which have done an immense amount of good to the crops. Oats are generally a heavy crop, and will be ready for cutting in a few days. Spring wheat is looking well, and promises a good return. Barley is a light crop. Potatoes look well, and promise a good return. Turnips look backward, but the late rains will no doubt bring them forward. Corn is looking well, and will be in tassel in a few days. Hay is a heavy crop. Pasture is looking well, and cattle are doing well. Fall wheat is looking well, and promises a good return. Peas look well, and promise a good return. THE NEW YORK RIOTS.

Alarming disturbances have taken place in the City of New York, consequent upon the enforcement of the draft. Several lives have been lost—including some of the Police—and many were cut and wounded. We give the late particulars elsewhere, which show a fearful state of things both in New York and elsewhere. Governor Seymour has ordered out the troops to suppress the rioters, who appear determined to continue their serious depredations. They set fire to the Provost Marshal's office, which was burnt, and gutted the Tribune Office, and sacked several houses.—Mayor Opdyke is always found fearless and prompt in the discharge of his duties, and has called out the militia to assist the police. Governor Seymour has issued a proclamation, in which he declares that the laws must be executed, and that the rioters must disperse. Gen. Sandford has also issued a proclamation, declaring that the riots must cease, and that the military will be called out to suppress them. Gen. Wool has also issued a proclamation, declaring that the riots must cease, and that the military will be called out to suppress them. Gen. Dix has also issued a proclamation, declaring that the riots must cease, and that the military will be called out to suppress them. Gen. Meade has also issued a proclamation, declaring that the riots must cease, and that the military will be called out to suppress them. Gen. Hancock has also issued a proclamation, declaring that the riots must cease, and that the military will be called out to suppress them. Gen. Sheridan has also issued a proclamation, declaring that the riots must cease, and that the military will be called out to suppress them. Gen. Custer has also issued a proclamation, declaring that the riots must cease, and that the military will be called out to suppress them. Gen. Merritt has also issued a proclamation, declaring that the riots must cease, and that the military will be called out to suppress them. Gen. Kilpatrick has also issued a proclamation, declaring that the riots must cease, and that the military will be called out to suppress them. Gen. Wilson has also issued a proclamation, declaring that the riots must cease, and that the military will be called out to suppress them. Gen. Upton has also issued a proclamation, declaring that the riots must cease, and that the military will be called out to suppress them. Gen. Devin has also issued a proclamation, declaring that the riots must cease, and that the military will be called out to suppress them. Gen. Gregg has also issued a proclamation, declaring that the riots must cease, and that the military will be called out to suppress them. Gen. Davies has also issued a proclamation, declaring that the riots must cease, and that the military will be called out to suppress them. Gen. McIntosh has also issued a proclamation, declaring that the riots must cease, and that the military will be called out to suppress them. Gen. Pennington has also issued a proclamation, declaring that the riots must cease, and that the military will be called out to suppress them. Gen. Taylor has also issued a proclamation, declaring that the riots must cease, and that the military will be called out to suppress them. Gen. Wright has also issued a proclamation, declaring that the riots must cease, and that the military will be called out to suppress them. Gen. Ferrero has also issued a proclamation, declaring that the riots must cease, and that the military will be called out to suppress them. Gen. Edwards has also issued a proclamation, declaring that the riots must cease, and that the military will be called out to suppress them. Gen. Potter has also issued a proclamation, declaring that the riots must cease, and that the military will be called out to suppress them. Gen. Stannard has also issued a proclamation, declaring that the riots must cease, and that the military will be called out to suppress them. Gen. Veazey has also issued a proclamation, declaring that the riots must cease, and that the military will be called out to suppress them. Gen. Wells has also issued a proclamation, declaring that the riots must cease, and that the military will be called out to suppress them. Gen. Grant has also issued a proclamation, declaring that the riots must cease, and that the military will be called out to suppress them. Gen. Communication from South Monaghan, giving an account of a School Examination.

We regret that our rules of never inserting a communication without being accompanied of the name and address of the writer were so generally known that we have been frequently troubled with anonymous communications, which a matter of course, we throw aside. We give the late particulars elsewhere, which show a fearful state of things both in New York and elsewhere. Governor Seymour has ordered out the troops to suppress the riots. The latest of the disturbances is that the Democratic party is at last brought to a full stop

THE GREAT ENGLISH REMEDY
SIR JAMES CLARKE'S CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS.

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir J. Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen

THIS well known Medicine is no imposition, but a sure and safe remedy for Female Difficulties and Obstructions, from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution.

In all cases of Nervous and Spinal Affections, pain in the back and limbs, Heaviness, Fatigue on Slight Exertion, Palpitation of the Heart, Lowness of Spirits, Hysterics, Sick Headache, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail where the directions on the second page of pamphlet are well observed.

N. B.—$1 and 6 postage stamps enclosed to any authorized agent, will secure a bottle, containing over 50 pills, by return mail.

RELIEF IN TEN MINUTES.

DR. BRYAN'S
PULMONIC WAFERS.

The most certain and speedy remedy ever discovered for all Diseases of the Chest and Lungs, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Consumption, Bronchitis, Influenza, Hoarseness, Difficult breathing, Sore throat &c. &c. &c.

THESE WAFERS give the most instantaneous and perfect relief and when perservered with according to directions, never fail to effect a rare, lasting cure. Thousands have been restored to perfect health who have tried other means in vain. To all classes and all constitutions they are equally a blessing and a cure—none need despair, no matter how long the disease may have existed, or however severe it may be, provided the organic structure of the vital organs is not hopelessly decayed. Every one afflicted should give them an impartial trial.

To Vocalists and Public Speakers, these Wafers are peculiarly valuable; they will in one day remove the most severe occasional hoarseness, and their regular use for a few days will, at all times, increase the power and flexibility of the voice, greatly improving its tone, compass and clearness, for which purpose they are regularly used by many professional vocalists

BY-LAW No. 18,
OF THE
Municipality of Ashburnham.

WHEREAS, the Board of School Trustees for the Village of Ashburnham, have requested the Municipal Council of the said Village to raise the sum of Twelve Hundred Dollars for the purpose of building and furnishing a School House in the said Village; and whereas it is desirable and expedient that the said sum of Twelve Hundred Dollars be raised by Debentures, payable in five years; and whereas it will require that Debentures be issued for the sum of Sixteen Hundred to realise the said sum of Twelve Hundred Dollars, and to pay the interest, discount, and expenses connected therewith:

It is hereby enacted by the Municipal Council of the said Village of Ashburnham: That five Debentures be issued by the said Municipality for the sum of Three Hundred and Twenty Dollars each; one of which shall be made payable on the First day of April in each of the years 1864, 1865, 1866, 1867 and 1868, and that the same be signed by the Reeve, and sealed with the Corporation Seal. And whereas, the assessed annual value of all the real and personal property of the said Village amounts, according to the last revised Assessment Roll, to the sum of Seven Thousand Five Hundred and Eighteen Dollars; and it will require that a special rate of Four Cents and Three Mills in the Dollar be levied and collected in each year to pay the amount of the said Debentures:

It is hereby enacted, that a special rate of Four Cents and Three Mills in the Dollar be raised, levied and collected on the assessed annual value of all the real and personal property in the said Village, over and above all other rates and assessments for the present year, 1863, and in each of the years 1864, 1865, 1866 and 1867 to provide for the payments of the Debentures to be issued as hereinbefore mentioned

And it is further enacted, that a vote of the Municipal Electors be taken on the passing of the foregoing By-law on Friday the Seventh day of August next, at the hour of Ten o'clock in the Forenoon.

TAKE NOTICE,

That the above is a true copy of a proposed By-law which will be taken into consideration by the Council of this Municipality after one month from the first publication in the Peterborough Examiner, the date of which first publication was on Thursday, the Sixteenth day of July, 1863; and the votes of the Electors of the said Municipality will be taken thereon, at the Town Hall in the said Village on Friday, the Seventh day of August, at the hour of Ten o'clock in the Forenoon.

FINKLE & LYON
SEWING MACHINE COMPANY,
538 Broadway, New York.

TO parties little acquainted with the Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machines the careful perusal of the Company's Circular is specially commended. This circular can be had on application. It is very specific, and will be found highly instructive, having been prepared with much care and we will abide by all statements therein made.

The following brief quotation is characteristic of the entire Circular:

"This Machine is better adapted than any other Sewing Machine in market to the frequent changes and almost endless variety of sewing required in a family; for it will sew from one to twenty thicknesses of Marseilles without stopping, and make every stitch perfect. Will sew from the finest gauze to the heaviest cloth, and even the stoutest Leuzen leather, without changing the feed needle or tension, or making any adjustment of machine whatever."

Thus have we successfully overcome the most difficult point in the Sewing Machine art. It was no ordinary triumph. Defiantly can we now say, "No other Machine compares with it in this respect." Hence, have we uniformly—almost without exception—taken the highest premium, whenever the Machine has been properly exhibited in competition with other first class Sewing Machines. Hence it is that we are able to offer the following guarantee, viz.: "We warrant every Machine we sell to give better satisfaction than any other Sewing Machine in the market, or money refunded." We never sell a Machine on any other terms. The guarantee is as reliable as the note of any business man in the land. For more than five years have we relied upon such facts for the reputation of our Machine; and without a single travelling agent in the field, there is scarcely a neighborhood on the continent where the Machine is not favourably known. We prefer such a reputation to one based on mere "talking points," as they are technically called in the trade. Hence we make but one kind of stitch, viz., the lock-stitch, alike on both sides, requiring only one-third the thread of other kinds of stitches.

N. B.—Local Agents wanted in every county throughout the West. ☞ Special inducements offered.

CONSULT THE OLD ENGLISH PHYSICIANS

FOR

ASTHMA, INCIPIENT CONSUMPTION,
Infirmities of Youth and Old Age,
&c., &c.
NO MERCURY USED.

Dr. Amos & Son,

49 EAST GENESSEE STREET,
BUFFALO, N. Y.

ARE the only Physicians in the State who are members of the Royal College of Surgeons, London.

May be consulted from 8 o'clock in the morning, until 9 at night, in every stage and symptom of Disease.

The treatment they adopt is the result of upwards of thirty years' extensive and successful practice in London.

A most Scientific Invention

An instrument for the cure of general Debility, or Nocturnal Emissions, more properly known as Seminal Weakness, &c. These complaints can be permanently cured in from 30 to 60 days by two months by the use of this instrument, when used conjointly with medicines.

Dr. AMOS & SON, in order to satisfy the most skeptical as to the merits of this Instrument, pledge themselves that in any instance where it may prove unsatisfactory after a fair trial, the money will be refunded by returning the instrument in good order. Price Ten Dollars, by mail or express.

YOUNG MEN TAKE PARTICULAR NOTICE

Those who have injured themselves by a certain practice indulged in when alone—a habit frequently learned from evil companions, or at school, the effects of which are mightily felt even when asleep, and if not cured, renders marriage impossible and destroys both mind and body, should apply immediately. Self abuse is one of the most formidable enemies to health, for nothing else in the dire catalogue of human diseases causes so destructive a drain upon the human system, dragging thousands of victims through a few years of suffering down to an untimely grave. Destroys the nervous system rapidly, wastes away the energies of life, causes mental derangement, prevents the proper development of the system, disqualifies for marriage, society, business, and all earthly happiness, and leaves the sufferer wrecked in body and mind, predisposed to consumption and a train of evils more to be dreaded than death itself.

PERSONS IN ANY PART OF THE WORLD

may be successfully treated by forwarding a correct detail of their cases.

Address Dr. AMOS & SON, 49 East Genesee Street, three doors West of Ellicott's [illegible] Buffalo, N. Y.

THE BRITISH AMERICAN

A MONTHLY MAGAZINE DEVOTED TO

Literature, Science and Art.

NOTWITHSTANDING the repeated attempts which have been made in Canada to establish a Monthly Magazine devoted to Literature and Science it is nevertheless apparent, that success has not been the reward of those who have engaged in the undertaking.

The Canadian Institute at Toronto, the Natural History Society of Montreal, the Literary and Historical Society of Quebec, aided by the Government grants they each enjoy, regularly publish their proceedings, and thus occupy to a greater or less extent, the several fields which from the special objects of their incorporation But the public at large are still unsupplied with a periodical Magazine devoted to general Literature of Canadian origin and growth, and of Science divested of unattractive technicalities and adapted to the requirements of those who do not profess familiarity with its sterner details.

It is the design of the originators of the British American Magazine to occupy this vacant field, and endeavor to satisfy a want which is so generally felt to exist.

In maturing the plan of a new periodical, it is desirable to supply the public with some guarantee of its character and prospects. It is therefore determined to request intending contributers to permit their names to be published in the prospectus, as among those who are willing, not only to give it countenance and support, but to add to its vitality by contributin to its pages. It is also thought advisable to publish the names of those who are willing and anxious to encourage the undertaking by a liberal subscription to the first number.

All of which is warranted to be made from the best timber and parts collected from China, New Ontario to call and examine the shop before it is painted.

Many of the difficulties which have impeded the progress, and ultimately led to the abandonment of a Monthly periodical, of a like in general design to the British American Magazine, have disappeared, with the advance of the country in population, wealth and civilization; hence the origin stors commence their labours with far brighter expectations than their predecessors could have enjoyed, and they anticipate, without doubt or distrust, the successful progress of the undertaking.

The aim of the British American Magazine is to encourage British merican Literature, to offer an opportunity long desired by many for giving public and permanent expression to their thoughts, to foster a taste for literary pursuits, to prevent the marvels of Science in familiar language, easily understood by all, to supply a monthly abstract of whatever is interesting and valuable in the periodical literature of Great Britain, and a brief resume of the progress of Literature, Science, Industry and Art, throughout North British America.

It will be within the province of the Magazine to furnish critical notices of new publications, unfettered by prejudices, nationality, or religious bias; and while political discussion of a party character will be absolutly excluded from its pages, set descriptive articles relating to our home institutions, affecting the general interests of the country, will be freely admitted.

Each monthly issue will contain one hundred and twelve pages, of the same size as the English Monthlies, which will form at the close of the year two volumes containing 672 pages each.

The publishers hope to be able to commence their issue in April next, and from the success which has already attended their efforts to procure subscribers, they anticipate that they will be able to present the British American Magazine with a subscription list amounting to 10,000 copies for the first number

Terms $3 per annum, in advance.

EMPLOYMENT.

THE Undersigned has, for several years past, been engaged in a business, which has yielded him at the rate of three thousand dollars per annum, and is now willing to teach it to others. The business is of a highly useful and general character, adapted both to cities and villages, and one that any person of ordinary capacity, young or old, male or female, can acquire with a few hours' practice, and by which they can secure a very handsome income. Several young ladies who have received instructions from me, both in New York State and Pennsylvania, are earning upwards of $15 per week by it, and there is no reason why any one else cannot do the same. Invalids, even, can do well by it, as it is no peddling affair, but a business that is perfectly respectable. Gentlemen and ladies of leisure who would like to learn the business for their own amusement or pleasure, will find the practice of it a pleasant pastime, and one that they will take great interest in. On receipt of $1, I will send printed instructions by which any person can readily acquire the art, and these instructions will also contain every particular relative to the carrying it on so that it will be highly profitable. The purchaser of the "printed instructions" will also be authorized to teach it to others; and I have sometimes received as high as $200, for teaching it personally to a single individual. I would state further that $2.50 or $3 will buy everything that is necessary to commence the business with, and the articles can be got almost anywhere, in city or country, or if preferred, I can furnish them. Address ALVORD T. PARSONS, No. 36 LIBERTY St., NEW YORK.

THE WORLD.

AN INDEPENDENT

Daily, Weekly and Semi-Weekly

NEWSPAPER.

IN soliciting for another year a continuance and increase of the favor which in so short a period has given to the World its present high among American journals—a circulation, business patronage, and influence equalled by other journals only after the effort of many years—we reserve to our old and new subscribers the promise that no labor nor expense will be spared to make the World what it aims to be,

The Best Newspaper in America.

In politics, now as ever, the World is independent but never neutral. Its only creed is a national one—of which are the corner stones.

The Union, the Constitution, and the Laws, and Freedom of Speech, of the Press, of Political Discussion and Action

The political events of the past year have notably demonstrated the need of an able, fearless outspoken, first-class

Conservative Journal,

in the commercial metropolis of the country, which shall give constant, bold and vigorous utterance to the conservative sentiments of the best men and the honest masses of the nation. Opposing every enemy to

The Union,

whether armed in rebellion at the South, or insidiously planting the seeds of disunion at the North.

Opposing every violation of the Constitution,

the only bond and hope of union, the only ground upon which we can exhort and compel the allegiance of the South:

Opposing every infraction of

The Laws,

in high places or in low, believing that obedience to Law is service to God:

Opposing every violation of the

Freedom of Speech, of the Press, of Political Discussion and Action,

by whomsoever those violations are committed, whether by the executive in its

Arbitrary, Illegal, and Unjust Acts

in its refusal of the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus, its denial of the rights and liberties of citizens, its arrest without warrant, its imprisonments without trial, its abrogation of state and federal laws its illegal proclamation of an empty emancipation, or whether those violations are committed by the party in power, its orators and its presses, advocating measures which must sunder the Union for the sake of destroying slavery, and denouncing treason against all their political opponents.

Loyal to the government always, it will give to the administration a hearty and vigorous support wherever and whenever the administration itself is loyal to the bond of the principles, and the purity of the government.

The World will oppose all compromises which would barter way or divide the Union, for which alone the North is waging war; it will oppose peace itself, till the success of the war assures the permanence of peace, and will urge the prosecution of the war with an economy which has not hitherto governed its expenditures, and a vigor which the nation during a year has prayed for in vain.

The same care will be exercised over the columns of the World to exclude everything which could offend a pure, Christian morality, and recourse will always be had to the same high principles as well to guard its columns as to guide its judgment of men and events.

All the News

will be found in the columns of the World from the various departments of human activity,

Political, Agricultural, or Commercial, as well as in Literature, Science and Art.

New Publications, Inventions, Discoveries, and Works of Art will receive the same careful and thorough attention.

The latest and most important news from London, Paris, Turin, Rome, Syria, China, California, Japan, Egypt, and South America, our correspondents will send to us.

Our correspondents are attached to the various divisions of the army; will accompany them wherever they go, and by the free use of the telegraph and the mails, present in the columns of the World

A Complete History of the War,

from day to day, and from month to month.

In the Weekly and Semi-Weekly editions of the World, a specially large space will be given to

Agriculture,

and to all departments of

Manufacturing and Mechanical Industry.

The Weekly World will contain an admirable serial story during the current year

THE DAILY WORLD.

The Daily World is the most complete Commercial and News Paper published in America. Besides as full telegraph news, war correspondence, and foreign news, &c., as any two cent daily, it contains also much fuller commercial news. Its Ship News, Produce, and Cattle Market reports, Foreign and Domestic Importations, Stock Lists, and Commercial news, no business man can do without.

TERMS (INVARIABLY IN ADVANCE):

One copy for one year, $8.
Four copies for one year, $30.

For a club of ten copies an extra copy will be sent for one year.

THE SEMI-WEEKLY WORLD.

The Semi-Weekly World is a large quarto sheet, same size as the daily, containing all its news, correspondence, miscellany and editorials, its commercial and market news, and entertaining selections and miscellaneous reading. Its cattle market and provision reports make it highly valuable to every farmer.

For a club of ten copies, for one year, an extra copy will be sent.

For a club of twenty copies, a copy of the daily for one year.

For a club of fifty copies, the daily, weekly, and semi-weekly for one year each.

THE WEEKLY WORLD.

The Weekly World contains the leading editorials of the daily, and a copious summary of all the news of the week up to the hour of publication. In no other weekly paper published in this country are there found such full commercial and market reports and general news intelligence combined with so much editorial matter and variety of miscellaneous reading as the Weekly World.

Published Thursday.

TERMS.

One copy for one year.....$2 00
To clergymen, one copy for one year.....1 50
Three copies.....5 00
Five copies.....8 00
Twenty copies to one address.....35 00

For a club of ten copies, an extra copy will be sent for one year.

For a club of twenty copies, the Semi-Weekly will be sent for one year.

For a club of fifty copies, the daily will be sent for one year.

For a club of one hundred copies, the Daily, Weekly, and Semi-Weekly will be sent for one year.

Remittances for the World may be made by drafts, Treasury notes, or bank-bills of specie paying banks, and where the attention of the postmaster is directed to the remittance at the time of mailing the letter, it may be made at our risk.

Country papers, by inserting this prospectus one or more times, are entitled to a copy of the Daily World for one year.

Specimen numbers sent to any address upon application.

FINKLE & LYON SEWING MACHINE COMPANY,

538 Broadway, New York.

TWO parties little acquainted with the Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machines the careful perusal of the Company's Circular is specially commended. This circular can be had on application. It is very specific, and will be found highly instructive, having been prepared without care and we will abide by all stated onth therein made.

The following brief quotations is characteristic of the entire Circular:

"This Machine is better adapted than any other Sewing Machine in market to the frequent changes and almost endless variety of sewing required in a family; for it will sew from one to twenty thicknesses of Marseilles without stopping, and make every stitch perfect. Will sew from the finest gauze to the heaviest cloth, and even the stoutest Harness leather, without changing the feed needle or tension, or making any adjustment of machine whatever."

Thus have we successfully overcome the most difficult point in the Sewing Machine art. It was no ordinary triumph. Definitely can we now say, "No other Machine compares with it in this respect." Hence, have we uniformly—almost without exception—taken the highest premium, whenever the Machine has been properly exhibited in competition with other first class Sewing Machines. Hence it is that we are able to offer the following guarantee, viz:

We warrant every Machine we sell to give perfect satisfaction than any other Sewing Mach

SELECT POETRY.

THE CHILDREN'S HOUR.

BY H. W. LONGFELLOW.

Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour.

I hear in the chamber above me
The patter of little feet,
The sound of a door that is opened,
And voices soft and sweet.

From my study I see in the lamplight,
Descending the broadhall stair,
Grave Alice and laughing Allegra,
And Edith with golden hair.

A whisper, and then a silence;
Yet I know by their merry eyes
They are plotting and planning together
To take me by surprise.

A sudden rush from the stairway,
A sudden raid from the hall,
By three doors left unguarded
They enter my castle wall!

They climb up into my turret
O'er the arms and back of my chair;
If I try to escape, they surround me;
They seem to be everywhere.

They almost devour me with kisses,
Their arms about me entwine,
Till I think of the Bishop of Bingen
In his Mouse-Tower on the Rhine!

Do you think, O blue-eyed banditti,
Because you have scaled the wall,
Such audacious mustache as I am
Is not a match for you all?

I have you fast in my fortress,
And will not let you depart,
But put you down into the dungeons
In the round-tower of my heart.

And there will I keep you forever,
Yes, forever and a day,
Till the walls shall crumble to ruin,
And moulder in dust away!

Miscellaneous.

A Rift in the Clouds

BY S. T. ARTHUR.

Andrew Lee came home at evening from the ship where he had worked all day, tired and out of spirits; came home to his wife, who was also tired and out of spirits.

'A smiling wife and a cheerful home—what a paradise it would be!' said Andrew to himself, as he turned his eyes from the clouded face of Mrs. Lee, and sat down with knitted brows and moody aspect.

Not a word was spoken by either. Mrs. Lee was getting supper, and she move about with a weary step.

'Come,' she said at last, with a side glance at her husband.

There was an invitation in the word only, none in the voice of Mrs. Lee.

Andrew arose and went to the table. He was tempted to speak an angry word, but controlled himself and kept silence. He could find no fault at all with the chop no the sweet home-made bread, nor the fragrant tea. They would have cheered his inward man, if there had only been a gleam of sunshine on the face of his wife she noticed that she did not eat.

'Are you not well, Mary?' The words were on his lips, but he did not utter them, for the face of his wife looked so repellent, that he feared an irritating reply. And so, in moody silence, the two sat together until Andrew had finished his supper. As he pushed his chair back, his wife arose and commenced clearing off the table.

'This is purgatory!' said Lee to himself, as he commenced walking the floor of their little breakfast room with his hands thrust desperately away down into his trousers pockets, and his chin almost touching his breast.

After removing all the dishes, and taking them into the kitchen, Mrs. Lee spread a green cover over on the table, and placing a fresh trimmed lamp thereon, went out and shut the door after her, leaving her husband alone with his unpleasant feelings. He took a long deep breath as she did so, paused in her walk, stood still for some moments, and then drawing a paper from his pocket, sat down by the table, opened the sheet, and commenced reading.—Singularly enough the words upon which his eyes rested were 'Praise your wife.' They rather tended to increase the disturbance of mind from which he was suffering.

'I should like to find some occasion for praising mine.' How quietly his thought expressed that ill natured sentiment. But his eyes were on the paper before him and he read on:

'Praise your wife man; for pity's sake give her a little encouragement; it won't hurt her.'

Andrew Lee raised his eyes from the paper, and muttered, 'Oh, yes. That's all very well. Praise is cheap enough. But praise her for what? For being sullen, and in king your home the most disagreeable place in the world. His eye fell again on the paper.

'She has made your home comfortable, your hearth bright and shining, your food agreeable; for pity's sake tell her you thank her, if nothing more. She don't expect it; it will make her eyes open wider than they have for ten years; but it will do her good for all that, and you, too.'

It seemed to Andrew as if this sentence were written just for him, and just for the occasion. It was he complete answer to his question. 'Praise her for what?' and he felt it as a rebuke. He read no further, for thought came too busy, and in a new direction. Memory was convicting him of injustice toward his wife. She had always made his home as comfortable as hands could make it, and had he offered the light return of praise or commendation? Had he ever told her of the satisfaction he had known, or the comfort up rounded? He was not able to recall the time or the occasion.

As he thought thus, Mrs. Lee came in from the kitchen, and taking her seat work basket, placed it on the table, and sitting down without speaking, began to sew. Lee glanced almost stealthily at the work in her hands, and saw that it was the bosom of a shirt which she was stitching neatly. He knew that it was for him she was at work.

'Praise your wife.' The words were before the eyes of his mind, and he could not look away from them. But he was not ready for this yet. He still felt moody and unforgiving. The expression of his wife's face he interpreted to mean ill-nature, and with ill-nature he had no patience. His eyes fell upon the newspaper that lay spread out before him, and he read the sentence:

'A kind, cheerful word, spoken in a gloomy home is like the rift in the cloud that lets the sunshine through.'

Lee struggled with himself a while longer. His own ill-nature had to be conquered first; his moody, accusing spirit had to be subdued. But he was coming right, and at last was right, as to will. Next came the question as to how he should begin. He thought of many things to say, yet feared to say them, least his wife should meet his advances with a cold rebuff.—At last, leaning toward her, and taking hold of the linen bosom upon which she was at work, he said, in a voice carefully modulated with kindness—

'You are doing that very beautifully, Mary.'

Mrs. Lee made no reply. But her husband did not fail to observe that she lost, almost instantly, that rigid exactness with which she had been sitting, and that the motion of her needle had ceased.'

'My shirts are better made, and whiter than any other man's in the shop,' said Lee, encouraged to go on.

'Are they?' Mrs. Lee's voice was low, and had in it a slight hoarseness. She did not turn her face, but her husband saw that she leaned a little toward him. He had broken through the ice of reserve, and all was easy now. He hand was among the clouds, and a few feeble rays were already struggling through the rift it had made.

'Yes, Mary,' he answered softly, 'and I've heard it said more than once, what a good wife Andrew Lee must have.'

Mrs. Lee turned her face toward her husband. There was a light in it, and a light in her eye. But there was something in the expression of her countenance that a little puzzled him.

'Do you think so?' she asked quite soberly.

'What a question!' ejaculated Andrew Lee, starting up and going around to the side of the table where his wife was sitting. 'What a question, Mary?' he replied, as he stood before her.

'Do you?' It was all she said.

'Yes, darling,' was his warmly spoken answer, and he stooped down and kissed her.—'How strange that you should ask me such a question.'

'If you would only tell me so now and then, Andrew it would do me good.' And Mrs. Lee arose, leaning her form against the manly breast of her husband, stood and wept.

What a strong light broke in upon the mind of Andrew Lee. He had never given to his faithful wife even the small reward of praise for all the loving interest she had manifested daily, and made the light around her look darkness. No wonder that her face grew clouded, nor that what he considered moodiness and ill-nature took possession of her spirit.

'You are good and true, Mary. My own dear wife! I am proud of you—I love you—and my first desire for your happiness. Oh, if I could always see your face in sunshine, my home would be the dearest place on earth.'

'How precious to me are your words of love and praise, Andrew,' said Mrs. Lee, smiling up through her tears into his face. 'With them in my ears, my heart can never be in shadow.'

How easy had been the work for Andrew Lee. He had swept his hand across the cloudy horizon of his home, and now the bright sunshine was streaming down, and flooding that home with joy and beauty.

Dad's Experiment with Billy.

Less than a hundred miles from Syracuse lives an old farmer, whose given name is Zury—a hard working, honest old Englishman, owning a good farm of over a hundred acres, and two faithful boys have been brought up to wield the "agricultural implement,"—from one of those I have my story.

Old Zury had an old goat on the farm, who is not one of the most peacefully disposed creatures in the world, and on this account the boys take no little delight in putting his lordship on his taps, once in a while, by way of amusement; for a long time the old man had noticed that when Billy came home at night he was covered with mud and water, and old Zury could not imagine how he should become so; so he determined, if possible, that he would find out the cause of poor Billy's misfortune.

One day he left the boys—to pick up the rakes, etc., after a two days hard work of haying—and walked around to the ridge, where Billy generally kept himself. It was about time for the goat to go to the house, and there he lay quiet and dry, so old Zury seated himself behind a stump, determined to watch his movements for that night, at any rate. He had not been there for more than fifteen minutes when who should be seen coming along the ridge but the two boys; his first impulse was to tell them to keep back, but upon second thought, he said nothing.

"Take my load, Hank," said Dick; "it's my turn to take it feller to-night."

Hank took Dick's load from his back, and Dick going down the hill a little ways, soon showed himself within a few yards of where the goat was lying.

Billy had already caught a glimpse of the boys, and was soon on his feet. Hank laid flat on the ground, and Dick, on the edge of the ridge, now presented a full front, which did not seem exactly to please his goatship, for he pointed for him, and down went Dick, to aggravate Billy to a still more desperate lunge; again the signal rose, and Billy jumped, but just as he got within a few feet, Dick lowered himself about two pegs, and Mr. Goat lowered himself into the mud and water. Hank had caught sight of a man's corner of the old man's hat above the stump, and stoped for the hare, while Dick was not a little surprised at the sudden transformation of the old goat into a human being, and that too, the old man, at fifteen paces, who, by the way, was not one of the most forlorn mortals in the world, and as he looked around the ground, Dick thinking that a similar scene might possibly be the object of [illegible] started on a keen jump for the barn. The old man made up his mind that the story was solved. That night Dick didn't come home to supper.

I thought I should not be able to hold out together, as Hank related the surprise of old Zury and his son as they stood face to face.

"But hold on," said he, I haven't told you the best of it yet." About two weeks from that time, one day me and Dick had been working all day and we made up our mind that we should find old goat and buckle; he hadn't been in the field at all in the afternoon, and he always kept a good barrel of ale in the cellar; but when we had started, who should we see but the old man sidling around the ridge, so Dick and me went over that way, and there was old dad and the goat.

We laid flat on the ground, anxious to know what the old man was going to do; what was our surprise to see him take the exact position Dick had taken a couple of weeks before.

We said nothing, for we hadn't seen any of that kind of sport for a long time; the old man presented rather a formidable appearance, but Billy, nothing daunted, pointed for the mark, the old man lowered, but a little too late, for the goat took him "plump." We heard something strike the mud, and it wasn't Billy, for he stood down over the ridge. Me and Dick pulled for the barn and in a few minutes we saw old dad paddling for the house, covered with mire from head to foot.

That night the old man was dressed up in his best clothes. I ventured to ask him if he was going over to see the Deacon.

"See the Deacon? no! Can't a man put on good clothes without going to see the Deacon?"

"Yes," said Dick, looking out the door "can't a man go and see the goat without tumbling in the mud?"

Dick was gone, and the old dad looked at me, and then very significantly at a heavy woolen bootpack. I slipped out of the back door.—Spirit of the Times.

Artemus Ward on Copperheads.

Not long ago I made a revoo of Joseph's army. I was considerably surprised to observe all the cannons pintin' rite towards the North.

"My blood-stained veteran," sez I, addressing a Lieutenant Brigadier, who was playing "old sledge" with a tenth corporil's clerk for a yaller postage stamp in the corner, "my blood-stained veteran, why air no them guns pointing towards the Southern Confederacy?"

"Thunder!" replied the Lieutenant Brigadier; turnin, up a Jack from the bottom—"thunder! what's the use of aimin' 'em towards the South as long as there is enemies to our Guvment in the North."—It will be a easy matter to wipe out the rebs arter we put down the Copperheads in the North."

"My bloomin' hero," sez I, "I guess you are about rite. The Butternuts air mean traitors, but the Northern C. H. air a internal site the meanester!"

"That's so!" says he tenth corporil's clerk, slippin a ace up his kote sleeve.

I left them 2 there innersent parsons an propelled—propeld a little too much for I wanded out outside the Fed'rul lines, and surrounded 2 secesh pickets an' took 'em prisoners. The F. F. V.'s—these F. F. V.'s dont mean Five Foolish Virgins, scarcely the F. F.'s objected to accompanyin' me so I followed them. Considerin' they was my prisoners they went me pretty ruffly. But it's their way. I follered the chap nearly to Rich'm, when some F. F. V. shinplasters got a squint at me. They immediately commenced for to hold their noses shut, an' some pulled off their shoes an' stockins' as of I was goin' to lick their feet.

"Keep a respectable distance from us!" sez one.

"Yes, I will—to keep respectable." Those was my sarcastic retort.

"Beg your pardon!" apologized the F. F. V.'s, putting on there shoes and stockins and takin' there digits away from there nasal organs. "We thort you was one of them Northern Copperheads penned men who air allers wantin' to lick our feet an' make up with us."

"Nary pean tarn!" sez I. "I'm in favor of a vigrous prosecution of the war. Ditto my friend A. L."

"Well," sez they, "we have some respect for a Yankee wot stands up for his Guv'ment; but the slimy Vallandighams, more, Woodses, Hughes, and so—like we think a little lower than a runaway nigger. If they was locked up by your Guv'ment, we'd rejoice. They air not only traitors to the North, but to the South 2."

"I allers considered 'em so too—except to the South. Ditto my friend A. L."

I apologized for capturing them 2 pickets, and they released me on a parole of honor—whatever that is. I bleeve if the Copperheads would behave themselves, an' not drink too much whisky, they would be as good Union men as the rebels. Just about.

LONDON.—There are 2,500 streets in London, measuring 3,000 miles. If placed in straight line they would extend far more than twice the distance from Cairo to Constantinople, and walking ten miles a day, it would take a person more than a year to traverse them, while in the interim a new city, with from 60,000 to 70,000 inhabitants would have sprung up.

LIBERIA.—Education is progressing well among the people of Liberia. In a report recently made to the government of that republic, it is stated that there cannot be found seven adults out of ten who are unable to read; and out of every fifteen there cannot be found one unable to write to some extent as well as read. Among the young eight out of every ten can read and write.

From the Far West.

BOLD ATTACK OF THE SIOUX UPON THE PAWNEE INDIAN AGENCY—MORMON EMIGRATION

(From Tribune Correspondents)

Omaha City, N. T., July 9, 1863.—The brave and warlike tribe, the Brule band of the Sioux, who so much infest the hunting grounds are especially in the extreme western part of the Territory, have just made a bold and daring raid upon the Pawnee Indian Agency in the valley of the Platte, 100 miles directly west of this city. The Government Agent of the Pawnees, Col. Twohbrough, formerly of Hagerstown, Md., was in the Agency house eating dinner in company with some officers of the Nebraska 2nd Cavalry, at the time the attack was made, they were aroused by the cries of the Pawnee squaws who were being mercilessly scalped, and the frantic appearance of the few whites in and about the agency served to increase the alarm. A Sioux pursued a white woman with tomahawk raised, and she barely escaped with her life by fleeing into the cabin. There was but a single company of Nebraska cavalry on the grounds. They, however, at once commenced a pursuit of the savage party; the cowardly and panic-stricken Pawnees soon fell back leaving a single company of whites to contend with [illegible] from the two warlike tribe of the Sioux. Next, a thousand or from 1,000 to 2,000. The captain was almost instantly stunned, being wounded by several arrows. The Hon. Joseph Dyson, formerly a member of the Territorial Legislature, and a candidate for Delegate to Congress in 1855, was killed, being literally perforated with deadly and poisonous arrows. He [illegible] brave man, as he was, continuing to discharge his pistols at the enemy, as long as there was strength left to raise his arm to [illegible]. Private Osborne was mortally wounded, having received several arrow shots, one penetrating his lungs. Several Pawnees were killed. The Sioux loss is not known, they being in such numbers that when one fell they gathered around and immediately carried him off. The result of the battle was a victory for the attacking party, the Sioux, as they made three separate and distinct charges, driving back the white, and utterly routing them and then finally cut cowardly skulk, the Pawnees, and finally encamped on the battle ground. The Sioux are said now to be in force 200 miles distant from the Agency. The settlers are much alarmed. A second Minnesota stampede and massacre somewhere on the borders of Nebraska is apprehended by many. Gen. McBean, commander of the district, and stationed in this city, has no troops here within his command to afford aid and assistance.

THE MORMON EMIGRATION.

About 3,000 Mormon emigrants, mainly from Europe, have arrived here on their way to the land of the saints. The emigration this season is expected to be about 8,000. Five hundred waggons have arrived from Salt Lake to meet here and take out the Mormon band. About 800 waggons in all are engaged this season hauling goods and supplies from this point to Salt Lake.

For the second best do do	20 00
For the best 2 bushels Spring Wheat	20 00
For the second best do do	10 00

Competitors for these Prizes will be required to furnish samples of the wheat in the ear and with the straw attached (as 50 ears of wheat and straw), also to furnish a written statement of the nature of the soil on which the wheat grew method of cultivation, time of sowing, quantity of seed sown, manures (if any used), and quantity and time of application; also the time of reaping and harvesting, and the yield, together with such other particulars as may be deemed of practical importance; also the name by which the variety is known in the locality where it was grown.

The Wheat isn't to be one variety, pure and unmixed. The prize to be awarded to the actual grower of the wheat, and the wheat which takes a prize is to become the property of the Society.

It is hoped that farmers in all sections of the United States and Canada, who have good samples of wheat, will compete for these Prizes. We have never yet had a good Wheat Show in the United States. It is highly important that the wheat growers of the country should meet together and compare samples of wheat raised in different sections. We understand that the money for these premiums has been raised by subscription, among the friends of Agriculture in Western New York, and the time for holding the Fair has been fixed so as to enable farmers to purchase their seed from the wheat exhibited for competition. A change of seed is always desirable, and it is believed that all the wheat of good quality sent to the fair will find purchasers at a high price. Full particulars can be obtained by addressing the President of the Society, JOSEPH HARRIS, Editor Genesee Farmer, Rochester, N. Y.

SOUTHERN ROADS.—Trains on all the railways on the South moves now slowly. The tracks are very much worn and unsafe for travelling at high speed. The locomotives, passenger cars, freight trucks, are all more or less dilapidated. This fact constitutes a grave disadvantage to the Confederacy, not only in the bearing on the concentration of masses of men at a given point with rapidity, but also in reference to the importation for their armies of [illegible]

J. EDWARDS.

Peterborough, 16th July, 1863.

In another column will be found an account of the Declaration Day. The Hon. Bell's Flint and his opponent Mr. Grover, were both present and addressed the meeting. Both candidates seemed to wish to make it appear that the contest was completely denuded of party features. This is all very well, but it is nevertheless the fact cognizant to all who took any part in the contest, that it was a party contest. In some places this party spirit was more marked than others, but in all places, it was observable. The strong supporters of Mr. Flint were friendly to, if not all supporters of the present government. We say friendly, inasmuch as until the government more fully unfolds its policy, and demonstrates practically its claims to the support of the enlightened and liberal thinking, it cannot expect that thorough out and out support which a ministry ought to have, but which it can only have, when a just recognition of the claims upon it and the rights of the people, and by a total rendition of personal and party interest to the higher interests of the Country, and by exhibition of that deliberation and administrative talent absolutely essential to success—it proves itself worthy of support The present ministry have not yet had the opportunity; but we believe its personnel is such, as will enable it successfully to discharge its high and important functions. Much is anticipated by the Country from it, and if supported both in and out of parliament as it should be, we believe these anticipations will meet a fair realization. We have therefore no doubt but that in a short time, many who now from previous education, associations are constrained only to be sympathisers of the present government, will declare themselves its warm supporters. Be this as it may, it is quite evident that Mr. Flint owes his election to that party, with the views and aims of which the present ministry is identified. Some no doubt voted upon personal grounds, but these were comparatively few except in the candidates own localities Mr. Grover, on the other hand, polled a large portion of the stiff Conservative or old tory vote, and almost all of the Roman Catholic vote. This fact in itself would indicate, how strongly party was the contest. The late elections in the Province show on which side these parties ranges themselves; almost to a man on the side of the opponents of the present ministry—in a frantic and futile attempt to resuscitate the almost defunct party of which not long ago, Cartier and J. A. MacDonald were the head and heart. They did not succeed. The party is like a dead body and their attempt to galvanise it into life, did not even produced the customary spasms that generally attend such operations. Mr. Grover and his friends invoked to their aid, all the spirit and influence of a party they thought all powerful in this Division. They now see the result, they have measured their strength, and are wiser if not better men.

A great change indeed has taken place in the Country in party relations. The extreme radicals, and the fogy tories are comparatively few in number; their influence is small. The two parties among us now are the remnant of the old corruptionist party and the great ruling party of the Province which may be called the Conservative reform or Reform conservative party. This latter party is composed of the more Conservative of the old radical party, and the more progressive of the old Tory party, and has within the last few years grown greatly in numbers and influence. It is this party that swept Upper Canada at the late elections, and the exponent of whose views the present ministry is supposed to be. It was to this party Mr. Flint may attribute his election and the defeat of his opponent. And whether or not Mr. Flint dispute the assertion of the Globe, that his election was another gain to the present minister; he can hardly dispute the fact that his elect on is another triumph to the great party just mentioned. We rejoice in Mr. Flint's election, we believe him a good man and true. We are sure he will be an honor to their party, that it will be his aim to carry out the views it embodies—loyalty to the mother country, retrenchment at home, development of material resources, reform in all existing abuses, and a careful conservation of all those relations internal and foreign, upon which Canada's successful future hinges.

The Cobourg Sun says, that a great deal of damage was done by the hail storm, on the night of Wednesday the 8th inst., in the Townships of Haldimand and Cramabe.—The windows of many houses, were demolished, orchards suffered severely, fences were thrown down, horses killed by the lightning, and fields of grain flattened to the earth.

POLITICAL MORALITY.

There seem to be two kinds of ethics: one of which pertains to the political world, the other to the world around us. That this is no rash assertion, durable as of foundation, we have only to exercise a little to convince ourselves. If we were to take the current political morality as the standard by which to test the business relations and transactions, that obtain among mankind generally, and if these relations and transactions were only to come to this standard, a very wretched and deplorable state of affairs would exist. That which is tolerated as justifiable and even honorable among politicians in the accomplishment of their objects and the attainment of their ends, would if made use of by the merchant or business man, bring down on his head ruin and disgrace. This is a very anomalous state of affairs. It is evident there must be something wrong in it. The Ethiopian cannot cannot change his skin, nor the leopard his spots; neither can an evil, per se change its character or nature, under any conditions or circumstances. A course of conduct wrong in itself cannot be made right pursued by whomsoever it may. A thing or question should be looked at through its intrinsic merits. There should be but one standard of morality by which to test all acts and policies, and that is the one found in that best and most incompassable of all Statute Books—the New Testament. Until this is the case, we cannot expect, we must not look for that high moral tone, and that strict, unswerving adherence to principle—which are so desirable to stamp as with a seal—a people and characterize them in their acts and relations of life.—We conceive that at the present day, much blame, and that justly, lies upon professing christians and others of high moral pretensions, for that moral obliquity and immorality so apparent that no one can shut his eyes to the fact which obtain so largely among us to our country's shame and detriment. The present time may be, and no doubt is an improvement upon the past—as far as we are concerned but yet much is to be hoped for. We believe that political men's acts and matters should be submitted to the same test that business men's are. We don't believe it right, consistent, to palliate and pass over in the politician what we would denounce in another. Such charity—if charity it be, which we much doubt—is pernicious in the extreme; and if persisted, must lead to serious consequence, as our experience should teach us. We leave the matter for our readers to reflect upon, and work out their own conclusions. The hints that we have thrown out are sufficient for a good many hours serious meditation. We simply wished to draw the the minds of the candid and intelligent to the subject. The past cannot be recalled, but the future lies outspread before us, and the experience of the past may be a chart to guide us hereafter, if we only allow ourselves to be guided thereby. Let public men and their transactions be placed upon the same footing and viewed in the same light; and that business men and their transactions are, and we feel convinced that a very highly beneficial change for the better will ensue—that less complaints of public immorality will be heard—that true patriotism will be better appreciated and rewarded, that the best interests of our country will receive more attention—and in a word, that all these conditions will rapidly emerge towards a consummation calculated to make a people happy, intelligent and prosperous.

ORANGE DEMONSTRATIONS.

The 12th of July, this year, falling upon Sunday, the 13th was observed as a general thing throughout the Province. In all parts the most imposing demonstrations were got up. In Toronto there was a grand gathering of the brethren from many parts of Canada. The boats and cars as they came in were loaded with Orangemen—all ready to take part in the proceedings of the day. As many as 5000 walked in procession through the principal streets of the city. They were afterwards addressed by the Grand Master, Hon. J. H. Cameron, M. P. P., and Ogle R. Gowan, P. G. M. Everything passed off in the quietest manner.

In our own county, the Orangemen showed their love and adherence to the great principles that bind them together, by turning out in large numbers in Peterboro. Early in the morning of Monday, the sky was lowering and dark, but the shrill fife and hoarse sounding drum could be heard as the different lodges, with their banners flying in the breeze, and their members arrayed in scarlet gowns or orange sashes, hastened to their place of meeting. After they had met a splendid procession of some 500 all told, marched through the principal streets of the Town, headed by County Master Hopkins and J. Graham, D. M. Mr. Philp's Brass Band discoursing sweet music "all the while." The whole proceedings were conducted in the most quiet and orderly manner there being not the slightest disturbance that we have heard of, during the day. This, indeed, reflects great credit on all parties concerned, as it is not often on such occasions that so many men get together without something unpleasant having occurred.

At Gull River, the Orangemen were not behind their brethren of other parts. On Monday, the members of Lodge No. 1.10 Francis Peck, Master; and Lodge No. 1061, John Locke, Master, met at the School House, formed a procession, and headed by S. S. Peck, District Master, (ex.) Graham, County Secretary, and the Rev. Mr. Sparrow, marched to Mr. Buck's new building, in which a large room had been provided for their reception. Having entered and taken their seats in this, they were addressed by the Rev. Mr. Sparrow in a very eloquent manner, on subjects appropriate to the day and occasion. On the day following, the different lodges from Gull River, Silver Lake and Bobcaygeon, met at Burnt River. Some 150 were present. There sat down to an excellent dinner, got up by mine host, Mr. Baker. The edibles and "drinkables" having been got out of the road, an hour's festival feast was furnished them in the shape of a speech from the Rev. Mr. Sparrow.

OPPOSITION.

The Opposition are a curious lot of fellows. They are of a kind peculiar to themselves. They want a thing, and when they can get what they say they want, they turn right around and say they don't want it. Sometime ago when it was said that the Commissioner of Crown Lands had hinted that Parliament might not be called much before the usual time—that the expense of an extra Session might be saved—what a howl of indignation—virtuous indignation, mind you—was got up by the Opposition. They denounced it in no measured terms as unconstitutional, as not to be borne by "free born Britons," &c. When announcement was made that Parliament would meet on the 13th of next month, their tune that moment changed. The cry was: the idea of putting the people to so much extra expense as an extra sitting of Parliament must entail! We are glad to understand that the Ministry will most effectually put an end to this complaint. They intend to meet on the 13th prox., transact the most important business and adjourn till January or February, making the two sittings only one Session. We hope this will suit our "wide-mouthed" friends. Wonder they never saw the abuses, &c., of misgovernment, &c., during the many years their friends were in power. A minister once asked his friend to tell him what he saw written on the slip of paper before him, covered with a gold coin? he answered, "nothing." Having removed the coin, he again put the question; the answer was, "principle." Cut our friend draw a moral!

MR. McDOUGALL.

The Opposition press have been long crowing over the "ejection," as they call it, "of Mr. McDougall from North Oxford. Much was made of it, and many untruth circulated, and, no doubt, by many believed. Mr. McDougall did not shrink from contesting North Oxford because he was afraid he would be beat; but because he thought North Oxford safe for the Reform cause, and that he could reclaim another county from the hands of the Opposition. The Woodstock Times thus disposes of the misstatement:—

"Our cotemporary is ignorant of the facts of the case, when he asserts that a deputation from this place waited upon Mr. McDougall to induce him to seek another constituency. The deputation referred to visited the Hon. gentleman to know who her his intentions were to allow his friends in North Oxford to re-elect him; or would he accept one of the many offers made from other sections. This was the object of the delegation, and Mr. McDougall's reply was that a safe Reform constituency might be left to its own resources, while it would be his effort to reclaim a county from the enemy."

And well he did what he undertook.

TOWN COUNCIL.

MONDAY, July 20, 1863

Present: His Worship the Mayor; and Messrs Carlile, Fry, Dickson, Nicholls, Dixon, Burnham, Toole, Ormond and Lundy.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

A communication from S. Smith, stating that he had received instructions from John Thompson, to enter an action for damages done to his property on Murray Street, was referred to the committee on Finance.

A communication from John Reid, in reference to the survey of the lands at the south end of the Town, was referred to the Finance Committee.

A communication was also received from Thos White Jr., in reference to his claim for services while at Quebec, in prosecuting the passage of the Bill for ratifying the arrangement with Mr. Covert, was referred to the committee on Finance.

A letter from E. B. Wilson and others, asking the Council to make improvements on Gilchrist Street, was referred to the committee on Streets and Bridges.

Several accounts were received and handed to the Finance committee.

A communication from Thos Jenkinson, late night watch, asking the Council to refund to him a fine imposed upon him by Mr. Henthorn, while a constable of the Town was read and referred to a committe on Finance.

A statement from the Commissioners of Town Trust, showing the amount required from the Council for the present year, viz:—$5,552, was read and received.

Reports from the Street and Bridge committee were received and adopted.

Messrs Fry, Carlile and Toole were appointed a special committee to examine plans and specifications of Lock-up, and to report at the next meeting of the Council.

The Finance committee ordered several accounts to be paid.

On motion of Mr. Nicholls and seconded by Mr. Fry, twenty dollars were placed in the hands of the Charity Committee.

The Treasurer was ordered to pay $16 to E. Wilson that being the value of his account in full, for building the bridge on Park Street.

The Chief Constable was instructed to repair at once the Bridges now in a dangerous condition.

The Council then adjourned till Monday night next.

A daring robbery was committed in Port Hope, on Sunday the 5th inst., by some person unknown, entering the Hotel of Mr. Winters, on Mill Street, by entering the bedroom of Mr. Winters, and taking $30 from the pocket of his pantaloons; the robber also entered the bedroom of a brother-in-law to Mr. Winters, and from his vest took a watch and some money.

The Declaration.

On Tuesday last, at 1 o'clock, P. M., about 300 assembled in front of the Court House to learn the result of the late election. Mr. Sheriff Hall, the Returning Officer, after he had read the returns from the different Townships, which will be found appended, by virtue of his office, declared Bell Flint the duly elected representative of the Trent Division to the Legislative Council for the remainder of the present term.

MR. FLINT in coming forward to thank the electors for the high honor they had conferred upon him, said, the gathering was so large as it had been on other occasions, but this could not be wondered at. This was the busiest season of the year, and farmers had their hands full at home. No one could reasonably expect that they could forgo the pressing duties that detained them merely to attend a Declaration. There hearts he was sure, however, were right. He was glad to see so many, however. He stood before them elected by a majority in each County. He was glad to hear that there was to be no demonstration. He thought it was right. Every man had a right to use his franchise; and when the election was over all feeling should pass away. His majority, he was sure, would have been much greater but for the party opposition and religious influence brought to bear against him in the contest. As far as he was personally concerned he did not wish the contest to be mixed up with politics. He tried to prevent it. But his opponents did not, apparently, think so did. He was perfectly independent. He had given no pledge to support the present Government, and would not support it unless they would enter upon the active duties of retrenchment in the expenditure, commencing at the Executive, Legislative Assembly and Council, downwards; and would give immediate attention to the great issues before them—upon which Canada's future prosperity and happiness depended. To show how free he was from party spirit, he read an extract from the Globe claiming him as a gain to the present Government, and, also, a letter from himself to the Globe with reference to this statement in which were stated the only conditions upon which the present or any other Government, could expect, or would have his support. It would be his aim to serve the people, to protect their rights and privileges, and to build up their interests. If he proved recreant to these professions, he hoped he would be treated as he deserved. Not only had politics been dragged into this contest, but even religious influences were made use of to defeat him. In North Hastings this had specially been the case. The consequence was, where he was led previous to election to expect a large vote, he was sorely disappointed. The people were not allowed to exert their own judgment in the matter. In the townships of Madoc, Marmora, Sterling, Rawdon, Huntington, was a bitter religious and party spirit exhibited. In Puntington he was was denounced by the Priest from the altar, and the Roman Catholics were forced to vote against him. The part he had taken in the Alyward case was made use of to injure his interests and defeat him. He was happy and proud to say that many Roman Catholics, in spite of all the influences that could be brought to bear upon them, manfully voted for him, thereby vindicating their claim to the title of independent freemen They voted for him because they new the right man in the right place. He was proud to say a determined band of Orangemen had stuck to him during the whole contest. He was grateful to them for it. Attempts had been made to excite even them against him by telling them that he, when in parliament, had voted to put down their procession and deprive them of some of their privileges. This was false—he had done nothing of the sort. He believed that Orangemen as well as Catholics had their rights, and that so long as they did nothing to conflict with the laws of the land, should be allowed to do as they wish. He did not believe all the Orangemen were above reproach. On the contrary, he thought some might be much better than they were, but the same could thus be averred of all classes of individuals. If they only lived up to the principles they professed, he was sure there would be but little opportunity given to the captious to find fault with them. The little county of Lennox had acted nobly—had done more for him than he was led to expect. Word was sent to him by some friends that his opponents were hard at work, pulling the wires against him. He at once hastened to Lennox, and in less than two days he had travelled 100 miles, held five meetings, appointed his committees and the result was, he was happy to say, the handsome majority of 351 in his favor. All parties voted for him. As regards the noble county of Peterborough—for it was one of the noblest counties in all this Canada of ours—he could truly say, he would ever cherish the most pleasing recollections of it. He would never forget the warm and enthusiastic welcome that greeted him everywhere when in it during his canvass of 1861. In fact, it was a perfect ovation. He was therefore extremely gratified at the position he stood in to-day. The majority, tho' small, was in his favour. The electors might depend upon it, in Parliament, he would have no sectional feelings. The interests of Peterborough would be as dear to him as the interests of any section of the Division of Trent Much had been said about opening up the back country; he was as much in favor of this as any could be. He well remembered the difficulty he had getting to the back country in 1861—when he had to take the circuitous route of Victoria to get there. Judging from the vote polled, he judged the people in those regions thought him about as good a man to take of their interests as his opponent. His politics were his country's prosperity, and its good name. This, he thought, was the best kind of politics. He could not say, as it was stated: his opponent, said at a meeting he (Mr. G.) was a Tory, he was born a Tory, and meant to die a Tory. For his part, he was born a baby, passed through boyhood to manhood, and wished to die a man. He believed in progression—progression in the right direction. He concluded by urging upon all the the necessity of studying more earnestly than ever the best interest of their country, of letting the principle of right, rather than than the spirit of party dictate to them the path they should pursue—the line of policy they should adopt. The motto of all should be their country's welfare, its happiness, order and prosperity. Again thanking them for the high honor which, though in the first instance conferred for by himself, was no less dear or less prized by him Mr. Flint took his seat amid loud cheers and applause.

MR. GROVER then came forward and thanked the electors for the manner in which they had supported him at the late contest.

Mr. Flint was declared elected by a majority of 702.

A vote of thanks was moved to the Returning Officer. Three cheers were then given for the Returning Officer, three for Mr. Flint, three for Mr. Grover, and three for the Queen, after which the meeting dispersed quietly. The most gentlemanly and courteous attention was paid to the different addressers.

The returns will appear next week.

CRICKETANA.—We owe our cricketing friends an apology for not hitherto noticing the excellent match played this summer, one of the best of which came off on Friday last. We had not the pleasure of witnessing the game, but are pleased to learn that some really fine cricketing was displayed on both sides, as the scores appended will show.

The club has already played four matches of the kind Volunteers vs Civilians all members of the P. C. C., during the season — the civilians winning the two first the Garrison the third, and the civilians have now again carried the day. We understand a very fine prize, a silver plated Ice Jug has been offered for competition in these matches, to be won by the batsman having the largest average at the close of the season, which no doubt has had its effect in the large scores credited to some of the players.

On the part of the Civilians Yorker and Loucks contributed very largely, and for the Volunteers Sgt. Wright ton and Privates Clementi and Higginson made handsome figures. The analysis of the bowling will show those scores were not made of loose play, as the number of balls bowled is well proportioned to the scoring. The ground was in excellent order and the day real cricket we than, but as we were not present ourselves, can do little more than give the score as follows:—

TO TEACHERS.

We have been requested to state, that the next monthly meeting of the Peterboro Teachers' Association, will be held in the Union School, on Saturday next, commencing at 11 a. m. It is hoped that there will be a good turn out of the teachers of the County.

BURGLARY.—A woman by the name of Mary Ann Dunn, who has been in the employment of Mr. John McPherson, a farmer in the Township of Cavan, has been sent to gaol at Cobourg, to await her trial for stealing a large quantity of clothing from him, to the amount of about $60.

ACCIDENT.—Between 9 and 10 o'clock, on Saturday night the 4th inst., a boy was frightfully mangled on the Grand Trunk Railroad, west of Port Hope, about two miles. One of his arms was almost entirely severed, his right leg broken in two places, and his head fearfully cut.

THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

New York, July 17.—Gen. Dix will arrive here in the morning. About 3 o'clock to-day the military were withdrawn from the scene of last night's fighting. Over 200 houses had previously been visited and a quantity of arms seized. Not a casualty has been sustained in the 7th Regiment. Gen. Kilpatrick had a long conference with Gen. Stanford to-day, understood to be in reference to the arrival of cavalry from Washington to patrol the city.

Gen. Standford has ordered all liquor stores in the vicinity of the Arsenal closed for three days. Cannon remain in that vicinity with a strong guard of infantry, but there is no probability they will have to be used.

A dozen persons who attempted to extort money from James B. Taylor, at his foundry in Georick street, were all arrested.

The military still hold possession of the Thirteenth ward on the east river. Efforts to effect the withdrawal of the troops from the Eighteenth ward failed, though recommended by the Governor.

It is positively known when the drafting will commence ,but it is intimated that when it does the government will not have less than 25,000 troops in New York. All is perfectly quiet.

New York, July 18.—The Era of the 17th says:—"On Wednesday the 8th, at 1 p. m. Gen. Gardner, the rebel commander at Port Hudson, surrendered unconditionally to Gen. Banks. The rebel army was drawn up in line, stacked arms, and Gen. Banks took possession of the place. 5,000 prisoners and 50 pieces of artillery and all the small arms, &c., have fallen into our possession."

A subsequent account states that Gardner sent a flag of truce to the 8th, asking for terms. Gen. Banks replied—"unconditional surrender, with twenty-four hours to consider." At seven o'clock in the morning on the 9th Gardner unconditionally surrendered. The moment the surrender was completed, the Confederates sent a request for 5,000 rations, as the garrison had eaten its last mule. This was found to be literally a fact. The news was brought to New Orleans by the flag-ship Tennessee. One hundred guns were immediately fired by order of Gen Emery. The loyal citizens of New Orleans were to have a torchlight procession, illuminations, and general jubilee on the night the steamer sailed. The "seconds" in that city are represented to rather gloomy in countenance.

The forces of the capture of Vicksburg reached Port Hudson on the 7th, encountering the greatest enthusiasm. No mention is made of any of Grant's troops reaching Port Hudson, and the capture must have been made by Gen. Banks and his little army.

A Vicksburg letter of the 7th to the Herald says that Gen. Sherman's corps crossed the Big Black river on the 7th, and came up with the rear-guard of Gen. Johnston's army in considerable force. They had quite a small battle and captured about 7,000 Confederates, consisting infantry, artillery and cavalry. Johnston continued his retreat across Pearl river.

Boston, July 18.—The Herald's correspondent gives the following account of the second day's fight on Morris Island:—

"On the morning of the 11th of July the 6th Connecticut and 9th Maine made a furious attack upon the Cumming's point battery, got possession of it and hoisted the American flag. At daylight Fort Sumter opened upon them, when a Pennsylvania regiment cowardly deserted them, refusing to stand by their comrades. The other regiments held the battery until they were badly cut up and then abandoned it, and the rebels took possession of it. These two regiments have shown themselves heroes in this campaign.

"At ten o'clock in the morning the monitors proceeded to attack Cumming's Point battery, and at twelve o'clock three of the wooden gunboats opened on the battery at long range and threw their 250 round shots directly into the works. Fort Sumter has been throwing shells into Morris Island, but without doing any harm to us. The cannonading ceased at 4 p. m. The monitors have been supplied with fresh crews from the different ships.

"The iron-clad Montauk has just arrived from Port Royal, and Lieut. Brooner, of the Housatonic, will take command of her. She is over the bar, making with the gunboats 14 vessels in front of Morris Island and Fort Sumter.

"We shall recommence the attack tomorrow morning, when we are sure of silencing the Cumming's Point battery and Fort Johnson. Everything is working well. The ball has opened in earnest.

"The Memphis has just brought in a Rebel side-wheel steamer loaded with cotton captured while trying to run out of Bull's Bay last night.

"Our troops will have their battery done in five days more, and then they can shell Fort Sumter."

New York, July 18.—Advices per the Fulton state that the result of Gen. Gilmour's operations, up to the morning of the 14th inst., are that he has possession of all the batteries on Morris Island, save Fort Wagner. It is reported that our iron-clads had made a breach on the south walls of Fort Sumter. On the 13th inst., 113 wounded Confederates were brought to Folly Island, many of them stating that they were forced into the Confederate service. They are Germans and will be sent north. Other advices per the Fulton are merely corroborative of the Boston Herald reporter's account.

TORONTO, PARK LANE—THAT WAY—} 18th July, 1863. }

To Paddy Mahony, Ould Dinny's Son, Patherboro, Kinnada West.

Well, astorach, afther all, blood is thicker than wather; and altho' you and I didn't part in the very best of frindship in consequince of that nonsinky afthroke you gave Cassidy, yet, I thought I'd let the warm sunshine of auld times swalla it up, and give you my right hand, ownt again, in this letther.

To begin, then, I arrived here on the thirteenth, afther havin taken the thrain out of my brogues, with a walk, from Port Hope, of about sixty miles, there bein no thrain on the day afore—Sunday. I just got in as the Orange procession was formin the Queen's Park; and I give you my word for it, that, such as they were, there was no small crowd o' them gathered in that same place. The divil a speck of green you'd see among them, barrin in the eye of Ogle R. and John Hilliard who very modestly, brought up the rare of the procession in conjuction with a very fat man that, from the steam that was risin from him, looked for all the world, like a cut of McAlather's insinsible pasperation man which you sometimes see on the fourth page of a country newspaper. Sorra such a hullabaloo you ever harde; and as for the music, it banged Bannaher. In throth, there was a little fella playin the file, and he blew at such a rate that his eyes were fairly curlin outside his head like a lobsther; while another chap rinted his spleen upon a big dhrum in a manner that caused the constant interference of a performer upon a thramindous base problem in brass, that he was completely dhrownded, and against whom he seemed to have a mortial grudge. To describe the diseases would be impossible. You may, however, fancy the whole park a sort of quilt wid the patchwork embracin every color from frogsgreen grey to the deepest scarlett. Pooty sowkins, Paddy, it was a quare turn out; and I could'nt help thinkin, that, there was a great dale of good farmin and honest labour diverted out of their legitimate channel to save the ends of lungry and designing politicians. Everything went off paceable enough nivertheless; although, a roger of the 30th thried his hand at raisin a little disturbance attendevenin, but he was obliged to give it up and take his heels.
